SYN.: chat, colloquy, communication, communion, confabulation, conference, converse, dialog, discourse, intercourse, talk. Conversation (Latin con, with) is, etymologically, an interchange of ideas with some other person or persons. Talk may be wholly one-sided. Many brilliant talkers have been incapable of conversation. There may be intercourse without conversation, as by looks, signs, etc.; communion is of hearts, with or without words; communication is often by writing, and may be uninvited and unreciprocated. Talk may denote the mere utterance of words with little thought; thus, we say idle talk, empty talk, rather than idle or empty conversation. Discourse is now applied chiefly to public addresses. A conference is more formal than a conversation. Dialog denotes ordinarily an artificial or imaginary conversation, generally of two persons, but sometimes of more. A colloquy is indefinite as to number and generally somewhat informal. Compare synonyms for BEHAVIOR.— PREP.: conversation with friends; between or among guests; about a matter.— criminal conversation, unlawful sexual intercourse: frequently abbreviated crim. con. — con"ver-sa'tion-a-bl(eF, [Rare.] Same as CONVERSABLE. — con"ver-sa'tion-al, a. Of or pertaining to conversation; as, conversational powers.— con"ver-sa'tion-al-ist, n. One who converses; especially, one who interests by his conversation; an able talker; converser. con"ver-sa'tion-istǂ.

They have a new term nowadays . . . for people that do a good deal of talking; they call them 'conversationists' or 'conversationalists'; talkists, I suppose, would do just as well. HOLMES Poet at the Breakfast-Table ch. 2, p. 52. [O. & CO. 1872.]

— con"ver-sa'tion-al-ly, adv.— con"ver-sa'tioned†, a. Possessed of manners; behaved.— con"ver-sa'tion-ism, n. An expression used in conversation; a colloquialism.— con"ver-sa'tion-ize, vt. [Rare.] To hold conversation.— con-vers'a-tiv(eS, a. [Rare.] Conversable; social: often opposed to contemplative.

2. Math. Of or pertaining to coordinates.

—coordinate geometry (Math.), same as ANALYTIC GEOMETRY. See under GEOMETRY.— c. clauses, propositions, terms (Gram.), clauses, propositions, or terms in the same sentence or statement that are of equal order or rank: opposed to subordinate. See CLAUSE; SUBORDINATE.— c. conjunctions (Gram.), those conjunctions that join coordinate clauses, etc. See CONJUNCTION. Coordinate (coordinating) conjunctions embrace (1) copulative, expressing addition or expansion (and, also, etc.); (2) adversative, expressing opposition (but, notwithstanding, etc.); (3) disjunctive, expressing exclusion (or, nor, etc.); (4) causal, expressing cause (because, etc.); (5) illative, or inferential, expressing consequence and inference (hence, therefore, etc.).— co-or'di-nate-ly, adv.— co-or'di-nate-ness, n.

co-or'di-nate, n. 1. One who or that which is of the same order, rank, power, etc. 2. Math. A member of a system of lines or angles by means of which, as elements of reference, position is determined in relation to certain fixed lines or planes.

The coordinates commonly used are as follows: (1) The Cartesian, the distances of the given point from each of two axes (measured parallel to the other) (see AXIS) or, in three-dimensional geometry, its distance from each of three intersecting planes parallel to the intersection of the other two. In case the axes or planes are at right angles, the coordinates are called rectilinear; otherwise they are oblique. (2) The polar, being the length of the line joining the given point with a fixed origin called the pole, and the angle made by this line with a fixed line passing through the origin. An extension makes this system applicable also to three-dimensional geometry.

3. Phon. A sound, as a stopped consonant having a formation similar to others of the same group.

—areal coordinate (Math.), the area of a triangle used to fix the position of a point. Three such are employed, having the point as their common vertex and the sides of a fundamental triangle as bases.— barycentric c., a triangular or a tetrahedral coordinate: so called because the point whose position is to be determined is always the center of gravity of bodies located at the fixed vertices and having weights equal to the value of the coordinate.— bilangular c., one of the two angles at the base of a triangle whose base is a fixed line and whose vertex is the point whose position is to be determined.— bicircular c., any coordinate in a system for determining the position of a point by the intersection of circles.— bilinear c., the distance of a point whose position is to be determined, from either of two fixed points. vectorial c.‡.— binary c., any coordinate in a system locating the position of a point on a plane, in which case only two independent quantics are required.— bipunctal c., the segment between a line and either of two foci on fixed parallel rays: used to determine the position of the line.— Cartesian coordinates, coordinates with reference to axes. See AXIS.— curve-c., n. A coordinate belonging to any system used for determining curves. — curvilinear c., any coordinate for fixing the position of a point on a curved surface.— elliptic c., either of two confocals whose intersection determines the position of a point in a plane; also, any one of the three similarly fixing a point in space.— external c. (Statist. Mech.), in a given system, a coordinate of an external body upon which the potential energy of the system is partly dependent.— generalized c., the value of a parameter in an equation of a set of surfaces, determining one surface of that set, and used with two other parameters to determine the position of a point by intersection.— geographical coordinates, latitude or longitude.— homogeneous c., a ratio of two coordinates, in a system where such ratios are used instead of the coordinates themselves. One more original coordinate is required than would otherwise be necessary, but the resulting equations are rendered homogeneous by the plan.— isothermal c., one of two orthogonal curves whose intersection determines the position of a point in a plane.— line-c., n. One of a system of six coordinates determining the position of a line in space.— orthotomic c., one of three surfaces meeting at right angles, and determining the position of a point by such intersection.— palpable c., any one of the generalized coordinates indicating the configuration of a system: so called because they are often the only coordinates that remain after certain substitutions in the Lagrangian equations.— polar c., the distance of a point from a fixed point (pole) or the angle made by the line connecting these (radius vector) with a fixed line: used together to determine position of the point in a plane; also, any one of three quantities (radial distance, latitude, and longitude) used to fix a point in space.— positional c., see under POSITIONAL.— projective c., a coordinate in any system that defines a point or a plane by the considerations of projective or graphic geometry free from all metrical elements.— quadriplanar c., the distance of a point from one of four fixed planes, measured in a fixed direction: used with the three other corresponding distances to fix the position of the point.— Rodrigues's c., the cosine of the angle of rotation about one of two axes through a fixed (stationary) point in a solid body: used together with other coordinates to define the position of the body.—spherical coordinates, distances measured on a sphere from axes which are great circles.— tangential c., one of a system of coordinates defining the position of a line in a plane or of a plane in space by points of tangency.— tetrahedral c., triangular c., see BARYCENTRIC COORDINATE.— trigonometrical c., a spherical coordinate.— trilinear coordinates, distances from the sides of a fixed triangle of reference.— vectorial c., same as BILINEAR COORDINATE.

co-or"di-na'tion, 1 ko-ôr'dı-nē'shən; 2 co-ôr'di-nā'shon, n. 1. The act of coordinating, or the state of being coordinate. 2. Gram. The part of syntax that treats of the combination of independent sentences into compound sentences. [< LL. coordinatus; see COORDINATE, v.] — co-or'di-na-tiv (es, a. Expressing coordination; coordinate.— co-or'di-na-to-ry, a. Pertaining to coordination.

Coorg, 1 kûrg; 2 co͞org, n. Same as KURG.

coor'gee, 1 kûr'gı; 2 co͞or'gē, n. [E. Ind.] A plow fitted with a drill for planting grain.

coo'rie, 1 kû'rı; 2 co͞o'rı, vt. Same as COWER, vt.

Coorn'hert, 1 kôrn'hert; 2 cōrn'hĕrt, Dirk Volckertszoon (1522–10/21590). A Dutch scholar, poet, and engraver; Creation of the World (7 plates). Corn'hert‡; Cue'ren-hert‡.

coo'rong, 1 kû'reŋ; 2 co͞o'rŏng, n. [Anglo-Austral.] An Australian tree (Frenela robusta) of the pine family.

coo'rong-ite, 1 kû'reŋ-ait; 2 co͞o'rŏng-ĭt, n. A mineral caoutchouc ($C_{10}H_{18}O$), found in Coorong, South Australia.

co"or-thog'o-nal, 1 kō"ər-thęg'o-nəl; 2 cō"ŏr-thŏg'o-nal, a. Cutting each other at right angles, as meridians and the equator cut smaller circles on a sphere. co-or"-tho-tom'ic‡.

Co'os, n. 1. 1 kō'os; 2 cō'ŏs. A county in northern New Hampshire; 1,812 sq. m.; county-seat, Lancaster. 2. 1 kûs; 2 co͞os. A county in S. W. Oregon; 1,578 sq. m.; county-seat, Empire City.

Co'os, 1 kō'es; 2 cō'ŏs, n. Bib. Acts xxi, 1.

Coo'sa, 1 kû'sə; 2 co͞o'sa, n. 1. A river in N. W. Georgia and N. E. Alabama; length, 250 m.; uniting with the Tallapoosa, forms the Alabama. 2. A county in E. central Alabama; 671 sq. m.; county-seat, Rockford.

Coos Bay, 1 kûs; 2 co͞os. An inlet on the coast of Oregon; lat. 40° 21′ N.

coose, 1 kûz or kōz; 2 co͞os or cōs. [Dial., Eng.] I. vi. To gossip; loiter. II. n. A gossip.

coot, 1 kût; 2 co͞ot, vt. [Eng.] To provide with a hip-roof, as a house or haystack.

coot, 1 kût; 2 co͞ot, n. 1. A fulicine rail-like aquatic bird having a shield-like extension over the forehead and lobate membrane to the toes. The plumage is of a uniform slaty color, with the edge of the wing whitish. Fulica atra is the European, F. americana the American coot. 2. [U. S.] A sea-duck, especially a scoter; as, the black coot (Œdemia perspicillata). 3. The guillemot (Uria troile). 4. [Brit. Guiana.] The purple gallinule. 5. [Colloq.] A common or stupid fellow; as, a poor coot. 6. [Scot. & N. Eng.] (1) The ankle. (2) A fetlock. (3) A trifle; a thing of little value. [ME. coote, prob. Cel.; cp. W. cwtiar, < cwta, bobtailed, +tar, hen.] cootet; cotet.

Coo"ta-mun'dra, 1 kû"tə-mun'drə; 2 co͞o"ta-mŭn'dra, n. A town in Harden county, New South Wales.

Coote, 1 kût; 2 co͞ot, Sir Eyre (1726–4/251783). A British general born in Ireland; governor of Calcutta; took Pondicherry; defeated Hyder Ali. [Ireland.

Coote'hill, 1 kût'hil; 2 co͞ot'hĭl, n. A town in Cavan county,

coot'foot", 1 kût'fut"; 2 co͞ot'fo͝ot", n. The red phalarope.

coot'le[1], n. [Scot.] A small wooden basin or bowl for kitchen use.

coot'le[2], 1 kû'tı; 2 co͞o'tı, n. [Brit. Soldiers' Slang.] A body-louse (Pediculus vestimenti): origin unknown. Perhaps related to Sanskrit kuti, body, or to Urdu khuthi, scab.

coot'le, 1 kût'ı; 2 co͞ot'ı, vt. [Scot.] To handle carefully or gently; treat affectionately.

cop[1], 1 kep; 2 cŏp, vt. [Dial., Eng.] 1. To overtop; excel. 2. To remove the top of; pollard. 3. To pile in a heap.

cop[2], vt. [Slang.] To arrest; take into custody; catch.— to cop it [Slang], to catch it. See CATCH.

cop[2], n. 1. The top or head of a thing, as of a hill. 2. The tuft on the head of certain birds. 3. The conical roll of thread formed on the spindle of a spinning-machine. 4. A cop-tube. 5. [Prov. Eng.] (1) A heap; mound; bank. (2) An enclosure surrounded by a ditch. (3) A peat wall. (4) A wooden knob on the top of a beehive. (5) A measure of peas in sheaves. (6) A stack of grain. (7) A drinking-cup. (8) A blow. 6. Golf. The top or face of a bunker. 7. Mil. A merlon: sometimes called cops. 8†. A spider. [< AS. cop, cp. G. kopf, head.]— cop'-dye"ing, n. The dyeing of yarn upon the cop.— cop-frame, n. A machine used for cop-spinning.— cop-reel, n. Weaving. A mechanical device which makes hanks out of yarn taken from mule-cops.— cop-spinning, n. A system used in worsted-spinning. — cop-tube, n. The tube on which the cop of thread or yarn is wound in a spinning-machine.— cop-winder, n. A machine for winding yarn from hanks upon a cop-shaped spindle for use in the weaver's shuttle.

Cop., abbr. Copernican; Coptic.

co'pa, 1 kō'pə; 2 cō'pa, n. [Sp. Am.] A tree-top used as a cop'a-bl(e), 1 kōp'ə-bl; 2 cop'a-bl, a. [Obs. or Rare.] That may be coped with.

co-pai'ba, 1 ko-pē'bə or -pai'bə; 2 co-pā'ba or -pī'ba (XIII), n. Med. A nauseous South-American balsam or resinous exudation from some species of Copaiva, used in affections of the mucous membrane. [Sp., < Braz. cupauba.] co-pai'vat; co-pay'vat.

co-paigue', 1 ko-pēg'; 2 co-pāg', n. A greenhouse twining

Co-pai'va, 1 ko-pē'və or -pai'və; 2 co-pā'va or -pī'va, n. Bot. A genus of trees, native in tropical America and Africa, of the family Cæsalpiniaceæ, having hard, durable wood. Several species yield copaiba. See PURPLEHEART. [NL. = COPAIBA.]

co-pai'vic, 1 ko-pā'vık or -pai'vık; 2 co-pā'vic or -pī'vic, a. Chem. Of, pertaining to, or derived from copaiba. co-pai'bic‡.— copaivic acid, a crystalline compound ($C_{20}H_{32}O_2$) derived from copaiba balsam by the action of alkalis.

co-pai'yé-wood", 1 ko-pē'yē-wud"; 2 co-pā'ya-wo͞od", n. The wood of a tree (Vochysia guianensis) of the family Vochysiaceæ, of British Guiana.

Co-pake', 1 ko-pēk'; 2 co-pāk', n. A village in Columbia county, N. Y.

co'pal, 1 kō'pəl; 2 cō'pal (XIII), n. A hard transparent resin used for varnishes. It is collected in the form of exudation from various tropical trees, or is dug from the ground in a fossilized state, that procured in E. Africa being most highly valued. See GUM. [< Mex. copalli, resin.]— chaeaze copal, a hard copal shipped from Zanzibar.— fossil c., same as COPALIN.

co-pal'che, 1 ko-pal'chı; 2 co-păl'che, n. 1. A Brazilian tree (Strychnos pseudo-quina) of the nux-vomica family (Loganiaceæ). 2. A Mexican shrub (Croton niveus) of the spurge family (Euphorbiaceæ). co-pal'chi‡.

co"pal-if'er-ous, 1 kō"pəl-if'ər-us; 2 cō"pal-lf'er-ŭs, a. Producing copal. [< COPAL + L. fero, bear.]

Beyond Muhogue all was jungle and forest, tall trees rising from red copaliferous sand.

R. F. BURTON Lake Regions Cent. Africa ch. 3, p. 61. [ʜ. 1860.]

co'pal-in, 1 kō'pəl-in; 2 cō'pal-ĭn, n. Mineral. A honey-yellow fossil resin ($C_{40}H_{64}O$) obtained from the blue clay of Highgate Hill, London, resembling copal resin. co'pal-inet‡; co'pal-ite‡.

co'palm, 1 kō'pām; 2 cō'păm, n. The sweet-gum tree, or the balsam obtained from it.

co'pang, 1 kō'paŋ; 2 cō'păng, n. [Malaysia.] A copper coin.

co-par'ce-na-ry, 1 ko-pār'sı-nē-rı; 2 co-pär'çe-nā-ry [-RIES, 1 -rız; 2 -rĭs, pl.] I. n. 1. Law. An estate in lands inherited by coparceners. This form of joint heirship occurs only among female inheritors in cases where the rule of primogeniture is observed among the males, as is usually the case in England. In law coparceners constitute but one heir, the rights of deceased coparceners descending to the heirs per stirpes. An estate in coparcenary often arises among males in consequence of inheritance by gavelkind. 2. Copartnership. co-par'ce-ny‡. II. a. Law. Of or pertaining to coparceners.

co-par'ce-ner, 1 ko-pār'sı-nər; 2 co-pär'çe-ner, n. Law. One of two or more co-heirs of an estate. [< co-¹ + PARCENER.]

co-part'‡, v. I. t. To share. II. i. To partake.

co'part", 1 kō'pārt"; 2 cō'pärt", n. One of several associated parts of a whole.

co-part'ner, 1 ko-pārt'nər; 2 co-pärt'ner, n. One who partakes with another; a sharer; specif., a partner in business.— co-part'ner-ship, n. The state of being associated with another or others in business or interest; partnership. co-part'ner-y‡.

cope[1], 1 kōp; 2 cōp, v. [COPED; COP'ING.] I. i. To contend or strive on equal terms; oppose or resist, as with equal strength: often with with; as, to cope with adversity. II†. t. To contend with; encounter. [Var. of COUP[1], v., and associated with COPE[3], v.] coupet.

Syn.: see CONTEND.— Prep.: with.

cope[2], v. [COPED; COP'ING.] I. t. 1. To dress in a cope or cloak. 2. To furnish with a coping, as a wall. 3. To form (a joint in a molding) without mitering, as in making a sash-frame. II. i. To form a cope or coping; bend or arch; especially, to bend over the end of an iron lodging-knee so that it may hook into the beams. — to cope off (Founding), to remove a part of a pattern buried in the cope of a foundry flask.— to c. over (Arch.), to slant downward from a wall: said of the soffit of a projection.

cope[3], vt. & vi. [Archaic.] To make return for; bargain; buy. [< D. koopen, buy, orig. bargain; cp. CHEAP.]

cope[4], vt. [COPED; COP'ING.] Falconry. To cut or clip, as the talons of a hawk. [< COUP[1], v.] cope[5], vt. [Prov. Eng.] To muzzle the mouth of, by sewing or tying: said especially of a ferret.

cope[1], n. 1. Anything that arches overhead; a coping.

He [Mr. Falkland] would remain for whole nights together under the naked cope of heaven. W. GODWIN Caleb Williams vol. i, p. 191. [ʜ. 1831.]

2. Eccl. A mantle semicircular in shape worn by priests or bishops on solemn or ceremonial occasions; also, a coronation, state, processional, or choral vestment often worn by laymen.

With a pedant of such magnitude, who would stake a kingdom for the cut of a churchman's cope. J. S. BLACKIE Lay Sermons ch. 8, p. 247. [a. 1881.]

3. A cloak or robe worn at the Convocation by university doctors at Cambridge. 4. The upper section of a foundry flask. 5†. A cloak. [< LL. capa, cape.] coopet; kopet.

Gentlemen of Queen Elizabeth's chapel wearing Copes. From a rare contemporary print.

— cope'schis"el, n. A chisel for use in finishing rough-cut grooves.— c.-cutter, n. Wood-working. The cutter in a tenoning-machine.— c.-ring, n. A device for carrying the cope in a loam-mold.

cope[2], n. [Eng.] 1. The tribute or lot formerly paid to the lord of the soil in lead-mines of Derbyshire, England. 2. A coper's wage. See COPER.

Cope[3], n. 1. Charles West (1811–8/211890), an English historical painter. 2. Edward Drinker (7/211840–4/11 1897), an American biologist and paleontologist. 3. Thomas Pym (8/211768–11/211854), an American shipping merchant and philanthropist.

co'peck, ko'pek, 1 kō'pek; 2 cō'pĕk, n. A Russian coin, the ⅟₁₀₀ hundredth of a ruble, worth from one-half to three-fourths of a cent. See COIN. [< Rus. kopéĭk.] ko'peck‡.

cope'cur"ley, 1 kōp'-kūr'lı; 2 cōp'-cûr"ly, vi. [Ir.] To turn a somersault.

Cope'land, 1 kōp'lənd; 2 cōp'land, Ralph (1837–10/211905). A British astronomer royal for Scotland; explorer and educator.

Cope'land Is'lands. A group of islands off the N. E. coast of Down county, Ireland.

co-pel'li-dine, } -dɪn or -dɪn, n. Chem. A liquid hydrite ($C_5H_{11}N(CH_3)(C_2H_5)$) of a collidin.

cope'man†, n. A chapman.

cope'matef, 1 kōp'mĕt; 2 cōp'măt, n. 1. One with whom a person copes or contends; an antagonist. 2. A colleague or partner; an ally; associate. copes'matef.

co"pen-ha'gen†, 1 kō"pn-hē'gn; 2 cō"pn-hā'gn, n. 1. A hot drink made of rum, whipped eggs, and sugar 2. A game in which a circle of players grasp a rope while one on the inside tries to strike or touch the hands of some player of the opposite sex in the circle. 3. A kind of snuff. [< Copenhagen, Denmark.]

Co"pen-ha'gen†, (Dan. Kjö"ben-havn', 1 kyū'ben-hāvn'; 2 kyū'bĕn-hävn'), n. A manufacturing seaport city on the N. E. coast of Zealand Island; capital of Denmark: bombarded by the British fleet, under Parker and Nelson, 1801, and Cathcart in 1807.

co'pe-pod, 1 kō'pɪ-pod; 2 co'pe-pŏd. I. a. 1. Oar-footed, as a crustacean. 2. Of or pertaining to the Copepoda; like a copepod; as, the copepod stage of a prawn. II. n. One of the Copepoda. co-pep'o-dan†.

Co-pep'o-da, 1 ko-pep'o-dä; 2 co-pĕp'o-da, n. pl. Crust. An order of entomostracans with a carapace covering head and thorax, foot-jaws, and five pairs of oar-like feet: including free-swimming and parasitic species, as Cyclops and carplice. [< Gr. kōpē, oar, + pous (pod-), foot.] Co-pop'o-da†. — co-pep'o-dous, a.

cop'er†, 1 kōp'ər; 2 cōp'er, n. [North. Eng.] A miner working at a certain price or cope per ton of ore; hence, a petty dealer.

cop'er, n. A vessel stocked with and supplying ardent spirits, etc., to the deep-sea fishers of the North Sea, usually in exchange for fish.

cop'er†, n. [Prov. Eng.] A dealer in horses on a limited scale.

co-pe"ri-od'ic, 1 ko-pī"ri-od'ɪk; 2 co-pē"ri-ŏd'ic, a. Physics. Going through a repeating cycle of changes in the same interval of time: applied especially to forces the increase or diminution in intensity of which is synchronous.

Co-per'ni-can, 1 ko-pūr'nɪ-kən; 2 co-pĕr'ni-can, a. Pertaining to Nicholas Copernicus, or to his theory of the solar system.

— Copernican system, the accepted astronomical system, first promulgated by Copernicus in 1543, which makes the earth revolve on its axis, and considers the sun as the center of motion of the earth and planets; the heliocentric system. C. theory†. — Co-per'ni-can-ism, n.

Co-per'ni-can, n. A supporter of the Copernican system.

Co"per-ni'ci-a, 1 kō"pər-nish'ɪ-ə; 2 cō"per-nish'i-a, n. Bot. A tropical American genus of handsome palms, including the wax-palm (C. cerifera). [< Copernicus, the astronomer.]

Co-per'ni-cus, 1 ko-pūr'nɪ-kus; 2 co-pĕr'ni-cŭs, Nicholas (3/19 1473–5/22 1543). A Polish astronomer. See COPERNICAN.

co-per'ta, 1 ko-pūr'tə; 2 co-pĕr'tä, n. [It.] Ceram. A varnish-like glazing for Italian majolicas, which enhances the vividness of the colors.

cope'stone", 1 kōp'stōn"; 2 cōp'stōn", n. The top stone of a wall; one of the stones of a coping. [phase.

co-pha'sal, 1 kō-fē'zəl; 2 cō-fā'sal, a. With or in the same cop'head", 1 kep'hed"; 2 cŏp'hĕd", n. 1. A crest of feathers or tuft of hair on the head of a bird or an animal; a crested head. 2. [Dial., Eng.] A pointed or peaked head. [< COP², n., + HEAD.]

Co-phet'u-a, 1 ko-fet'yu-ə; 2 co-fĕt'yu-a, n. In Percy's Reliques, an African king who marries a beggar maid named Penelophon. His story is told in Tennyson's Beggar Maid.

co-pho'sis, 1 ko-fō'sɪs; 2 co-fō'sis, n. Med. Deafness; loss of hearing. [< Gr. kōphōsis, < kōphos, deaf, < koptō, smite.]

cop'house", 1 kop'haus"; 2 cŏp'hous", n. A tool-house.

Copht, 1 keft; 2 cŏft, n. Same as COPT.

Co-phyl'i-dæ, 1 ko-fɪl'ɪ-dē; 2 co-fĭl'i-dē, n. pl. Herp. A family of toad-like firmisternial amphibians with teeth in the upper jaw, no precoracoids, and dilated sacral diapophyses. Coph'y-la, n. (t. g.) [< Gr. kōphos; see COPHOSIS.] — coph'y-lid, n. — coph'y-loid, a. & n.

cop'u-la, 1 kop'yu-lə; 2 cŏp'yu-la, n. [-LAS OR -LÆ, 1 -lī; 2 -lē, pl.] 1. Gram. & Logic. The word or bond that unites, or expresses the relation between, the subject and the predicate of a sentence or proposition. In English the copula, according to the most common view, is always the present tense indicative of the verb to be, either with or without the negative particle. In languages generally it is either found in the verb to be, in some cognate verb, as in Greek, in the verbs signifying become, begin to be, etc., or is implicated in any other verbal form embracing also a predicate; as, "the eagle flies," equivalent to "the eagle is flying."

The verb be, because of its connective use, has often been called the copula, . . . linking the essential subject with the predicate nominative. . . . It must not be forgotten, however, that the verb be when called the copula is still a verb, and is still the predicate verb. J. C. FERNALD Working Grammar of the Eng. Lang. p. 291. [F. & W. '08.]

cop'y-ist, 1 kop'i-ist; 2 cŏp'y-ist, n. One whose business it is to copy or transcribe; also, a mere imitator.

The copyist grew so weary of his labor as to write on without the least attention to the sense or meaning. PERCY Reliques adv. to fourth ed., p. 25. [R. & S. 1869.]

cop'y-right", n. Law. The exclusive legal right of authors, composers, playwrights and artists to publish and dispose of their several works for a limited time.

The copyright law of the United States was first passed May 31, 1790. The present law requires the author or artist, in order to secure copyright for works reproduced for sale, to publish the work with a copyright notice containing the name of the owner, and promptly after publication, to send to the Copyright Office, Library of Congress, Washington, D. C., two copies of the work, with an application for registration stating to which class it belongs, and a money-order for the statutory registration fee of $1. For photographs, the fee, where a certificate of registration is not demanded, is 50 cents. The Copyright Act of England (1911) extends the right for the life of the author and for a period of fifty years after his death. In the United States the Copyright Act passed July 1, 1909, makes the term of copyright 28 years with the right of renewal for 28 years on application within one year prior to the expiration of the existing term, with a corresponding renewal-right covering copyrights granted under previous statutes. By this act, a foreigner may obtain copyright in the United States: provided, (1) that in the case of a book, photograph, chromo, or lithograph the copies deposited shall be printed from type set in the United States, or from plates made therefrom, or from negatives or drawings on stone made in the United States, or from transfers made therefrom; (2) when he shall be domiciled within the United States at the time of the first publication of his work; or (3) when the nation or state of which he is a subject or citizen grants to citizens of the United States the benefit of copyright on substantially the same basis as to its own citizens, or copyright protection substantially equal to the protection secured to such foreign author under this act or by treaty; or when such foreign state or nation is a party to an international agreement which provides for reciprocity in the granting of copyright, by the terms of which agreement the United States may, at its pleasure, become a party thereto. Publication of the work with the notice of copyright required by this act initiates copyright. By an amendment to the copyright law, in effect March 3, 1921, an ad interim copyright which endures for four months may be obtained for a book first published abroad in the English language, provided that one complete copy of the foreign edition be deposited in the copyright office not later than sixty days after its publication abroad. The British copyright law of July 22, 1902, defines musical copyright as the exclusive right of the owner of such copyright under the copyright' acts in force for the time being to do or authorize another person to do all or any of the following things: (1) To make any kind of copies of such musical work. (2) To abridge such musical work. (3) To make any new adaptation, arrangement, or setting of such musical work, or of the melody thereof, in any notation or system. It defines printed musical work as any musical work written, printed, or otherwise reproduced without the consent lawfully given by the owner of the copyright in such work. An act of Aug. 4, 1906, amending this law, imposes a fine upon a person convicted of knowingly violating it, and fine and imprisonment for a repetition of the offense. The Copyright Act of 1911 confirms the acts of 1902 and 1906. — international copyright, an arrangement whereby authors of those countries which are parties to it may copyright their works in any country included in the arrangement.

cor'dial-ize, 1 kôr'jəl-aiz; 2 côr'jal-īz, v. [-IZED; -IZ'ING.] [Rare.] I. t. 1. To bring into harmony; reconcile. 2. To make into a cordial. II. i. To become cordial or harmonious. cor'dial-ise‡.

cor'di-er-ite, 1 kôr'di-ər-ait; 2 côr'di-er-īt, n. Mineral. Same as DICHROITE or IOLITE. [< Cordier, French geologist.]

cor'di-es, 1 kôr'di-īz; 2 côr'di-ēş, n. A soft hat of camel's or goat's hair, or of wool.

cor'di-form, 1 kôr'di-fôrm; 2 côr'di-fôrm, a. Heart-shaped; cordate. [< L. cor (cord-), heart, + forma, shape.]—cordiform tendon, the central tendon of the diaphram.

cor-dil'la, 1 kor-dil'ə; 2 côr-dĭl'a, n. Coarse German hemp; torse. [< O. Sp. cordilla, dim. of cuerda, cord.]

cor-dil'las, 1 kor-dil'əz; 2 côr-dĭl'ąş, n. [F.] A kind of kersey.

cor"dil-le'ra, 1 kôr'dil-yē'rə or kor-dil'ər-ə; 2 côr'dĭl-yę'ra or côr-dĭl'er-a (XIII), n. [Sp.] Geol. The entire system of sub-parallel mountain ranges that borders a continent.—cor"dil-le'ran, a. Pertaining to the cordilleras.

Thus the Western Cordillera of North America comprises the Rocky Mountain chain, the Washington chain, . . . the Coast ranges, and other ranges of heights on the Pacific side.
DANA Geology p. 15. [r. & co. 1880.]

cord'ing, 1 kôrd'iŋ; 2 côrd'ing, n. 1. The arrangement or order of the treadles in a loom necessary to produce the required pattern. 2. The corded surface of a twilled fabric. 3. The stitching of cords on to various garments, as corsets, cloaks, etc.; also, the cord so stitched.

cord'ite, 1 kôrd'ait; 2 côrd'it, n. An explosive compound consisting of cellulose nitrate and a restrainer, such as vaseline, used chiefly as a propellant. [< CORD: from the appearance of the grains.]

cord'leaf", 1 kôrd'lif'; 2 côrd'lēf', n. [-LEAFS", pl.] Any plant of the restiad family.

Cor'do-ba1, 1 kôr'do-bə; 2 côr'do-bā, n. 1. A province in Andalusia, Spain; 5,299 sq. m. 2. Its capital. 3. A province in Argentina; 66,912 sq. m. 4. Its capital. 5. A town in Iloilo province, Panay, P. I. 6. A town in Cebú, P. I.

cor'do-ba2, n. A monetary unit of Nicaragua of the value of an American gold dollar.

cor'dol, 1 kôr'dōl or -dol; 2 côr'dōl or -dŏl, n. Chem. A white odorless, tasteless powder ($C_6H_4.OH.COO.C_6H_2Br_3$). used as a hypnotic and hemostatic. [< CORD + -OL.]

cor'don, vt. [Rare.] To twist into or decorate with a cordon.

cor'don, 1 kôr'dən; 2 côr'don, n. [F.] 1. A series or extended line, as of men or ships, so stationed as to prevent egress from or ingress to a place; as, a cordon of forts or sentries. 2. An ornamental lace, cord, or ribbon worn to secure something in place, for adornment, as an indication of rank, or used as a heraldic bearing. 3. The cord worn as a girdle by a Franciscan friar. 4. Arch. A molding or course of stones, usually horizontal, projecting slightly from the face of a wall; a string-course. 5. Fort. A coping projecting from a scarp-wall to hinder escalading. 6. Hort. A dwarfed tree trained to a single spurred stem for the development of fine fruit.—cor"don' bleu, 1 kor'dōṅ' blū; 2 côr'dōṅ' blū. 1. The blue ribbon of the order of the Holy Ghost, the highest order of the old French monarchy. 2. A person regarded as entitled to a badge of eminent distinction; specif., a first-class cook, particularly a woman cook.—c. rouge. 1. The red ribbon of the old French order of St. Louis. 2. One entitled to wear such ribbon.—sanitary c., a military line of sentries to prevent communication with an infected district.

cor"do-na'zo, 1 kôr'do-nä'zo; 2 côr'do-nä'zo, n. Violent autumnal storm of the west coast of Mexico; called in full cordonazo de San Francisco. [Sp., stroke with a rope; i. e., "a lashing with the rope-girdle of St. Francis."]

cor"don-nier', 1 kôr'do-nyē'; 2 côr'do-nyę', n. [F.] The cobbler-fish.

Cor'do-va, n. Same as CORDOBA.

Cor'do-van, 1 kôr'do-vən; 2 côr'do-van. I. a. Pertaining or belonging to Cordova. II. n. 1. A native or resident of Cordova. 2. [c-] Cordwain. 3. [c-] [Eng.] Horse-hide leather. [Sp., also cordoban; see CORDWAIN.]

cord'-peg", c.-sling, etc. See under CORD, n.

cor'du-roy, 1 kôr'du-roi or kôr'du-roi'; 2 côr'du-rŏy or côr'du-rōy', vt. To make into a corduroy road.

cor'du-roy, a. 1. Made of corduroy, as trousers. 2. Formed from logs laid transversely; as, a corduroy road. 3. Ribbed or corded, as corduroy.—corduroy road, a rough road, usually over miry ground, made of transverse logs touching one another.

Look well to your seat, 'tis like taking an airing
On a corduroy road, and that out of repairing.
LOWELL Fable for Critics st. 2.

Carlyle uses corduroy for a word as if the term were well known as early as Feb. 8, 1839; see Correspondence of Carlyle and Emerson, vol. i, p. 213: 'It is clear . . . that said highways are of the corduroy sort.' The use of the word in this sense dates far back of 1839. E. E. HALE Letter to Standard Dictionary May 19, 1893.

cor'du-roy, n. 1. A thick and very durable cotton stuff, corded or ribbed. 2. pl. [Colloq.] Trousers made of corduroy. 3. A corduroy road. [< F. corde (see CORD, n.) + du (contr. of de le; de (< L. de), of; le (< L. ille), the, + roi (< L. rex), king.]

cord'wain, 1 kôrd'wēn; 2 côrd'wān, n. Spanish leather made of goat-skin or split horse-hide, and used throughout Europe during the middle ages for the boots of the wealthy. [< OF. cordowan, < Sp. cordoban, < Cordoba.]

In gilden buskins of costly cordwain.
SPENSER Faerie Queene bk. ii, can. 3, st. 27.

cord'y, n. [-IES, 1 -iz; 2 -iş, pl.] A hat of coarse felt.

Cor'dy-ceps, 1 kôr'di-seps; 2 côr'dy-çĕps, n. Bot. A genus of ascomycetous fungi parasitic on the larvæ of insects or on certain subterranean fungi. On the former, they produce club-shaped, usually yellowish bodies bearing on one part conidia and on another perithecia. The cordyceps militaris, a common species, has orange-red stroma several inches high growing from the dead pupæ of moths lying on the ground. [< Gr. kordylē, club, + L. caput, head.]

cor'dyle, 1 kôr'dil; 2 côr'dyl, n. An African zonuroid lizard (genus Cordylus). [< Gr. kordylē, club.]

Cor"dy-li'ne, 1 kôr'di-lai'ni; 2 côr'dy-lī'nē, n. Bot. 1. A genus of shrubby palm-like plants of the family Liliaceæ, bearing spreading ornamental heads of long, narrow leaves and panicles of numerous white flowers. The perianth is tubulosely bell-shaped. All the species are natives of tropical parts of the Old World. 2. Same as TÆTSIA. 3. Any of several cultivated species of Tætsia.

cor'dy-lite, 1 kôr'di-lait; 2 côr'dy-lit, n. Mineral. A crystalline fluocarbonate of cerium allied to parisite, found in southern Greenland. [< Gr. kordylē, club.]

Cor"dy-lu'ri-dæ, 1 kôr'di-lū'ri-dī; 2 côr'dy-lū'ri-dē, n. pl. Entom. A family of dipterous insects.—Cor"dy-lu'ra, n. (t. g.) [< Gr. kordylē, club, + oura, tail.]—cor"dy-lu'rid, a. & n.—cor"dy-lu'roid, a.

cor'dy-lus, 1 kôr'di-lus; 2 côr'dy-lŭs, n. [-LI, 1 -lai; 2 -lī, pl.] Zoöph. A modified auditory tentacle, consisting of a solid axis of chordal endodermal cells. [< Gr. kordylos, water-newt.]

core1, 1 kôr; 2 côr, vt. [CORED; COR'ING.] 1. To remove the core or inner parts of; as, to core an apple. 2. [Rare.] To cut or carve out of the core or heart of something. 3. In founding, to cast by means of a core. 4. To salt (a herring) before drying.—coring out (Casting), the process of using cores instead of greensand blocks in making hollow castings.—coring up (Casting), the process of placing cores in position in a foundry-mold before putting the cape over it.—cor'er, n.

core2, n. 1. The central or innermost part of a thing; heart; as, the core of a rope, boil, etc.

Bethink! His great eyes see
The hearts of men unto their inmost core.
EDWIN ARNOLD Pearls of the Faith pearl v. st. 6.

2. The cartilaginous endocarp of a pome fruit, enclosing the seeds; as, the core of an apple or pear. See illus. under APPLE. 3. Figuratively, the most important part of anything; the substance or pith of a subject.

She could get to the very core of a thing, and her insight was like witchcraft. CARLYLE Reminis., Mrs. Carlyle p. 335. [L. 1881.]

4. Founding. A solid form, usually porous, placed in a mold, about which the metal is poured, so as to be cast hollow. 5. Elec. (1) The insulated conducting wires of an electric cable. (2) The iron mass or bundle of iron rods, etc., around which the wire is coiled in an electromagnet or armature. By its high permeance it concentrates and multiplies the lines of force, thus creating a more intense field. In some types of machines, such as converters and transformers, it often surrounds the wire coils. 6. Engin. (1) The round plug of rock brought out in boring with an annular drill. (2) A solid wall in the center of an earthen dike, through which water can not penetrate. 7. Archeol. A piece of flint, or similar stone, from which stone implements have been chipped. 8. [Local, U. S.] A disease that attacks the udders of cows. 9. [Prov. Eng.] A disease of sheep, caused by worms in the liver. 10. The center of any superficial area; as, the core of the plaza.

The old market-place [at Verona] . . . is so fanciful, quaint and picturesque a place . . . that there could be nothing better at the core of even this romantic town.
DICKENS Pictures from Italy ch. 9, p. 87. [r. & l.]

11. Arch. The central portion of a column or other structure. 12. Zool. The bony portion in the central part of the horn of quadrupeds. [<OF. cor, < L. cor, heart.— chambered core, a core of which the ends are each smaller than the center.— core'-bar", n. Founding. An iron bar, varying in diameter from 1/2 inch to over 1 foot, used in the making of a core, as of a gun.— c.-barrel, n. 1. A vertical iron tube wrapped with straw and coated with loam, used as a core in casting guns, and by the circulation of water cooling the gun from the inside.— 2. Mining. A wrought-iron tube having spiral grooves along its length, for the escape of water and loose earth, up which the core passes: used in connection with a diamond drill.— c.-bench, n. Founding. A bench where the small cores are made.— c.-borer, n. Mining. A type of machine used in deep boring, embracing the diamond and other drills.— c.-box, n. Founding. The box or mold in which a core is made.— c.-carriage, n. Founding. The car used to convey molds and cores to the oven to be baked.— c.-disks, n. pl. Elec. Disks of thin iron of which armature-cores are built up by stringing a number together on a central shaft and keying them with nuts. Upon this cylindrical basis the wire is wound.— c.-drill, n. Same as CORE-BORER.— c.-drilling, n. The method of drilling by which a core is extracted from the rock pierced, and the strata determined.— c.-extractor, n. Mining. An attachment to a core-barrel for loosening and raising the core.— c.-lifter, n. An instrument used to bring up the core left by an annular bit in a boring.— c. loss (Elec.), energy dissipated by hysteresis and by eddy currents within the magnetic field of an alternating-current generator or dynamo.— c.-machine, n. Founding. A hand-operated machine used in foundries, which presses prepared sand into forms suitable for cores.— c.-peg, n. A bar or peg which holds together the several parts of a core which are placed on it and then fastened together.— c.-piece, n. The core of a rope; the yarn run through its center to make it firm.— c.-plate, n. A tubular plate made of thin cast iron used as a framework for large cores.— c.-print, n. In casting, a piece projecting from a pattern, by which the end of the core is supported.— c. ratio, the ratio between the diameter of the insulator in a cable and the mean diameter of the strand.— c.-ring, n. An annular piece of cast iron used as a support for a core. It melts when the metal is poured over it and becomes incorporated in the core.— c.-trestle, n. A trestle, usually made of metal having at the top V-shaped bearings, for supporting a core-bar while it is being shaped.— c.-tube, n. 1. Same as CORE-BARREL, 2. 2. A tube forming the inner wall of a built-up gun.— c.-valve, n. A rotary plug valve.— c.-vent, n. Founding. An opening in a core to allow the escape of air and gases.— c.-wheel, n. A wheel having a metal center and rim with cavities into which cogs may be driven or in which gear-teeth may engage.— hard c. (Civil Engin. & Arch.), hard material broken into pieces for use as a bottom layer in making roads, etc.— Krigik's c. (Elec.), a movable core of iron for use in magnetizing coils so shaped as to be attracted with approximate uniformity through a considerable range of positions.— laminated c. (Elec.), a core of an armature, induction coil, etc., made up of plates more or less perfectly insulated from each other by thin layers of shellacked paper, etc., thus preventing loss of efficiency due to eddy currents.— ribbon c. (Elec.), a core composed of iron ribbon to secure lamination and obviate eddy currents.

Cor'c, 1 kôr'ı or kō'rı; 2 cōr'e or cō're, n. Bib. Jude 11.

cor'e-, 1 kor'ı-; 2 cŏr'e-. From Greek korĕ, the pupil of the eye: a combining form.

Words beginning with this prefix will be found in alphabetical place, either singly or in groups.

Co-re'a, Corean, n. Same as KOREA, etc.

co"re-ces'sive, 1 kō"rı-ses'ıv; 2 cō"re-cĕs'ıv, a. Biol. In Mendelian inheritance, having two synthetic factors both absent: opposed to condominant.

co"re-cip'ro-cal, 1 kō"rı-sip'ro-kəl; 2 cō"re-çĭp'ro-cal, a. Reciprocal one to another.

cor"e-cli'sis, n. Surg. Permanent closure or obliteration of the pupil of the eye. cor"o-clei'sis‡; cor"o-cli'sis‡.— co-rec'ta-sis, n. Surg. Dilatation of the pupil of the eye.— co-rec'tome, n. Surg. An instrument used to make an incision through the iris, for the purpose of forming an artificial pupil.— co-rec'to-my, n. Surg. An operation for the formation of an artificial pupil, by incision, either with or without loss of substance in the iris. cor"ec-to'mi-a‡; co-rec'to-my‡; cor"o-to'mi-a‡.— cor"ec-to'pi-a, n. Surg. A displacement of the pupil, whereby it is not in the center of the iris.

cored, 1 kōrd; 2 cōrd, a. 1. Veter. Having core, the disease. 2. Having a core.— cored carbon (Elec.), a carbon used for arc lamps having a core of soft material so that the cupping due to arcing will be central.— c. shot, a cast projectile with the hollowed portion smaller than that of the usual shell.

cor"e-di-al'y-sis, 1 kor'ı-dıal'ı-sıs; 2 cōr'e-dı-ăl'y-sis, n. Surg. The separation of the iris from its surrounding attachments for the formation of an artificial pupil.

co-re'gent, 1 kō-rī'jent; 2 cō-rē'ĝent, n. A joint regent.

co-reg'nan-cy, co"reg-na'tion, etc. See co-[1], prefix.

Cor"e-go'nus, 1 kor'ı-gō'nus; 2 cōr'e-ĝō'nŭs, n. Ich. A genus of Salmonidæ with very small mouth, toothless jaws, and short thick gill-rakers, containing the whitefishes, about 40 species of which inhabit cool inland waters in the northern hemisphere, and are among the most important of food-fishes.

co're-ine, 1 kō'rı-in; 2 cō're-ın, n. A coal-tar dye obtained from the amid of dihydroxybenzoic acid.

co-rel'a-tive, } 1 kō-rel'ə-tiv; 2 cō-rĕl'a-tĭv, a. Having co-rel'a-tiv*, } connection or relation; connected. Compare CORRELATIVE.

Co-relative with the assertion, 'There is a foolish God,' is the assertion, 'There is a brutish man.' RUSKIN Modern Painters vol. v, p. 362. [w. a s. 1858.]

— co"re-la'tion, n. A relation or connection, as of one thing with another.— co-rel'a-tiv(e-ly*, adv. In connection or relation; as, vigorous exercise should be taken correlatively with hard study.

core'less, 1 kōr'les; 2 cōr'lĕs, a. Without a core; hence, figuratively, without strength; impotent; purposeless; lacking in spirit.

co"re-lig'ion-ist, 1 kō"rı-lij'ən-ist; 2 cō"re-lĭĝ'on-ĭst, n. One of the same religion, or of the same church or sect, as another. co"re-lig'ion-a-ry‡; cor"re-lig'ion-ist‡.

co-rel'la, 1 ko-rel'ə; 2 co-rĕl'a, n. The crested parrakeet (Kymphicus noræ-hollandiæ) of Australia. [< Gr. korĕ, doll.]

Co-rel'la, 1 ko-rel'ya; 2 co-rĕl'yä, n. A town in Bohol, P. I.

Co-rel'li, 1 ko-rel'lī; 2 co-rĕl'lī, n. 1. Arcangelo (1653-1/18 1713), an Italian composer and violinist; Concerti Grossi, etc. 2. Marie (1864-1911924), a novelist of Italian and Scotch parentage; Romance of Two Worlds, etc.; adopted by Dr. Charles Mackay.

co-rel'y-sis, 1 ko-rel'ı-sıs; 2 co-rĕl'y-sis, n. Surg. The operation of separating adhesions between the pupillary margin of the iris and the capsule of the crystalline lens.

cor"e-mor-pho'sis, 1 kor'ı-mor-fō'sıs; 2 cōr'e-mōr-fō'sis, n. Surg. The operation for forming an artificial pupil for the eye. [< CORE- + MORPHOSIS.]

cor"en-cli'sis, 1 kor'en-klıı'sıs; 2 cōr'ĕn-clī'sis, n. Surg. The operation for forming an artificial pupil by drawing part of the iris through an incision in the cornea and cutting it off.

Co"ren-tyn', 1 kō"ren-tain'; 2 cō"rĕn-tŷn', n. A river in South America; separates British and Dutch Guiana; navigable 150 m.

Co-ren'zi-o, 1 ko-ren'zı-ō; 2 co-rĕn'zi-ō, Belisario (1588?-1643). A Greek painter; Feeding of the Five Thousand, etc.

co're-oid, 1 kō'rı-oid; 2 cō're-ŏid, a. Of or pertaining to the Coreidæ.

Co"re-ol'de-a, 1 kō"rı-ol'dı-ə; 2 cō"re-ŏl'de-a, n. pl. Entom. A superfamily of trochalopodous bugs with metathoracic epimera laminate and antennæ entirely uncovered and before the eyes. [< COREUS + -OID.]— co"re-ol'de-an, a. & n.

Co're-o-Jap'a-nese', 1 kō'rı-ō-jap'ə-nīs' or -nīz'; 2 cō're-ō-jăp'a-nēs' or -nēs', n. The linguistic stock of the Mongolian group which includes Korean, Japanese and Luchuan.

cor"e-om'e-ter, 1 kor'ı-əm'ı-tər; 2 cōr'e-ŏm'e-tēr, n. An optical instrument for measuring the pupil of the eye. [< CORE- + -METER.]

Co"re-op'sis, 1 kō'rı-op'sıs; 2 cō"re-ŏp'sis, n. Bot. 1. A large genus of mainly North-American and South-African herbs of the aster family, with generally opposite leaves and large pedunculate heads of commonly showy yellow or rose-colored flowers. Several species are cultivated for ornament. 2. [c-] A plant of this genus. [< Gr. koris, bedbug, + opsis, resemblance.] [to coreplasty.

cor"e-plas'tic, 1 kor'ı-plas'tık; 2 cōr'e-plăs'tĭc, a. Relating cor'e-plas"ty, 1 kor'ı-plas'tı; 2 cōr'e-plăs'ty, n. Surg. Any operation for producing an artificial pupil. [< CORE- + -PLASTY.]

cor'er, 1 kōr'ər; 2 cōr'er, n. An instrument or machine for removing the core from fruit.

cor'e-ses, 1 ker'e-sız; 2 cōr'e-sēs, n. pl. Bot. Dark-red, broad, disk-shaped bodies found under the skin of grapes. [< Gr. koris, bedbug.]

co"re-sid'u-al, 1 kō'rı-zid'yu-əl; 2 cō"re-ŝĭd'yu-al, n. Math. A point on a cubic curve so related to any system of four points that, when any conic is described through such points, the coresidual lies on a common chord of the cubic and the conic. [< CO-[2] + RESIDUAL.]

Core Sound. A body of water on the coast of North Carolina; 35 by 2 to 5 m.

co"re-spon'dent, 1 kō"rı-spən'dent; 2 cō"re-spŏn'dĕnt, n. Law. 1. One of several defendants to a chancery or an admiralty cause. 2. The person charged with being the respondent's paramour in a suit for divorce on the ground of adultery.— co"re-spon'den-cy, n.

cor-es"te-no'ma, 1 ker-es'tı-nō'mə; 2 cōr-ĕs'te-nō'ma, n. Pathol. Malformation of the pupil caused by growths on its margin. [< CORE- + Gr. stenōma, narrow place.]

co'ret, 1 kō'ret; 2 cō'rĕt, n. A pond-snail (genus Planorbis).

Co're-us, 1 kō'rı-us; 2 cō're-ŭs, n. Entom. A genus typical of Coreidæ, etc. [< Gr. koris, bedbug.]

corf, 1 kôrf; 2 cōrf, n. 1. The basket or box in which coal is carried from the working-place to the shaft. 2. [Local, Eng.] A measure of coal, varying from 2 to 3 1/4 hundredweight; formerly, also, a basket. 3. [Dial., Eng.] A floating receptacle for holding fish, etc. 4. [Scot.] A hut or similar building for temporary use. [Var. of CORB[1].] corvet.

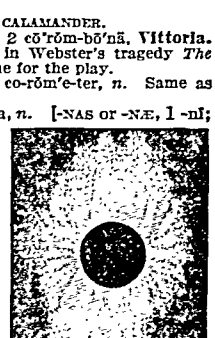
Some English writers use larmier, the French term for corona, in their works on architecture. 3. Anat. & Zool. A crown-like part or structure, as the body-wall of an echinoid or sea-urchin, composed of shelly plates. 4. Astron. A circle of light around one of the heavenly bodies; specif., the irregular radial streams of light seen around the sun during a total eclipse.



Solar Corona of May 28, 1900.

After a photograph made at Wadesboro, N. C., by the expedition of the Astrophysical Observatory of the Smithsonian Institution.

Within the corona, around the margin of the disk, variously colored prominences may be detected.

HUXLEY Physiography p. 367. [A. 1883.]

5. (1) A ring of light, or a series of such rings, usually showing prismatic colors, surrounding a luminous object seen through a medium containing very fine particles of solid or liquid matter; a diffraction ring; especially, in meteorology, a phenomenon as above described surrounding the sun or the moon when seen through a cloud or mist: distinguished from halo.

Coronas are due to diffraction; halos, to refraction and reflection. The positions and orders of the colors serve to distinguish the two phenomena. Coronas invariably show a brownish-red inner ring, which, together with the bluish white inner field between the ring and the luminary, forms the so-called aureole. If the other spectral colors are present they are arranged in an order the reverse of that seen in halo phenomena; t. e., in each sequence of colors violet is inside and red outside. Coronas are usually much smaller than halos, tho the variety known as Bishop's ring is about as large as the smallest ordinary halo.

(2) A phase of the aurora borealis in which luminous beams concenter in and radiate from one point of the heavens. 6. A halo in general. 7. Bot. A crown-like process at the top of the claw of some petals, as in the catchfly, or at the top of the tube of the corolla, as in jonquils. 8. A chandelier with the lights arranged in the form of a circle or cone. corona lucis‡. 9. A horizontal band or stripe surrounding the lower edge of a miter. 10. Helminth. The trochal disk of a rotifer. 11. Mus. A sign (𝄐) indicating a pause or a hold; a fermata: an old name. 12. [W. It was held a religious duty in all who could, to attend a corpse to the grave. GEIKIE Life of Christ vol. ii, p. 330. [A. 1880.]

2†. A living body. 3†. Eccl. An endowment in land. 4†. Alchemy. Same as BODY. 5†. The bulk or body, as of a science. [< F. corps; see CORPS.]

Syn.: see BODY.— corpse'can"dle, n. 1. One of the candles set about a corpse awaiting burial, especially at a likewake. 2. [Eng.] An ignis fatuus, especially in a churchyard, regarded by the superstitious as a portent of death.— c.-gate, n. A lich-gate.— c.-light, n. 1. A corpsant. 2. An ignis fatuus or corpse-candle.— c.-plant, n. The Indian-pipe.— c.-sheet, n. A winding-sheet; shroud.

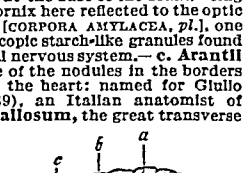
cor'pu-lence, 1 kōr'piu-lens; 2 cȯr'pū-lĕnç, n. 1. An undue accumulation of fat in the body, especially about the abdomen; obesity. 2†. Solidity of body; denseness. [F., < L. corpulentia, < corpus, body.] cor'pu-len-cy†.

cor'pu-lent, 1 kōr'piu-lent; 2 cȯr'pū-lĕnt, a. 1. Having a great excess of fat; very fleshy; obese. 2†. Dense; gross; stout; opaque. 3†. Corporeal; material. [F., < L. corpulentus, < corpus, body.] Syn.: adipose, burly, fat, fleshy, gross, obese, plethoric, portly, pursy, stout.— Ant.: bony, emaciated, gaunt, lean, poor, skinny, slight, spare, thin.— cor'pu-lent-ly, adv.— cor'pu-lent-ness, n.

cor'pus, 1 kōr'pus; 2 cȯr'pŭs, n. [-PO-RA, 1 -po-rȧ; 2 -po-ra, pl.] [L.] 1. A body. 2. Anat. (1) The entire body of an animal. (2) The main or chief portion of an organ. (3) An organ or part when nothing is affirmed of its structure or function. 3. Law. (1) A material object; especially, a corporeal property. (2) The elements or facts of a case considered collectively; as, the corpus of a crime. 4. Alg. A manifold of such a nature that its elements are representable by symbols which can be combined by addition, subtraction, multiplication, and division (except division by zero), every result thus obtained representing a definite element of such manifold.— corpora arenacea, minute sand-like granules existing in a psammoma, and occasionally in the dura mater.— corpora fibrosa, fibrous structures of occasional occurrence in the ovaries, regarded as due to a process of fibrosis taking place in the corpora lutea.— corpora flava, waxy or sandy nodular bodies sometimes found in the cerebrospinal nervous system, the result probably of a degenerative change in nerve-cells.— corpora geniculata, two rounded ganglionic bodies (distinguished as externum and internum) under the posterior end of the optic thalamus of the brain.— corpora Malpighiana, same as MALPIGHIAN BODIES.— corpora Morgagnii, same as HYDATIDS OF MORGAGNI.— corpora quadrigemina, four rounded eminences containing gray matter, found behind the third ventricle of the brain. See illus. under MEDULLA OBLONGATA.— corpora Santoriniana (Anat.), the Santorinian cartilage.— corpora versicolorata [Rare], the corpora amylacea.— corpora Wolffiana, same as WOLFFIAN BODIES.— corpus albicans [CORPORA ALBICANTIA, pl.], one of two rounded bodies at the base of the brain, being the anterior pillars of the fornix here reflected to the optic thalami.— c. amylaceum [CORPORA AMYLACEA, pl.], one of a great number of microscopic starch-like granules found in the substance of the central nervous system.— c. Arantii [CORPORA ARANTII, pl.], one of the nodules in the borders of the semilunar valves of the heart: named for Giulio Cesare Aranzio (1530–1589), an Italian anatomist of Bologna. See VALVE.— c. callosum, the great transverse commissure of the brain.



Corpus Callosum.
Horizontal section of human brain: a, corpus callosum; b, medullary substance; c, cortex; d, great longitudinal fissure dividing the two hemispheres.

cal'lo-sum†.— c. cavernosum [CORPORA CAVERNOSA, pl.], one of two rod-like masses of erectile tissue in the penis or clitoris.— c. ciliare. [CORPORA CILIARIA, pl.] 1. The ciliary body of the eye. 2. The dentate nucleus of the cerebellum or medulla oblongata.— c. delicti, the essential, fundamental fact of the commission of a crime by some one, without proof of which conviction can not be had. In cases of murder the finding of the dead body of the victim, as a fact conclusive of death, goes to prove the corpus delicti. Other facts, if conclusive of death, may establish it.

In the United States, the prisoner's confession, when the corpus delicti is not otherwise proved, has been held insufficient for his conviction.

GREENLEAF Evidence vol. i, p. 284. [L. B. & CO. 1857.]

— c. dentatum [CORPORA DENTATA, pl.], the dentate body. See DENTATE.— C. Domini, the festival of Corpus Christi.— c. fimbriatum (Anat.), a fringed band of white matter along the edge of the posterior pillar of the fornix; the fimbria.— c. Highmori, or c. Highmorianum, the mediastinum testis, a mass of fibrous connective tissue traversed by the seminiferous tubules at the posterior border of the testis: named for Nathaniel Highmore (1613–1685), an English physician.— c. interpeduncularе, the interpeduncular ganglion, a collection of nerve-cells lying in front of the pons Varolii in the brain.— c. Juris, the body of law.— C. Juris Canonici, the collective title of the decrees and canons of the Roman Church, constituting the standard of the canon law. See DECRETAL, n., 2.— C. Juris Civilis, or C. Juris, the collective title (first used probably in the 17th century) of the body of Roman law, comprising the institutes, the Pandects or Digest, the Code, and the Novellæ or new laws, of Justinian: promulgated A. D. 528–534.— c. luteum [CORPORA LUTEA, pl.], a yellowish mass formed in the ovary by the degeneration of a follicle after the discharge of an ovum.— c. mammillare, same as CORPUS ALBICANS.— c. mandibulæ (Ich.), the dentary bone.— c. mucosum (Anat.), same as RETE MUCOSUM.— c. nigrum [CORPORA NIGRA, pl.], the pigmented tissue at the edge of the iris, especially in the Equidæ.— c. pampiniforme, same as PAMPINIFORM PLEXUS.— c. spongiosum [CORPORA SPONGIOSA, pl.], erectile tissue surrounding the urethra in the penis.— c. striatum [CORPORA STRIATA, pl.], a mass of ganglionic cells at the base of either hemisphere of the brain. See illus. under OPTIC THALAMUS, under OPTIC.— c. subthalamicum, a brown stratum containing large nerve-cells situated under the posterior part of the optic thalamus of the brain.— C. Theodosianum, the Breviary of Alaric.— Galoisian c. (Math.), a corpus each of whose conjugates is identical with it: named after Galois (1811–1832), a French mathematician.

Cor'pus Chris'ti, 1 kris'ti; 2 cris'tī. 1. A festival held in honor of the eucharist by the Church of Rome on the first Thursday following Trinity Sunday. 2. A bay of the Gulf of Mexico in San Patricio and Nueces counties, Tex. 3. A city, the county-seat of Nueces county, Tex. [L., body of Christ.]— Corpus Christi cloth, see PYX-CLOTH.

cor'pus-cle, 1 kōr'pus-l; 2 cȯr'pŭs-l, n. 1. A minute particle of matter; molecule; atom. 2. Anat. A minute body; a cell, either free, as a blood-corpuscle, or in intimate connection with others, as a bone-corpuscle. Many of them are named after their discoverers. See MALPIGHIAN, and illus. under PACINIAN.

Red blood corpuscles [are] . . . disc-shaped smooth cells [which] . . . swim in immense numbers in the blood. LOTZE Microcosmus tr. by Hamilton and Jones, vol. i, p. 118. [S. & W. 1887.]

3. Bot. (1) Any oosphere in a gymnospermous archegonium. (2) Any of the connecting bodies between the retinacula which bear the pollinia of plants of the milkweed family. (3) Any protoplasmic granule of distinct shape or that fulfils a specific function, as a leucoplast. 4. Elec. Same as ELECTRON, 1. 5†. A corposant. [< L. corpusculum, dim. of corpus, body.] cor-pus'cule‡; cor-pus'cu-lum‡. Syn.: see PARTICLE.— articular corpuscle (Anat.), any bulbar nerve-ending found near a joint.— cancroid c., a cancer-nest.— colostrum c., any fatty globule found in colostrum.— corpuscles of Grandry, simple tactile organs found in the skin covering the bill and tongue of ducks and other water-fowl.— corpuscles of Hassall, concentric nests of cells found in the thymus gland: named after A. S. Hassall, an English physician.— corpuscles of Herbst, bulbar terminations of nerves in the skin of birds.— corpuscles of Krause, small, bulbar nerve-endings found in the conjunctiva, mouth, and genital organs: named after W. Krause, a German anatomist.— corpuscles of Meissner, tactile corpuscles of the skin of the fingers and toes: named after Prof. Georg Meissner, a German anatomist.— corpuscles of Miescher, protozoic parasites (Sarcocystis mieschcri), occasionally found in the muscles of animals: named after J. F. Miescher, a German pathologist.— corpuscles of Pacini, same as LAMELLAR CORPUSCLES.— corpuscles of Rainey, same as CORPUSCLES OF MIESCHER. — corpuscles of Vater, Pacinian bodies: named after A. Vater, a German anatomist.— fantom or shadow c., a red blood-cell which has lost its pigmentary matter.— genital c., any one of several bulbar nerve endings found in the genital organs.— germinal c. (Bot.), same as OOSPHERE.— lamellar corpuscles, certain flattened, laminated structures surrounding the ends of nerves in the hands, feet, serous membranes, and other parts of the body.— Malpighian c., see MALPIGHIAN.— Ruffini's corpuscles, organs of Ruffini, arborescent terminations of nerve-fibers, with varicosities and end-knobs, found in the subcutaneous tissue of the human fingers.— splenic c., any nodule of lymphoid tissue surrounding an arteriole in the spleen; a Malpighian corpuscle.— tactile c., any ellipsoidal body found in the skin upon the ends of nerves, in situations where the sense of touch is acute.— third c., same as HEMATOBLAST.— thymic corpuscles, same as CORPUSCLES OF HASSALL.— Traube's corpuscle, same as FANTOM CORPUSCLE.— washed corpuscles, the red blood-corpuscles removed from the blood by centrifugation after they have been washed with an 8-per-cent. sodium-chlorid solution.

cor-pus'cu-lar, 1 kȯr-pus'kiu-lər; 2 cȯr-pŭs'cū-lar, a. Of, pertaining to, or made up of corpuscles; molecular; atomic; as, corpuscular force; corpuscular matter. [< L. corpusculum; see CORPUSCLE.] cor-pus'cu-lous‡. — corpuscular philosophy, a system of philosophy, especially that form of it promulgated by Robert Boyle, which accounts for all natural phenomena by the motion, action, or position of atoms.— c. temperature (Physiol. Chem.), the energy of hypothetical corpuscular motion within an atom.— c. theory, see LIGHT.— cor-pus"cu-lar'i-ty, n.

cor-pus"cu-la'ri-an, 1 kȯr-pus'kiu-lē'ri-ən; 2 cȯr-pŭs'cū-lā'ri-an. I. a. Pertaining to corpuscles or to the corpuscular philosophy; corpuscular. II. n. An adherent of the corpuscular philosophy.

cor-pus'cu-lat"ed, 1 kȯr-pus'kiu-lēt"ed; 2 cȯr-pŭs'cū-lāt"ĕd, a. Furnished with or containing corpuscles.

cor-pus"cu-lif'er-ous, 1 kȯr-pus'kiu-lif'ər-us; 2 cȯr-pŭs'cū-lif'er-ŭs, a. Having or bearing corpuscles. [< L. corpusculum (see CORPUSCLE) + fero, bear.]

cor'rach, cor'rag(h), n. Same as CURRACH.

cor'ra-cle, n. Same as CORACLE.

cor-rade', 1 kə-rēd'; 2 cō-rād', vt. [-RAD'ED; -RAD'ING.] 1. Geol. To disintegrate, as rocks, either by solution or by solution combined with mechanical wear: said of rivers.

Streams of clear water corrade their beds by solution. Muddy streams act partly by solution, but chiefly by attrition.

G. K. GILBERT Geol. of Henry Mts. p. 101. [GOV. PTG. OFF. 1877.]

2†. To corrode. 3†. To scrape together. [< L. corrado, < cor- (< cum), together, + rado, scrape.]

cor-ra'dl-al, 1 kə-rē'di-əl; 2 cō-rā'dl-al, a. [Rare.] Radiating from or converging to the same point.

cor-ra'dl-ate, 1 kə-rē'di-ēt; 2 cō-rā'dl-āt, vt. [-AT'ED; -AT'ING.] To converge to a focus, as rays of light. [< COR- + RADIATE, v.] — cor-ra"di-a'tion, n.

Cor-ra'do, n. [It.] Same as CONRAD.

cor-ral', 1 kə-ral'; 2 cō-răl', vt. [COR-RALLED'; COR-RAL'LING.] [W. U. S.] 1. To drive into and enclose in a corral, as cattle or slaves.

Hundreds and thousands of slaves have been corralled at this point for sale. TISDELE Century Magazine Feb., 1890, p. 610.

2. Hence, to pen up, herd together, or secure in any way; capture; as, she corralled the children and took them away; the police have corralled the thieves. 3. To arrange in the form of a corral; as, to corral wagons. 4. To drive into a corner; press hard, as in argument.

cor-ral', n. 1. An enclosed space or pen to hold live stock. 2. A space enclosed by the wagons of emigrants or of a mule-train or ox-train, generally elliptical in shape, and open only at one end. It is formed usually at nightfall as a defensive precaution. See LAAGER. 3. A pen or enclosure made of palisades or pickets, used in Ceylon for decoying and securing wild elephants. 4. [Florida & W. Ind.] The pen near shore in which sponges are macerated. Usually corrupted into c'rawl. [Sp., < corro, circle, < correr (< L. curro), run.] kraal‡.

Corral for Live Stock, opening into a branding-chute.

cor-ra'sion, 1 kə-rē'ʒən; 2 cō-rā'zhon, n. Geol. The process of erosion by corrading. Compare EROSION. See CORRADE.

Cor're-a, 1 kər'i-ə; 2 cōr'e-a, n. Bot. 1. A genus of evergreen shrubs of the rue family, natives of Australia. A few species are common in greenhouse cultivation, especially C. cardinalis, with scarlet flowers. 2. [c-] Any plant of this genus. [< L. correus, partner.]

Cor-re'a de Ser'ra, 1 kər-rē'ȧ dē ser'rȧ; 2 cōr-rē'ä dę sĕr'rä, José Francisco (1750–or 1811823). A Portuguese botanist and historian; minister to the U. S., 1816.

cor're-al, 1 kər'i-əl; 2 cŏr'e-al, a. 1. Having joint guilt or obligation. 2. Rom. & Civ. Law. Pertaining to a joint obligation or engagement enforcible against any one of two or more joint debtors or by any one of two or more joint creditors. [< LL. correus, accomplice, < cor- (< cum), with, + reus, defendant, < res, thing, case.]— cor"re-al'i-ty, n. Civ. Law. The state of being correal: opposed to solidarity.

cor-rect', 1 kə-rekt'; 2 cŏ-rĕct', vt. 1. To set straight; make right; remove faults from; make conformable to the standard; rectify; as, to correct a statement; to correct a manuscript. 2. To remove or destroy, as an error, evil, or abuse; counteract, as something injurious or inconvenient; remedy; as, to correct a mistake. 3. To make true (a calculation, or an instrumental observation), by taking into account some necessary modifying factor; as, to correct barometrical data by temperature considerations. 4. To punish with a view to moral amendment, or to the removal of a fault; chastise; as, to correct a child with the rod. 5. To point out the mistakes of; set right; as, to correct a speaker. 6. Print. To change so as to agree with an emended proof; as, to correct a page or form of type. 7. Optics. To counteract the aberration of; render productive of a clear and achromatic image; as, to correct a lens. [< L. correctus, pp. of corrigo, < con- (< cum), together, + rego, rule.] cor-recte't; cor-rect'i-fy†. Syn.: see AMEND; CHASTEN; RECLAIM.— corrected establishment, same as ESTABLISHMENT OF A PORT.— cor-rect'ing-plate", n. A magnetic compensator.— cor-rect'a-[or -ı-]bl(e"s, a.— cor-rect'a-[or -ı-]bl(e-ness", n.— cor-rec'tant, a. & n. Corrective.— cor-rect'ing-ly, adv.

cor-rect', a. Free from fault or mistake; without falsity or error; in accordance with the truth; conformable to fact, custom, or other standard; accurate; exact; as, a correct style; correct behavior; the correct time.

Every one has heard of a 'bee-line.' It would be no less correct to talk of a wasp-line.
J. LUBBOCK Ants, Bees, and Wasps ch. 11, p. 322. [A. 1888.]

cor-rec'tion, 1 ke-rek'shən; 2 cŏ-rĕc'shon, n. 1. The act of correcting or setting right; the noting or removing of an error or fault; rectification; emendation.

The first step in correction is to learn our deficiencies. FARADAY Experimental Researches, Mental Educ. p. 485. [R. T. F. 1859.]

2. That which is substituted or offered as an improvement; an emendation; as, corrections on a proof-sheet. 3. The act or process of disciplining or chastening; punishment; as, to administer correction with the rod. 4. The act or process of removing or neutralizing any injurious or evil quality or condition; as, the correction of fermentation. 5. Math. & Physics. A quantity which must be added to a faulty result to make it correct; also, the process of correcting a faulty result; as, chronometer corrections. 6. Optics. The elimination of aberration from a lens, as an object-glass. [F., < L. correctio(n-), < correctus; see CORRECT, v.] cor-rec'cion†.— cor-rec'tion-line", n. [U. S.] Surv. A parallel used as a new base-line in the laying out of townships, in order to correct the errors caused by converging meridians, and preserve the required square.— c.-proof, a. Beyond correction; irreformable.— house of c., a reformatory or place of detention for young offenders, or for misdemeanants or persons convicted of a first offense.— optical c. (Arch.), the counteraction of visual contortion by modifications in a member or structure, as the slight swelling given to a column-shaft to offset an apparent concavity of line.— Poggendorf's c. (Physics), a correction made in mercurial thermometers to compensate for the increase in volume of the bore occurring with the rise of temperature.— special c. (Railroad.), alteration of first billing.— twilight c., see TWILIGHT.— under c., as being amenable to correction; as, I say this under correction.

cor-rec'tion-al, 1 ke-rek'shən-əl; 2 cŏ-rĕc'shon-al. I. a. Tending to or intended for correction or punishment; as, correctional courts, methods, or institutions. II. n. A house of correction.

As I passed into the interior of the correctional, I resigned my name. WM. BOOTH In Darkest England p. 60. [F. & W. 1890.]

cor-rec'ti-tude, 1 ke-rek'tı-tūd; 2 cŏ-rĕc'ti-tūd, n. [Recent.] Freedom from impropriety; correctness.

cor-rec'tive, } 1 ke-rek'tıv; 2 cŏ-rĕc'tiv, a. 1. Adapted cor-rec'tıvs, } to correct, emend, or set right; as, the corrective force of law.

ISAAC K. FUNK Next Step in Evolution p 62. [F. & W. '02.]

2. [Rare.] Limiting.— cor-rec'tiv(e-lys, adv.

cor-rec'tive, n. 1. That which has power or tendency to correct or counteract anything wrong or injurious. 2†. A limitation; restraint. SYN.: see ANTIDOTE.

cor-rect'ly, 1 ke-rekt'lı; 2 cŏ-rĕct'ly, adv. In a correct manner. SYN.: see ARIGHT.

cor-rect'ness, 1 ke-rekt'nes; 2 cŏ-rĕct'nĕs, n. The state or quality of being correct; accuracy.

Correctness of taste respects chiefly the improvement which that faculty receives through its connection with the understanding. BLAIR Rhetoric lect. ii, p. 19. [E. D. 1817.]

cor-rec'tor, 1 ke-rek'tər or -tor; 2 cŏ-rĕc'tor, n. 1. One who or that which corrects or emends. 2. Eccl. A supervisor or head, as of an order. 3. The governor of a Roman province, subordinate in rank to a consul or proconsul. 4. Med. A remedy; corrective agent. [L., < correctus; see CORRECT, v.]

— corrector of the press [Eng.], a proof-reader.— cor"rec-to'ri-al, a.— cor-rec'tor-ship, n.— cor-rec'tress, n. fem. cor-rec'trice†.— cor-rec'to-ry. I. a. Tending to correct. II. n. [-RIES, pl.] 1. A means or a place of correction. 2. Any one of several text-forms of the Latin Vulgate as emended during the 13th century.

Cor-reg'gio, 1 kor-rej'o; 2 cŏr-rĕj'o, n. 1. Antonio Allegri (1494–1534), an Italian painter; Ecce Homo dome-frescos in Parma, etc. 2. A town near Parma, Italy, where Correggio was born, lived, and died.— Cor-reg"gi-esque', a. Painted in Correggio's manner.

cor-reg'i-dor', 1 ke-rej'ı-dōr or (Sp.) ke-rĕ"hı-dōr'; 2 cŏ-rĕj'ı-dōr or (Sp.) cŏ-rĕ"hı-dōr', n. [Sp.] 1. The chief magistrate of a Spanish town. 2. In Spanish America, a similar magistrate whose jurisdiction extends over part of province.

Cor-reg'i-dor", n. A fortified island at the entrance of Manila harbor, P. I.; capital, San José.

cor-reg"i-mien'to, 1 ko-rej"ı-myen'to or (Sp.) ko-rĕ"hı-mi-ĕn'to; 2 cŏ-rĕj"ı-myĕn'to or (Sp.) cŏ-rĕ"hı-mi-ĕn'to, n. [Sp.] In Spanish America, the jurisdiction of a corregidor.

cor"re-late', 1 kor'ı-lēt'; 2 cŏr'e-lāt', v. [-LAT'ED; -LAT'ING.] I. t. To put in some relation of connection or correspondence; especially, to put in mutual or reciprocal relation; as, to correlate the parts of a watch; to correlate fossils.

The General Council . . . supervises and correlates the action of the various branches of government.
J. H. WILSON China ch. 12, p. 182. [A. 1887.]

II. i. To be related by connection, adaptation, or correspondence; as, the departments of government correlate. [< COR- + L. relatus; see RELATE.]— cor"re-lat'a-bl(e", a.

cor're-late, 1 kor'ı-lēt; 2 cŏr'e-lāt, a. Having mutual or reciprocal relations; related by interconnection or correspondence of some kind; connected by or in a system of relations; as, the correlate motions of the earth and the moon.

cor're-late, n. A correlative.

cor're-lat"ed, 1 kor'ı-lēt'ed; 2 cŏr'e-lāt'ĕd, pa. 1. Interrelated. 2. Math. Designating rigid bodies which maintain their originally parallel principal axes at the same inclination to the common axis of equal similar couples acting upon them in parallel planes: opposed to contrarelated, in which case the impulsive couples are opposite.

cor"re-la'tion, 1 ker'ı-lē'shən; 2 cŏr'e-lā'shon, n. 1. Mutual or reciprocal relation; a relation considered as connecting two or more persons or things in state or in operation, and either as matters of fact or as objects of thought; as, a correlation between social laws and religious beliefs.

The correlation of mind and brain do not involve their identity.
DRUMMOND Natural Law p. 224. [J. P. 1888.]

2. The act of bringing under relations of union, correspondence, or interaction; also, the conceiving of two or more things as thus related; as, the correlation of force and matter. 3. Physics. The interdependence of natural forces or phenomena. See CORRELATION OF FORCES, below. 4. Biol. The connection between parts of an animal or of a plant, or between their functions; as, the correlation of the muscles and bones. 5. Geom. (1) A relation between figures in a plane such that points in each correspond to lines in the other. (2) A relation between figures in space such that points in each correspond to planes in the other, and lines in the one to lines in the other. [< LL. correlatio(n-), < L. con- (< cum), together; and see RELATION.] — correlation coefficient (Biol.), the quotient of the average product of the deviations from the mean of two members of a correlated pair, divided by the product of their mean square variabilities.— c. of energy, the theory that the various forms of energy are so intimately related in one great system that each may in turn produce or pass into all the others. Compare CONSERVATION and ENERGY.— c. of forces, the interrelation of the various forces in which the energy of matter manifests itself. See ENERGY and FORCE.

cor"re-la'tion-ist, 1 ker'ı-lē'shən-ist; 2 cŏr'e-lā'shon-ist, n. One who believes in a doctrine of correlation; specifically, one who believes that all powers and forces are the development and the operation of one universal force.

cor-rel'a-tive, } 1 ke-rel'a-tiv; 2 cŏ-rĕl'a-tiv, a. 1. Hav-cor-rel'a-tıvs, } ing correlation; especially, mutually involving or implying one another; as, correlative terms. Compare CORELATIVE.

Formalism and indifference, pedantic scrupulosity and absolute disbelief are correlative, and ever flourish side by side.
FARRAR Life of Christ ch. 27, p. 174. [E. P. D.]

2. Gram. & Logic. Mutually related in significance; referring to each other; as, "either" and "or" are correlative conjunctions; "where" and "there" are correlative terms. 3. Geom. Designating corresponding figures; also, designating propositions formed from each other by changing the word "line" into "point," "intersection of lines" into "lines joining points," etc. — correlative conjunction, see CONJUNCTION.— cor-rel'a-tiv(e-lys, adv.— cor-rel'a-tiv(e-ness", n.— cor-rel'a-tiv-ism, n. A doctrine based upon correlations; specif., the theory of universal interrelation.— cor-rel"a-tiv'i-ty, n.

cor-rel'a-tive, n. 1. One of two or more persons or things united by reason of some natural relation or correspondence; as, father and son are correlatives. 2. Gram. Either of two correlative terms. 3. Physics. A correlated force. 4. Biol. A correlative form.— doctrine of correlatives, the doctrine advanced by Herbert Spencer that correlative terms must be thought together, because a correlative connotes a relation, a relation a correlate, and the correlates suggest the correlatives.

From Gr. kosmos, order; the universe: a combining form.— Cos-moc'er-as, n. Paleon. A genus of fossil ammonites from the Middle Oolite group of the English Jurassic.— cos'mo-chlore, n. Mineral. Crystals of silicate of chromium of the monoclinic type found in meteoric iron at Toluca, Mexico.— cos"mo-clas'tic, a. Composed of fragments of some extraterrestrial body; as, cosmoclastic rocks.— cos-moc'ra-cy, n. 1. The power of the associated peoples of the world. 2. Government by such power. P. A. VAILE in The Globe, New York, Oct. 6, 1915.— cos'mo-crat, n.— cos"mo-crat'ic, a.

cos"mo-ge-net'ic, n. Pertaining to the origin or genesis of the cosmos. cos"mo-gen'ic‡.

cos-mog'no-sis, 1 kŏz-mŏg'no-sis; 2 cŏs-mŏġ'nō-sis, n. The supposed world-knowledge or instinct of direction underlying the migratory and other movements of animals. [< Gr. kosmos, world, + gnōsis, knowledge.]

cos-mog'o-ny, 1 kŏz-mŏg'o-ny; 2 cŏs-mŏġ'o-ny, n. [-NIES, 1 -niz; 2 -nis, pl.] 1. A theory or account of the origin or present constitution and order of the world; a branch of cosmology; as, the Mosaic cosmogony; the cosmogony of Hesiod. The early Greek cosmogonies were fanciful deductions of all things from combinations of a few elements, or even from some single element, such as earth, air, water, or fire.

There are three general classes of cosmogonies—those which represent (1) the world as having existed in its present form from eternity, (2) the matter but not the form of the world as having existed from eternity (atomism, cosmism, evolutionism, etc.), and (3) both the matter and form of the world as due to a spiritual cause (creationism).

2. [Rare.] The creation or origin of the universe. [< Gr. kosmogonia, < kosmos, world; and see -GONY.]

— cos"mo-gon'ic, a. Of or pertaining to cosmogony. cos-mog'o-nal‡; cos"mo-gon'i-cal‡.— cos-mog'o-nist, n. One who holds a theory respecting the origin of the universe. cos-mog'o-ner‡.— cos-mog'o-nize, vt. [Rare.] To devise a cosmogony.

cos-mog'ra-phy, 1 kŏz-mŏg'ra-fi; 2 cŏs-mŏġ'ra-fy, n. 1. The science that describes the universe, including astronomy, geography, and geology.

Cosmography treats of the birth, cosmography of the description, and cosmology of the theory of the world.
K.-F. Vocab. Philos. p. 122. [SH. & CO. 1878.]

2. The science that treats of the relations of the different parts of the universe. [< LL. cosmographia, < Gr. kosmographia, < kosmographos, describing the world, < kosmos, world, + graphō, write.]— cos"mo-graph'ic, a. Relating to cosmography. -i-cal‡.— cos"mo-graph'i-cal-ly, adv.

cos'mo-labe, 1 kŏz'mo-lēb; 2 cŏs'mo-lāb, n. An astrolabe.

cos-mol'a-try, 1 kŏz-mol'a-tri; 2 cŏs-mŏl'a-try, n. Worship of the cosmos.

cos'mo-line, } 1 kŏz'mō-lin; 2 cŏs'mo-lin, n. A variety of

cos"mo-log'i-cal, 1 kŏz'mo-loj'i-kal; 2 cŏs'mo-lŏġ'i-cal, a. Of or belonging to cosmology or the science of the universe; also, and more specifically, pertaining or relating to the nature and laws of the cosmos as an instituted and alterable order of things; as, the cosmological argument; cosmological theory. cos"mo-log'ic‡. — cosmological argument (Theol.), the inference of the existence of God as the only conceivable explanation of the origin and development of the material universe. In its many forms this argument has emphasized either the derived or changeful, or dependent, or finite and temporal, or relative and phenomenal, or merely potential, character of the existing system of things, as proving demonstratively the need of God as First Cause.— c. proof, proof of the existence of God based on the principle of efficient causation: one of the three great scholastic proofs of theism.— cos"mo-log'i-cal-ly, adv. From the cosmological point of view.

cos-mol'o-gy, 1 kŏz-mel'o-ji; 2 cŏs-mŏl'o-ġy, n. [-GIES, 1 -jiz; 2 -ġis, pl.] 1. The general science of the cosmos or universe, in all its parts, laws, and operations, so far as these can be known by observation and scientific inquiry and may be regarded as constituting a cosmos: opposed to ontology. 2. Philos. The philosophical theory, or philosophy, of the cosmos. Called also rational cosmology. See PHILOSOPHY. Cosmology, in this sense, embraces the theories of cosmogony, of cosmology proper, of the systems of nature and the supernatural, and of teleology. Cosmology proper, in philosophy, bases its theories on the fact that the cosmos is apparently made up of matter and its phenomena and minds and their phenomena. The philosopher may accept (1) both facts entire (realism, dualism); (2) the distinct existence of matter alone (materialism); (3) that of mind alone (idealism); (4) the non-existence of both as substances (phenomenalism); (5) the unknowableness of both (agnosticism); (6) the practical non-existence of both, with reference of their phenomena to sensation (idealistic phenomenalism); (7) the identification of the two (monism, pantheism, etc.); (8) the absolute non-existence of both (nihilism); (9) the identification of pure being, as idea, with non-existence (Hegelianism). [< COSMO- + -LOGY.]— cos-mol'o-gist, n. An expert in cosmology.

cos-mom'e-try, 1 kŏz-mem'i-tri; 2 cŏs-mŏm'e-try, n. The measurement of the universe or of the world; specifically, mapping out by lines of latitude and longitude.

cos"mo-nom'ic, 1 kŏz'mo-nem'ik; 2 cŏs'mo-nŏm'ic, a. Pertaining to or derived from the laws of nature. [< COSMO- + Gr. nomos, law.]

cos"mo-path'ic, 1 kŏz'mo-path'ik; 2 cŏs'mo-păth'ic, a. Psychical Research. Open to the access of supernormal knowledge or emotion, supposedly from a preternatural world. [Coined by F. W. H. Myers.] [< COSMO- + Gr. pathos; see PATHOS.]

cos-moph'i-lite, 1 kŏz-mef'i-lait; 2 cŏs-mŏf'i-lit, n. A lover or admirer of the world in general. [< Gr. cosmos, world, + phileō, love.]

cos"mo-pho-nog'ra-phy, 1 kŏz'mo-fo-neg'ra-fi; 2 cŏs'mo-fo-nŏġ'ra-fy, n. A proposed method of writing all languages in a common phonetic alphabet.

Cos'mo-plast, 1 kŏz'mo-plast; 2 cŏs'mo-plăst, n. The Creator of the universe, regarded as its molder. [< Gr. kosmoplastēs, < cosmos, world, + plassō, make.]— cos"mo-plas'tic, a. Pertaining to the formation of the universe; cosmogonic.

cos"mo-pol-et'ic, 1 kŏz'mo-pel-et'ik; 2 cŏs'mo-pŏl-ĕt'ic, a. Capable of producing a cosmos; denoting the universal cosmic force. HUXLEY. [< COSMO- + Gr. poiētikos < poieō, make.]

cot'ton³, n. 1. The soft, woolly, fibrous material which is appendant to the seeds of the cotton-plant. The fiber, white or yellow, and from two-thirds of an inch to 2 inches in length, is contained in a 3- or 5-celled capsule or boll, which when ripe bursts open and allows it partially to escape. After it has been picked the seeds scattered through it are removed by the cotton-gin. The raw product of the plant is manufactured into cloth, thread, etc., and is commercially the most important of all staples. Cotton is commonly named (1) from the character of the land on which it grows; as, sea-island cotton, upland c.; or (2) from the country or place where it is produced or sold; as, Florida c., Pernambuco c.

2. The cotton-plant; cotton-plants collectively. See COTTON-PLANT, below. 3. Something manufactured from cotton, especially cloth or thread. 4. A substance of a downy nature. [< F. coton, < Sp. coton, < Ar. qutun, cotton.] cot'int; cot'ount.— absorbent cotton, purified cotton, used in surgery.— artificial c., a cotton-like substance made chemically from wood fiber by reducing it to a cellulose form.— blow of c., a cotton-field after the bolls have opened.— Cape c., a wild African cotton-shrub (Gomphocarpus fruticosus). See GOMPHOCARPUS.— corkwood c., the silky hairs covering the seeds of the West-Indian corkwood (Ochroma lagopus): so called in Trinidad.— cot'ton-a"phis, n. A plant-louse (Aphis gossypii) which attacks the cotton-plant during the early months of summer.— c.-bagging, n. A coarse hempen fabric formerly much used for packing cotton.— c.-ball clouds, a small variety of cumuli, cirro-cumuli, or alto-cumuli.— C. Belt, the cotton-producing area in the United States: chiefly the southeastern States.— c.-bird, n. 1. [S. Afr.] A titmouse (Ægithalus minutus). 2. [Brit. Guiana.] The white-shouldered ground-flycatcher (Fluvicola pica). [< white color.]— c.-blue, n. See table under BLUE.— c.-broker, n. See BROKER.— c.-bush, n. [Austral.] Either of two salt-bushes, species of Kochia, K. villosa, and K. aphylla; also, a tree (Bassia bicornis) of the star-apple family (Sapotaceæ).— c.-cake, n. Cottonseed-meal pressed into cakes after the oil has been removed.— c.-caterpillar, n. The larva of the noctuid moth, Alabama argillacea. It is very injurious to the cotton-plant.— c. chain (Textile), cheap cotton-warp ingrain.— c.-chopper, n. An instrument for thinning out cotton-plants so as to leave them in hills.— c.-cleaner, n. See COTTON-PICKER.— c. crops [Cant], the three pickings of the crop: the first pickings are called the bottom c.; the second and largest pickings, the middle c.; and the third or last, the top c. When four or more pickings are made the second and third form the so-called middle c., the top being the fourth.— c.-cultivator, n. A wheelless cultivator with expansible frame and three shares.— c.-cylinder, n. A roller for drawing in cotton-fibers.— c.-factor, n. See FACTOR.— c.-floater, n. An india-rubber bale-cover for use in floating cotton down rivers.— c.-grass, n. One of various sedges of the genus Eriophorum. c.-rush‡; c.-sedge‡.— c. lord, one who has grown rich by manufacturing, growing, or dealing in cotton.— c.-machine, n. See MACHINE.— c.-meal, n. Same as COTTONSEED-MEAL.— c.-mill, n. See MILL. c.-manufactory‡.— c.-mouse, n. [U. S.] A variety of the white-footed field-mouse (Hesperomys leucopus, var. gossypinus), injurious to cotton-plants.— c.-opener, n. A machine for opening bale-cotton, shaking, blowing, and cleaning it.— c.-picker, n. 1. A machine for further opening and cleansing cotton as it comes from the cotton-opener. 2. Same as PICKER.— c.-plant, n. One of various plants of the genus Gossypium; especially, the long-staple or sea-island cotton (G. barbadense), grown on the islands along the coast and on the coast of South Carolina and Georgia, and the short-staple or upland cotton (G. herbaceum). Naturally it is perennial and somewhat shrubby, but it is planted annually. The cotton-plant is subject to various diseases, as anthracnose, black rust, boll rot, frosty mildew, etc. c.-shrub‡.— c.-planter, n. 1. A grower of cotton. 2. See PLANTER.— c.-plow, n. See PLOW.— c. plush, a material having a longer pile than cotton velvet, but otherwise exactly like it.— c.-powder, n. An explosive prepared from guncotton.— c.-press, n. See PRESS.— c.-rat, n. A large field-mouse (Sigmodon hispidus) common in the cotton-growing districts of the United States.— c. rep, a heavy cotton material for linings.— c.-rib, n. A variety of corduroy.— c.-rock, n. 1. Mineral. Decomposed chert. 2. [Local, U. S.] Geol. The superficial stratum of limestone, generally soft, and often earthy, which overlies such portions of southern Missouri and northern Arkansas as have not been strewn with eruptive material.— c.-rose, n. Cudweed (Gifola germanica), a naturalized European low woolly herb in fields and by roadsides.— c.-scale, n. A bark-louse (Pulvinaria innumerabilis), infesting the cotton-plant.— c.-scraper, n. See SCRAPER.— cotton-seed, n. The seed of the cotton-plant.— cot'ton-seed-meal", n. The ground cottonseed from which the oil has been expressed, used in feeding cattle and as a fertilizer. c.-meal‡.— cot'ton-seed-mill", n. See MILL.— cot'ton-seed-oil", n. See in table under OIL.— c. snout-moth, a tortricid moth, Platynota rostrana, whose larva feeds on the leaves of the cotton-plant.— c.-spinner, n. 1. A spinner of cotton; a cotton-thread manufacturer. 2. One of the echinoderms (Holothuria forskali) that exudes sticky white threads when subjected to irritation.— c.-spirits, n. Dyeing. A mordant used on cotton: generally a solution of stannic chlorid.— c.-stainer, n. A pyrrhocorid, the redbug (Dysdercus suturellus), that stains growing cotton an indelible red or yellow.— C. State, Alabama, the chief American cotton-producing State.— c.-sugar, n. Chem. Raffinose.— c.-sweep, n. A small plow used in tilling cotton.— c.-thief, n. [Ceylon.] A paradise flycatcher in the full white plumage.— c.-thistle, n. A thistle (Onopordon acanthium), one of the three called the Scotch thistle: naturalized in the United States from the Old World. It is from 2 to 4 feet high and of a white cottony appearance.— c.-tree, n. 1. [U. S.] The cottonwood. 2. [E. Ind.] Bombax malabaricum, which produces the silk-cotton used in cushions, etc. 3. The common wayfaring-tree. 4. An Australian tree (Hibiscus tiliaceus). The aborigines used the fiber of its bark for nets and fishing-lines.— c. velvet, an imitation velvet made of cotton; velveteen.— c.-waste, n. The refuse of cotton-manufacture used to clean machinery and as packing for axle-boxes, etc. — c.-wax, n. A wax found on a cotton-floor.— cot'ton-weed", n. 1. Cudweed or everlasting: any one of various species. 2. Cotton-rose.— c.-wool, n. Raw cotton.— Egyptian c., a long-fiber cotton cultivated in Egypt. — French c., the down on the seeds of the French jasmine (Calotropis procera).— Kafir c., a species of Ipomœa (I. digitata) of West Africa, found also in India, Java, Australia, Mauritius, and South America.— Kendal c.†, same as KENDAL, n.— mineral c., same as MINERAL WOOL.— Natal c., the fiber of a Natal plant (Ipomœa gerrardi).— New Zealand c., the fiber of the New Zealand ribbon-tree (Plagianthus betulinus). See RIBBON-TREE.— philosophic c., flowers of zinc.— sea-island c., a valuable long-staple cotton grown on certain islands along the Georgia and South Carolina coast and the adjacent coast belt.— silicate c., same as MINERAL WOOL.— soluble c., guncotton.— cot"ton-ade', n. Inferior cotton cloth.— cot'ton-a-ryt, a. Of or belonging to cotton.— cot"ton-ee', n. A Turkish cloth of mixed cotton and silk.— cot"ton-i'na, n. A heavy Levantine sail-canvas.— cot'ton-ize or -ise, vt. To make cotton of or cause to look like cotton, as flax, hemp, or the like.— cot"ton-oc'ra-cy, n. The cotton-planting interest of the United States, especially just before the Civil War of 1861.— cot'ton-y, a. Soft like cotton; nappy; downy. cot'ton-ous†.

a, a half-grown insect; b, adult.

Cot'ton², 1 ket'n; 2 cŏt'n, n. [Dial., Eng.] Bot. The common wayfaring-tree (Viburnum lantana).

cot'ton-gin", 1 ket'n-jin"; 2 cŏt'n-ğin", n. A machine used to separate the seeds from the fiber of cotton. There are various forms of gin, nearly all so constructed that a set of teeth, saw-edges, or needles, projecting from a revolving cylinder, pull the fibers through openings that are too small to admit the passage of the seeds.

The actual characteristics of the machine, (the cylinder and brush,) the sole real instruments by which the seed is removed and the cotton cleaned, remain, in cotton-gins of even the most recent manufacture, precisely as Whitney left them.
D. OLMSTED Eli Whitney app., p. 80. [D. & P. 1846.]

Lord Macaulay said of Eli Whitney: 'What Peter the Great did to make Russia dominant, Eli Whitney's invention of the cotton-gin has more than equalled in its relation to the power and progress of the United States.' NICOLAY AND HAY Abraham Lincoln vol. i, ch. 18, p. 322, note. [C. CO. 1890.]

Ecumenical (1274), regulated papal elections and attempted to unite Greek and Latin churches; Councils of Nice, (1) I. Ecumenical (325), condemned Arianism and drew up the Nicene Creed; (2) VII. Ecumenical (787), denounced Iconoclasts; C. of Pisa (1409), deposed Gregory XII. and Benedict XIII., and elected Alexander V.; C. of Rome (342), supported Athanasius; C. of Sardis (347), condemned Arianism; C. of Trent or XIX. Ecumenical C. (1545–1563), restated the dogmas of the Roman Catholic Church and condemned the Reformation; C. of Tyre (335), condemned Athanasius; C. of the Vatican (1869–), decreed papal infallibility; C. of Vienne (1311–1312), suppressed the order of the Knights Templars. The first six ecumenical councils are recognized by the Anglican churches, and the first seven by the Eastern churches.

The principal secular councils are: Army Council (1643–1648), an administrative body in Cromwell's army during the civil war; C. of Ancients or Elders (1795–1799), the upper legislative chambers of the French Directory; C. of Blood or of Troubles (1567), the tribunal established by the Duke of Alva to support Spanish claims in the Netherlands; C. of Five Hundred (1795–1799), the lower chamber of the French Directory; C. of the Indies (1511), founded by King Ferdinand to govern the Spanish colonies; C. of the North (1536–1641), a tribunal established by Henry VIII. at York to suppress the Pilgrimage of Grace; C. of the Ten (1310–1797), a tribunal of 10 (afterwards 17) members who governed the Republic of Venice; C. of Seville (1303), a subsidiary branch of the Council of the Indies; C. of State, a tribunal of 41 members which governed England from the execution of Charles I. until the Protectorate.

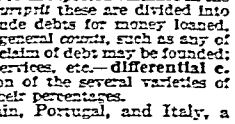
—borough council, an administrative body of persons duly elected to manage the affairs of a borough.—common c., a municipal legislative body: sometimes a coordinate branch of such a body, which is then called a city council.—condolence c., the council held by Indians of Iroquois tribes to inaugurate a successor upon the death of a sachem.—c. bill [Eng.] (Finance), a remittance draft on British Indian banks issued and sold in London by the India council. c. draft‡.—coun'cil-board", n. The table round which a council assembles; hence, the council itself. c.-table‡.—c.-chamber, n.—c.-fire, n. The fire around which the American Indians sit in council.—c.-house, n.—coun'cil-man, n. A member of a municipal council.—coun'cil-man-ic, a.—c. of ministers [F.], a committee made up of the heads of departments in the national government, having general supervision over the administration of laws. Its members are also members, ex officio, of the Council of State.—C. of State, in modern France, the supreme national administrative committee, containing the ministers and other high, permanent officials.—c. of war. 1. A conference of officers called into consultation by the commander-in-chief of an army or garrison. 2. In some European countries, a permanent advisory board or committee.—county c. [Eng.], a council under the Local Government Act (1888) having control of county finance, supervision of the registration of voters for Parliament, joint control with quarter-sessions, of the county police, maintenance of highways, etc.—coun'ty-coun"cil-or, n.—ecumenical c. 1. A council of prelates and theologians to regulate matters of doctrine or discipline in the church. 2. R. C. Ch. A convocation of all the bishops in communion with the Holy See to regulate matters pertaining to faith, morals, or discipline.—executive c., an advisory body whose business it is to assist and, in some instances, to exercise partial control over the executive. Such bodies exist in most of the British colonies and in some of the States of the United States, the upper house of the legislature exercising similar functions in other States. The United States Senate serves an analogous purpose to the extent of passing upon the appointments of the more important Federal officers and of ratifying treaties, as does the Privy Council in theory in England, tho the Cabinet has in practise taken over its governmental functions. Of this nature are the King's Privy Council for Canada in Canada, the Federal Executive Council in Australia, the Executive Council in the Union of South Africa, and all the Crown colonies.—general c. 1. A council made up of delegates representative of the whole of a certain territory or organization, as the British Parliament. 2. In actions of assumpsit these are divided into money counts, which include debts for money loaned, paid out, interest, etc., and general counts, such as any of the usual facts upon which a claim of debt may be founded; as board, lodging, labor, services, etc.—differential c. (Hematology), the numeration of the several varieties of leucocytes with respect to their percentages.

count[2], n. In France, Spain, Portugal, and Italy, a nobleman originally corresponding to an earl in England and occupying a position next in rank to a marquis. In the Roman republic a count or comes was the assistant to a proconsul or proprætor. Under the empire the title was given to the close personal associates and intimates of the emperor, thus becoming the highest within his gift.



Count's Coronet.

In early feudal times counts were the governors of provinces for the king, acting as personal agents with vice-regal powers, while dukes were governors of cities. Later both became feudal proprietors and ranked equally. Counts were not infrequently independent sovereigns, as the Counts of Flanders. Ultimately the title came to be ranked below that of duke, and has so continued. The word is used also to translate the German graf (see GRAF), tho not originally the same. The title, being in some countries assumed by all the sons, is often a mere indication of noble birth. It is not used as an English title except in count palatine (which see); but countess is the feminine equivalent of earl.

coun'ter-point", 1 koun'ter-point"; 2 coun'ter-point', n. 1. Mus. (1) The art of adding to a given melody, theme, or canto fermo a part or parts that shall harmonize with it according to certain established rules and at the same time be intrinsically melodious. (2) The part or parts polyphonically combined with the canto fermo according to the rules of counterpoint, as opposed to free accompaniment, which may be added. (3) The art of musical composition in general. (4) The art of polyphonic or concerted composition as opposed to homophonic or single-part composition.

Originally notes were called "points" or "pricks," hence the term counterpoint, note against note, derived from the fact that the points representing the added melodies were placed against (over or under) those indicating the original melody. The essential difference between counterpoint and harmony is that in the former each part of a concerted composition conveys its own idea, while in the latter all the parts unite to express the same idea. Strict counterpoint, which had its inception in the thirteenth and reached its culmination in the fifteenth century, gradually became transformed during the seventeenth and eighteenth into what still bears its name in the ideal sense. These two styles, roughly differentiated into pre-harmonic and post-harmonic counterpoint, reached their highest perfection respectively in the works of Palestrina and of Bach. Strict counterpoint, which may be written in any number of parts, the melody or canto fermo being assigned to either part, is divided into five species: (1) note against note; (2) two notes against one; (3) four notes against one, in which species one, two, or four notes of the added melody are respectively set against one note in the canto fermo; (4) syncopated counterpoint (in which against each note of the canto fermo one note of the added melody is set after a constant rhythmic interval), and (5) florid counterpoint, in which one part contains a mixture of (1), (2), (3), and (4), while the others accompany the canto fermo in constant semibreves. Two-part counterpoint, three-part c., etc., are those forms in which two, three, or more voices or parts are used respectively. Post-harmonic counterpoint has developed into many separate forms and is known by various titles, the most important of which are fugue, canon, and figured choral. Single counterpoint is that in which the added melody lies either above or below the canto fermo, whereas in invertible counterpoint, divided into double, triple and quadruple counterpoint, the two, three, or more melodies are so fitted as to be mutually usable both above and below the canto fermo by transposition. Unequal counterpoint is any form which varies from the strict rule of note against note. Modern free counterpoint has been tentatively divided by a German theorist, E. F. Richter, into a new method of three species: (1) note against note, (2) combined treatment of minims and suspensions, and (3) four notes to one; but this has not met with universal assentance.

2. A point, standpoint, or position opposed to another. [< F. contrepoint, < L. contra (see CONTRA-) + punctus, POINT.]

coun"ter-poiat'ed, a. Her. Said of two chevrons whose points meet in the center of a shield, when one rises from the base and the other falls from the chief.—c.-pointed in fess, said of two chevrons meeting at the fess point, one of which is founded on the center and the other on the sinister side of the shield. c.-pointé'.

court'-ten"nis, 1 kôrt'-ten'ıs; 2 cōrt'-tĕn'ĭs, n. A game, played usually by two persons, who strike a ball with a racket to and fro over a net. It somewhat resembles lawn-tennis, but is played in a building of special construction lighted from the roof, and the method of play is more elaborate. The floor space is divided by a net into a service and a hazard court both of which are subdivided into galleries and doors by gallery-lines and door-lines. There are also a dedans, a grille, a tambour, hazard and service chases, penthouses (see these words), and end, main, and side walls which figure in playing the game.

In [court-]tennis the object of the Server is to give such a service that his opponent cannot return the ball over the net; or even should he be able to do so, it will give the Server the opportunity to accurately place the ball by a heavily cut stroke into one of the corners of the court over the service line in such a position that it cannot be easily returned, or to put the ball into the winning gallery or grille. The object of the Striker Out is to return the ball low over the net and as close to the end wall as possible on the second bound, or into one of the corners, or into the dedans. F. C. Tompkins Court Tennis p. 25. [L.]

If a player should fail to return the ball over the net before its second bound, a chase is said to be made. Note is taken of the cross-line near which the ball has struck, and when the score is 40 and one chase, advantage and one chase, or any other score and two chases, the players change sides, and the one who allowed the chase to be made tries to return the ball nearer to the end wall than the place where it was marked. Strikes may be won also by sending the ball into certain openings in the wall. Court-tennis became very popular in the middle ages. The outdoor form, the older, did not take its present shape until 1874.

The following list exhibits some of the terms used specifically in court-tennis. Such of these as are not self-explanatory are defined in their vocabulary places. Words common to court- and lawn-tennis, such as love, set, and other terms used in scoring, are listed under LAWN-TENNIS.

cranes'bill", 1 krēnz'bil'; 2 crānz'bil', n. 1. Any species of Geranium; especially, Geranium maculatum, the spotted cranesbill, so called from the resemblance of its long fruit-bearing beak to a crane's bill. The gray c., native of the Pyrenees, is Geranium cinereum. 2. A pair of slender pincers used by surgeons. crane's'-bill"‡.

crang, n. Same as KRANG.

Cran-gon'i-dæ, 1 kran-gen'i-di; 2 crăn-gŏn'i-dē, n. pl. Crust. The only family of crangonoidean macrurans, including the typical shrimps. Cran'gon, n. (t. g.) [< Gr. krangōn, shrimp.] — cran'go-noid, n. — cran'go-noid, a.

Cran"go-nol'de-a, 1 kran"go-nel'di-ə; 2 crăn"gŏ-nŏl'de-a, n. pl. Crust. A tribe or superfamily of phyllobranchiate macrurans with the first pereiopods subchelate and the second imperfect, the carpos being one-jointed. [< CRANGON + -OID.] Cran"go-nid'e-an, a. & n.

Cranial Nerves. Diagram of the brain, showing the origin of the nerves.
h, the hemispheres; cs, corpus striatum; th, optic thalamus; p, pineal glands; cp, pituitary body; cb, cerebellum; m, medulla oblongata; I–XII, the pairs of cerebral nerves; sp 1 and sp 2, the first and second pairs of spinal nerves.

Cra'ni-a, 1 krē'ni-ə; 2 crā'ni-a, n. Conch. A genus typical of Craniidæ. [< LL. cranium; see CRANIUM.]

Cra"ni-a'ce-a, 1 krē"ni-ē'si-ə; 2 crā"ni-ā'ce-a, n. pl. Conch. A suborder of lyopomatous brachiopods attached by the ventral valve to foreign substances; Craniidæ.

cra"ni-a-cro'mi-al, 1 krē"ni-ə-krō'mi-əl; 2 crā"ni-a-crō'mi-al, a. Of or pertaining to the cranium and the acromion.

cra'ni-al, 1 krē'ni-əl; 2 crā'ni-al, a. Of or pertaining to the cranium; as, cranial sutures.

cra'ni-ate, 1 krē'ni-ēt; 2 crā'ni-āt. Zool. I. a. Possessing a cranium. II. n. One of the Craniata.

cra-nid'i-um, 1 krə-nid'i-əm; 2 cra-nid'i-ŭm, n. The glabella and fixed cheeks lying centrally in the cephalon within the facial sutures in trilobites. [< Gr. kranion, skull.]

cra″ni-ec′to-my, 1 krē″nɪ-ek′to-mɪ; 2 crā″nɪ-ĕc′to-my, n. Surg. The operation of excising parts of the cranial bones. [< CRANIO- + Gr. ektomḗ, incision.]

Cra-ni′i-dæ, 1 krə-nī′ɪ-dē; 2 cra-nī′ɪ-dē, n. pl. Conch. A family of lyopomatous brachiopods with a subcircular shell whose ventral valves become affixed to foreign bodies; named from their likeness to a skull. [< CRANIA.] Cra-ni′a-dæt.— cra-nī-id, n.

cra′nī-o-, 1 kr ′nɪ-o-; 2 crā′nɪ-o-. From LL. cranium, skull (see CRANIUM): a combining form.— cra″nī-o-au′ral, a. Of or pertaining to the cranium and ear.— cra′-nī-o-cele, n. Pathol. Hernia of the brain.— cra″nī-o-cer′e-bral, a. Relating or pertaining to the cerebrum and cranium, and their functions.— cra′nī-o-clasm, n. Obstet. Craniotomy. cra″nī-o-cla′sist.— cra′nī-o-clast, n. Obstet. A large forceps for crushing and extracting the fetal skull in a case of obstructed labor.— cra″nī-o-dīd′y-mus, n. Terat. A double-headed monster.— cra″nī-o-fa′cial, a. Of or pertaining to the cranium and the face: as, the craniofacial angle.— cra″nī-og′no-my, n. The doctrine that regards the form and proportions of the skull as an index of the mental qualities or temperament.— cra″nī-og-nom′ic, a.— cra″nī-og′no-sy. Same as CRANIOLOGY.— cra′nī-o-graph, n. An instrument for making a graphical outline of the skull.— cra″nī-og′ra-phy, n. A description of the cranium.— cra″nī-o-hem″a-ton′cus, n. Same as CEPHALEMATOMA.— cra′nī-old, a. Of or pertaining to the Craniidæ.

Other words beginning with this prefix will be found in alphabetical place, either singly or in groups.

craniol., abbr. Craniology.

cra′nī-o-lite, n. A fossil or like a craniold brachiopod.

cra′nī-o-lith′.— cra″nī-ol′o-gy, n. 1. The branch of internal somatology that treats of the characteristics of skulls. 2. Phrenology.— cra″nī-o-log′i-cal, a.— cra″nī-o-log′i-cal-ly, adv.— cra″nī-ol′o-gist, n.

craniom., abbr. Craniometry.

cra″nī-om′e-try, 1 krə″nɪ-om′ɪ-trɪ; 2 crā″nɪ-ŏm′e-try, n. The art or method of measuring skulls, for the purpose of determining certain topographical relations.— cra″nī-o-met′rīc, cra″nī-o-met′rī-cal, a.— cra″nī-o-met′rī-cal-ly, adv.— cra″nī-om′e-trist, n.

Facial Index.

1. Dolichofacial skull. 2. Brachyfacial skull. a, ophryon; b, nasion; c, prosthion; d, gnathion. The general facial index is found from a comparison of the lines ad and ee (French) or bd and ee (German); the superior facial index from the lines ac and ee (French) or bc and ee (German).

a, prosthion; d, edge of central incisors; c, glabella; m, auricular point; s, acanthion; cem, Camper's angle; csm, Jacquart's angle; cam, Cloquet's angle; cdm, Cuvier's angle.

TABLE OF CRANIOMETRICAL TERMS, WITH EXPLANATIONS.

For accurate comparison, skulls are considered with reference to three mutually perpendicular planes — the median, dividing the skull into two halves, the transverse or frontal, and the horizontal. The horizontal planes ordinarily used are the alveolo-condylean (French) and the auriculo-infraorbital (German). Neither is strictly horizontal when the head is held vertically with the eyes fixed upon the horizon, and attempts have been made to substitute one

1. Norma frontalis. 2. Norma verticalis. 3. Norma occipitalis. 4. Norma medians. 5. Norma basilaris. 6. Norma lateralis.

based on physiological data, as the plane of mastication, or the orbital plane (see below). Being placed with reference to these planes, skulls are considered in certain aspects, each defined by a norma, or line perpendicular to one of the planes. (See illustration.) Six aspects are used, as follows: (1) norma frontalis or facialis, viewed from in front; (2) norma verticalis, from above; (3) norma occipitalis or posterior, from behind; (4) norma lateralis or temporalis, from the side; (5) norma medians, the median aspect of either lateral half; (6) norma basilaris or inferior, from below. The image of the skull as viewed in any of these positions, considered as thrown on a flat surface, is termed a projection, and measurements of such a flat image are termed projection measurements.

CRANIOMETRICAL POINTS.

NAME.	Location.
a-can′thi-on[1]	Base of anterior nasal spine an-tin′i-on	Median frontal point farthest from inion as-te′ri-on §	Junction of occipital, parietal, and temporal bones au-ric′u-la′re	Top of auricular opening au-ric′u-lar point §	Center of auricular opening ba′si-on	Anterior border of foramen magnum, at median line breg′ma §	Where coronal and sagittal sutures meet clit′i-on	Middle of anterior border of clivus con-dyl′i-on lat′er-ale	Lateral tip of condyle of jaw cor′o-na′le	On coronal suture at end of greatest frontal diameter co-ro′ni-on	Tip of coronoid process of jaw
cro-ta′phi-on	Tip of great wing of sphenoid dac′ry-on[1]	Junction of lacrimal, maxillary, and frontal bones en-to′mi-on	Tip of mastoid angle of parietal bone eu′ry-on	End of greatest transverse diameter of skull fron′to-ma-la′re or bi-ta′le	At medial end of frontomalar suture fron′to-ma-la′re tem′po-ra′le	At lateral end of frontomalar suture fron′to-tem′po-ra′le	At end of least transverse diameter of forehead gen-i′on	At apex of the inferior genial tubercles of lower jaw gla-bel′la[2]	The most prominent mid-point of glabellar eminence gnath′i-on * § [4]	Lower end of symphysis of jaw go′ni-on §	Where posterior and inferior borders of lower jaw meet hor′mi-on	Junction of posterior border of vomer with sphenoid, median line in′i-on §	Occipital protuberance, median line in′ter-su′per-cil′i-a-ry point	Where line tangent to superciliary arches crosses median line ju-ga′le	Junction of lines along borders of frontal and temporal processes of malar bone ju′gal point	On tubercle lower end of zygomaxillary suture ju′go-max′il-la-ry point	Posterior angle of jugular process of occipital bone ju′gu-lar point	Where sagittal and lambdoid sutures meet lamb′da §	Upper end of symphysis of jaw, lingual surface lin-gua′le	Most prominent point of malar bone ma-la′re, ma′lar point §	Lowest point of mastoid process mas′toi-da′le	Between the frontal prominences, median line me-to′pi-on	Upper end of internasal suture na′sal point sup., na′sion * §	Between the two parietal foramina, median line o-be′li-on §	Posterior end of long diameter of skull, measured from glabella oc-cip′i-tal point	Where narrowest diameter of forehead crosses median line oph′ry-on * [5]	Posterior border of foramen magnum at median line o-pis′thi-on	End of intermaxillary suture, oral surface of alveolar process
o-ra′le	Lowest point of inferior border of orbit or′bi-ta′le, or′bit-al point	Most anterior point on chin, median line po-go′ni-on	Median point posterior border of oral opening of incisive canal po′ri-on	On auriculo-infraorbital line between tragus of ear and condyle of jaw pre′au-ric′u-lar point	Lower end of intermaxillary suture, facial surface pros′thi-on * § [3]	Where great wing of sphenoid meets frontal, parietal, and temporal bones pter′i-on § [7]	Lower end of internasal suture
rhin′i-on	1 cm. behind middle of arc joining nasion and inion
Ro-lan′dic point, su-pe′ri-or	5½ cm. above zygoma on vertical from preauricular point
Ro-lan′dic point, in-fe′ri-or	Apex of petrous bone, inferior surface sal-pin′gi-on	Apex of antero-inferior angle of parietal bone sphen′i-on	Posterior edge of hard palate at median line sta-phyl′i-on	Crossing of median and transverse palatine sutures stau′ri-on	End of least transverse diameter of skull taken in temporal fossa sten′i-on	Where coronal suture crosses the temporal crest ste-pha′ni-on §	On root of zygoma vertically above auricular point su′pra-au-ric′u-lar point	Upper end of symphysis of jaw, facial surface sym-phys′i-on	Most prominent point of either frontal eminence tu′ber fron-ta′le	Most prominent point of either parietal eminence tu′ber pa-ri′e-ta′le	Anterior edge of optic groove at median line, interior of skull tyl′i-on	Highest median point on vault of skull ver′tex	End of greatest bizygomatic diameter zyg′i-on	Lower end of zygomaxillary suture zy′go-max′il-la′re, zy′go-max′il-la-ry point

CRANIOMETRICAL LINES.

NAME.	Course.
al′ve-o-lar ra′di-us, su-pe′ri-or	Basion to prosthion
al-ve′o-lo-bas′i-lar	Basion to prosthion al-ve′o-lo-na′sal line[1]	Prosthion to nasion au-ric′u-lar ra′di-i	Auricular point to selected peripheral points
au-ric′u-lo * in′fra-or′bit-al line[2]	Auricular point to orbitale au-ric′u-lo * sub-na′sal line	Auricular point to acanthion ba′sal length	Basion to gnathion ba′si-al′ve-o-lar line	Basion to prosthion ba′si-breg-mat′ic axis	Basion to bregma ba′si-cra′ni-al ax′is[3]	Basion to ethmosphenoid junction bas′i-lar length	Basion to obelion bas′i-lar ra′di-i	Basion to selected peripheral points ba′si-men′tal ra′di-us	Basion to gnathion ba′si-na′sal line	Basion to nasion
Bell's ver′ti-cal	Center of foramen magnum to point where cranium would balance if suspended bi′as-te′ric or bi′as-te′ri-on′ic di-am′e-ter	Between the two asteria bi′au-ric′u-lar diam′e-ter	Between opposite auricular points bi-con′dy-lar di-am′e-ter	Between the two condyles bi-cor′o-nal di-am′e-ter	Between the two coronas bi-ju′gal di-am′e-ter	Between opposite jugal points bi-ma′lar di-am′e-ter	Between opposite malar points bi-mas′toid di-am′e-ter	Between the two mastoidalia bi′pa-ri′e-tal di-am′e-ter	Between opposite parietal protuberances bi′ste-phan′ic di-am′e-ter	Between opposite stephania bi-tem′po-ral di-am′e-ter	Between opposite posterior roots of zygomatic processes bi′zy-go-mat′ic di-am′e-ter	Greatest diameter between zygomatic processes
Busk's di-am′e-ter[1]	Auricular point to bregma, projection measurement
cra′ni-o-fa′cial ax′is	Median line through basioccipital, basisphenoid, presphenoid and mesethmoid bones
Crull's di-am′e-ter	Narrowest diameter of forehead
Dau′ben-ton's line	Opisthion to orbitale den′tal length	Anterior surface of first premolar to posterior surface of last molar Door′nik's hor′i-zon′tal	Edge of upper medial incisors to occipital point fa′cial ax′is[1]	Ethmosphenoid junction to prosthion fa′cial di-am′e-ter, trans′verse, in-fe′ri-or	Between opposite gonia fa′cial di-am′e-ter, trans′verse, mid′dle	Between opposite jugomaxillary points fa′cial di-am′e-ter, trans′verse, su-pe′ri-or	Between opposite frontomalar temporal points
fa′cial line	Same as PROFILE LINE Got′ting-en hor′i-zon′tal	Tangent to upper margin of zygoma in′an-tin′i-al line	Inion to antinion in′ter-tu′ber-al line	Between tubera frontalia me′si-al length	Glabella to occipital point na′so-sub-na′sal line	Nasion to acanthion oc-cip′i-tal line	Same as DAUBENTON'S LINE pal′a-tal length	Staphylion to orale pla′no-spi′nal line	Ethmo-sphenoid junction to acanthion pro′file line (Camper)	Touching most prominent points of upper and lower face pro′file line (German)	Ophryon to prosthion pro′file line (Topinard)	Intersuperciliary point to most prominent point of lower face ra′di-us fix′us	Hormion to inion
Ro-lan′dic line	On external surface of cranium, connecting Rolandic points sphe-noi′dal di-am′e-ter	Least transverse diameter measured in temporal fossa su′pra-or′bi-tal line	Tangent to upper edges both orbits
Syl′vi-an line	On surface of cranium, from frontomalar junction to lower part of parietal eminence
Vir′chow's line	Lambda to nasion
Vogt's line	Occipital point to prosthion

Syn.: auriculo-bregmatic diameter[1], basifacial axis[2], Ihering's horizontal[3], Merkel's horizontal[3], Reid's base line[3], naso-alveolar line[4], plano-basilar line[5].

CRANIOMETRICAL PLANES.

NAME.	How Determined.
Ae′by's	Basinasal line and any transverse diameter al-ve′o-lo * con-dyl′e-an	Lowest points of occipital condyles and prosthion au-ric′u-lo-in′fra-or′bit-al	Auricularia and orbitalia of both sides
au-ric′u-lo-spi′nal	Auricular points and acanthion
Blu′men-bach's hor′i-zon′tal	That on which cranium without jaw would rest
Busk's hor′i-zon′tal	Perpendicular to Busk's diameter
Dau′ben-ton's	Opisthion and both orbitalia
Du′mou′tier's hor′i-zon′tal	Tangent to upper borders of both zygomatic arches
Dü′rer's hor′i-zon′tal	Tangent to lobules of ears and base of nose gla-bel′lo-oc-cip′i-tal	Maximum longitudinal and any transverse diameter
Ha′my's hor′i-zon′tal	Glabella, lambda, and any transverse diameter
His's hor′i-zon′tal	Acanthion, opisthion, and any transverse diameter
Ihering's hor′i-zon′tal	Auricular points and orbitalia
Lu′cæ's hor′i-zon′tal	Axes of both zygomatic arches
Meiss′ner's hor′i-zon′tal	Basion, opisthion, any transverse diameter
Mor′ton's hor′i-zon′tal	Tubera frontalia, tubera parietalia na′so′in′i-ac	Nasion, inion, any transverse diameter na′so-o-pis′thi-ac	Nasion, opisthion, and transverse diameter or′bit-al	Axes of both orbits plane of mas′ti-ca′tion	Tangent to grinding surfaces of upper molars
Rol′fe's hor′i-zon′tal	Auricular points, prosthion
Schmidt's hor′i-zon′tal	Root of either zygoma above auricular opening, orbitalia ten-to′ri-al	Tangent to apex of tentorium and perpendicular to median planes vis′u-al	Visual axes of both eyes

Syn.: Baer's horizontal[1], Barclay's h.[2], biorbital[3], Broca's h.[3], Camper's h.[4], Hölder's h.[4], Virchow's h.[4], Merkel's h.[4], Spix's h.[7], glabello-lambdoidean[8].

CRANIOMETRICAL ANGLES.

NAME.	By What Determined.
al-ve′o-lar	Basilar radii to nasion and prosthion an′gle of the fron′tal prom′i-nen-ces	Lines from metopion to bregma and to ophryon au-ric′u-lar	Any two auricular radii au-ric′u-lo * oc-cip′i-tal	Auricular radii to lambda and opisthion ba′si-fa′cial[1]	Between basifacial and basicranial axes bas′i-lar an′gles[2]	Any two basilar radii.

NAME.	By What Determined.
bas'i-op'ic[3]	Basinasal line and Meissner's horizontal plane bi-or'bi-tal	Axes of the two orbits cer'e-bral	Auricular radii to glabella and inion cil'vo-op'ic[4]	Line from cilion (see POINTS, in table) to basion and Meissner's horizontal co-ro'no-fa'cial[5]	Profile line of Camper and plane of coronal suture cra'ni-o-fa'cial[6]	Lines from tylion to basion and acanthion Des'champs's	Lines from pogonion to ophryon and inion eth'mo-cra'ni-al	Basicranial axis and cribriform plate of ethmoid fa'cial (Camper)*	Camper's facial line and auriculo-subnasal line produced fa'cial (Cloquet)*	Lines from prosthion to most prominent point of forehead and to auricular point fa'cial (Cuvier* and Geoffrey St. Hilaire)	Lines from tip of central incisors to same points fa'cial (German)[7]	By German profile line and auriculo-infraorbital plane fa'cial (Jacquart and Broca)*[8]	Lines from acanthion to most prominent point of forehead and to auricular point fa'cial (Topinard)	Line from intersupercilliary point to most prominent point of lower face and the alveolocondylean plane fron'tal[9]	Auricular radii to glabella and bregma in'i-o-fa'cial	Lines drawn from inion to ophryon and pogonion
Land'zert's[10]	Plane of clivus and that of planum sphenoidale
Lis-sau'er's	Angles, made with the radius fixed by lines from hormion man-dib'u-lar[11]	Lower border and ascending ramus of jaw met'a-fa'cial[12]	Pterygoid processes and base of skull na'sal (Ranke)	Alveolonasal line and auriculo-infraorbital plane na'sal (Welcker)[13]	Basinasal and nasosubnasal lines na'so-ma'lar (Flower)	Lines from nasion to tip of frontal process of either malar bone oc-cip'i-tal (Broca)	Meissner's horizontal plane and line from opisthion to nasion oc-cip'i-tal (Daubenton)[2]	Meissner's horizontal plane and Daubenton's line oph'ry-o-al-ve'o-lo-au-ric'u-lar	Auricular radii to ophryon and acanthion or'bi-to-al-ve'o-lo-con'dy-lar	Between orbital and alveolocondylean planes or'bi-to-bas'i-lar	Between orbital plane and planes tangent to lower border of mandible
o r'bi-to-oc-cip'i-tal	Meissner's horizontal plane and plane of orbital axes or'i-fa'cial (Barclay)	Profile line of Camper and plane of mastication pa-ri'e-tal (Broca)[14]	Auricular radii to fa'cial and lambda pa-ri'e-tal (Quatrefages)	Lines through stephanion and zygion on either side
Ro-lan'dic	Between Rolandic line and mesial plane sphe-noi'dal (Welcker)[15]	Lines from tylion to nasion and basion
Spix's	Basinasal line and alveolocondylean plane sub'oc-cip'i-tal	Auricular radii to inion and opisthion su'pra-oc-cip'i-tal	Auricular radii to inion and lambda sym-phys'i-an	Symphysis and lower border of jaw
ten-to'ri-al	Basicranial axis and plane of tentorium
Vir'chow's	Line from acanthion to nasion and auriculo-infraorbital plane
Vogt's	Basinasal and alveolonasal lines

CRANIOMETRICAL INDEXES.

Crania may be compared by means of indexes. An index is the ratio between two dimensions or capacities supposed to have some natural relation, that which is normally the larger being used as a base and taken as 100. Thus:

Larger dimension : smaller dimension :: 100 : index. Therefore, index = smaller dimension × 100 ÷ larger dimension.

The indexes in most common use are the following:

NAME.	How Obtained.
au-ric'u-lo-pa-ri'e-tal	Biauricular diameter × 100 ÷ greatest cranial breadth au-ric'u-lo-ver'ti-cal	Auricular height × 100 ÷ greatest cranial length bas'i-lar	Basialveolar line × 100 ÷ cranial length ce-phal'ic[2]	Greatest cranial breadth × 100 ÷ greatest length (taken in various ways) ceph'a-lo-fa'cial	Capacity of all cavities of face × 100 ÷ capacity of cranium ceph'a-lo-na'sal	Capacity of nasal fossæ and contiguous cavities × 100 ÷ capacity of cranium ceph'a-lo-or'bi-tal	Capacity of both orbits × 100 ÷ capacity of cranium cer'e-bral	One obtained by interior measurements of cranium cor'o-noid	In mandible, distance between coronoid and condyloid processes × 100 ÷ projection length co-ro'no-pa-ri'e-tal	Greatest frontal breadth × 100 ÷ greatest cranial breadth cra'ni-o-fa'cial	Vertex to nasion × 100 ÷ nasion to gnathion (both projections) cu'bic	Length × breadth × height × 100 ÷ 2 × capacity den'tal	Dental length (space occupied by molar and premolar teeth) × 100 ÷ basinasal line fa'cial (French)*	Ophryon to gnathion × 100 ÷ transverse mid-facial diameter fa'cial (German)*	Nasion to gnathion × 100 ÷ transverse mid-facial diameter fa'cial (Kollmann)	Nasion to prosthion × 100 ÷ bizygomatic diameter fa'cial, su-pe'ri-or (French)*	Ophryon to prosthion × 100 ÷ transverse mid-facial diameter fa'cial, su-pe'ri-or (German)*[1]	Nasion to prosthion × 100 ÷ transverse mid-facial diameter fa'cial, su-pe'ri-or (Kollmann)	Nasion to prosthion × 100 ÷ bizygomatic diameter fron'tal	Least frontal breadth × 100 ÷ greatest frontal breadth fron'to-pa-ri'e-tal	Least frontal breadth × 100 ÷ greatest cranial breadth gnath'ic[2]	Basialveolar line × 100 ÷ basinasal line man-dib'u-lar	In mandible, bicondylar diameter × 100 ÷ projection length max'il-la-ry (1)	Same as SUPERIOR FACIAL (German) max'il-la-ry (2)	Width of palate (at second molar, outside) × 100 ÷ length from prosthion to posterior border of superior maxilla na'sal (French)	Greatest width anterior nares × 100 ÷ greatest height na'sal (German)	Greatest width anterior nares × 100 ÷ nasosubnasal line na'so-ma'lar	Distance direct from nasion to malare × 100 ÷ same distance between same measured on surface.
oc-cip'i-to-pa-ri'e-tal	Biasteric diameter × 100 ÷ greatest cranial breadth or'bi-tal	Vertical orbital diameter × 100 ÷ horizontal diameter or'bi-to-ma'lar	Width between lateral fronto-malar points × 100 ÷ bizygomatic diameter.
pal'a-tal[4]	Greatest breadth hard palate × 100 ÷ greatest length sphe'no-cor'o-no-fron'tal	Distance from stenion to stenion × 100 ÷ greatest frontal breadth sphe'no-fron'tal	Same distance × 100 ÷ least frontal breadth sphe-noi'do-au-ric'u-lar	Same distance × 100 ÷ least auricular breadth sphe-noi'do-pa-ri'e-tal	Same distance × 100 ÷ greatest parietal diameter sphe'no-pa-ri'e-tal	Stenion to stenion × 100 ÷ greatest breadth staph'y-lin'ic	Inside width of palate (at second molar) × 100 ÷ its length steph'a-no-zyg'o-mat'ic[2]	Bistephanic diameter × 100 = bizygomatic diameter trans-ver'so-ver'ti-cal[4]	Greatest cranial height × 100 ÷ greatest breadth ver'ti-cal[1]	Greatest cranial height × 100 ÷ greatest length

Pathol.* A circumscribed softening of the bones of the skull, resulting in patches of thinness, especially of the occipital bone: a rachitic disease of infancy. — cra'ni-o-tome, n. An instrument for use in craniotomy. — cra"ni-ot'o-my, n. Obstet. The operation of perforating the fetal skull, so that some of the brain may escape, to facilitate delivery in difficult parturition. — linear craniotomy (Surg.), the cutting through of the bones of the skull in order to make the cranial cavity more spacious. — cra"ni-o-to-pog'ra-phy, n. The division of the surface of the skull into areas corresponding to cortical areas of known function. — cra'ni-o-trac'tor, n. A cranioclast of special form. — cra"ni-o-tym-pan'ic, a. Of or pertaining to the skull and the tympanum.

cra-ni'tis, 1 kra-nī'tis or -nī'tis; 2 cra-nī'tis or -nī'tis, n. Pathol. Inflammation of the bones of the cranium.

cra'ni-um, 1 krā'ni-um; 2 crā'ni-ŭm, n. [CRA'NI-A, pl.]

1. The skull of an animal, especially that part enclosing the brain; the brain-case or brainpan.

The cranium . . . is composed of eight bones — viz., the occipital, two parietal, frontal, two temporal, sphenoid and ethmoid. H. GRAY Anatomy, The Skull p. 160. [L. BROS. & CO. 1887.]

The crania of the Inca race show a decided superiority over the other races of the land in intellectual power. PRESCOTT Peru vol. i, bk. i, ch 1 ▫ 39. [ʜ 1848.]

The Human Cranium.

A, frontal bone; B, parietal bone; C, temporal bone; D, occipital bone; F, nasal bone; G, malar bone (the line also indicates the malar point); H, superior maxillary bone; I, inferior maxillary bone; a, coronal suture; b, lambdoid suture; c, temporo-parietal suture; d, orbit; e, zygoma; f, auditory meatus (the center of this is the auricular point); g, temporal line; l, nasion; 2, pterion; 3, stephanion; 4, bregma; 5, obelion; 6, lambda; 7, inion; 8, asterion; 9, gonion; 10, gnathion; 11, prosthion.

2. Entom. The investment of the head, exclusive of the antennæ, the eyes, and the mechanism of the mouth. [LL., < Gr. kranion, skull.] cra'ni-ont.

crank, 1 krąnk; 2 crănk, v. I. t. 1. To bend into the shape of a crank. 2. To furnish with a crank. 3. To move or operate by a crank. 4. [Scot.] To shackle. 5. [Prov. Eng.] To mark crosswise on (bread and butter) to please a child. H. Dict.

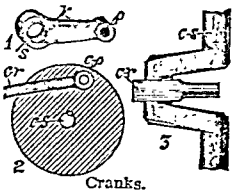
II. i. 1. To make a course with many turns and bends; wind. 2. To turn a crank, as in starting the engine of an automobile. 3. [Prov. Eng.] To creak. [< CRANK, n.] crank, a. 1. Naut. Delicately or ill balanced, so as to be easily capsized; unsteady; top-heavy.

Any one who has ever rowed an American skiff will remember that these little vessels are 'crank' to an extreme degree. MAYNE REID Hunters' Feast ch. 16, p. 135. [G. W. D. 1883.]

2. Hence, in a shaky condition; disjointed; rickety. 3. Spirited and lively; hence, having a confident bearing; positive; sturdy. 4. [Scot.] (1) Out of shape; crooked; as crank fingers. (2) Difficult to deal with; as, a crank question. 5†. Sick. [Ult. < AS. cringan, yield; cp., in senses 2 and 5, D. G. krank, sick.] cranck†; cranket. — crank'sid"ed, a. — crank'ly, adv. Sturdily. — crank'ness, n.

crank, n. 1. A device for causing rotation of an axis, as by the hand, or for converting rotary into reciprocating motion, or vice versa: usually consisting of an arm attached at one end at right angles to the axis and at the other end to a rod parallel to the axis, and either grasped by the hand or connecting with the reciprocating object; as, the crank of a steam-engine or a windlass; used sometimes figuratively.



Cranks.

1. A simple crank. k, key-seat; p, hole for crank-pin; s, hole for crank-shaft. 2. Wheel-crank. 3. Double crank. c-p, crank-pin; c-r, connecting-rod; c-s, crank-shaft.

And one there was, a dreamer born,
Who, with a mission to fulfil,
Had left the Muses' haunts to turn
The crank of an opinion-mill.
WHITTIER Tent on the Beach prel., st. 9.

2. A device for altering the direction of reciprocating motion; an angular lever; as, a bell-crank. 3. A paddle-like wheel made to be turned by hand in a box filled with gravel: used as a punishment in prisons. 4. An iron brace or support. 5. Auto. A handle with which the shaft of a motor vehicle is turned until the pistons reach the highest point of compression, and motion-producing explosions are initiated. 6. [Scot.] A calk or creeper. 7. [Colloq.] One who lacks mental balance, has a mental twist, or is mentally awry; a person given to caprices, crotchets, or vagaries; a mildly affected monomaniac.

HOLMES Over the Teacups ch. 7, p. 161. [H. M. & CO. 1891.]

8. A twist or turn. (1) A bend; turn, as of a road. (2) A fantastic turn of speech; quip; conceit. (3) A twist or perversion of judgment; whim. 9. [Prov. Eng.] A top-heavy vessel. 10. [Scot.] A creaking or grating sound; anything inharmonious. 11†. One who is sick. [ME. cranke, < CRANK, a., 4; cp. D. kronkel, a little bend.] cranket. — cen'ter-crank", n. A double crank having two solid disks instead of arms: the disks are joined by a crank-pin to which the connecting-rod is attached. — crank's axle, n. 1. A shaft turned by or turning a crank. 2. A wagon-axle resembling a crank in curve. — crank'bird", n. The lesser spotted woodpecker of Europe (Dryobates minor). — c.-brace, n. The ordinary form of carpenters' brace, in which the bit is turned by a crank. See illus. under BRACE. — c.-cheek, *n. crisp'y, 1 krisp'i; 2 crĭsp'y, a. 1. Made into ringlets; curled. 2. Easily cracked and broken; brittle. 3. Fresh and stimulating.

The infinite ether wrapt the crispy air.
E. C. STEDMAN Alice of Monmouth div. xx, st. 1.

cris'sal, 1 kris'əl; 2 crĭs'al, a. Ornith. 1. Of or pertaining to the crissum. 2. Having a bright-colored crissum.

criss'cross", 1 kris'krōs"; 2 crĭs'crŏs", vt. To cross or interlace in many lines.

criss'cross", a. Crossing one another in different directions: said of lines or the like.

His puckered forehead unravels its entanglement of criss-cross wrinkles. HAWTHORNE Mosses p. 163. [H. M. & CO. 1891.]

criss'cross", n. 1. The cross or signature of one who can not write. 2. A congeries of lines intersecting one another at different points. 3. A child's game, tit-tat-to. It is played in the interspaces of two pairs of parallel lines crossing each other, one player making a cipher, the other a cross in turn, the object being to get three crosses or three ciphers in a straight line. [Cor. of Christ-cross, for CHRIST'S CROSS.]

criss'cross", adv. In different crossing directions; cross-wise; in a tangled manner.

cris'set, 1 kris'et; 2 crĭs'ĕt, n. A coopers' barrel-heater. [Var. of CRESSET.]

cris'sum, 1 kris'um; 2 crĭs'ŭm, n. Ornith. The under tail-coverts; the region or feathers about the anus. See illus. under BIRD. [< L. crisso, move the haunches.]

cris'ta, 1 kris'tə; 2 crĭs'ta, n. Anat. A ridge or crest for the attachment of a muscle. [L., crest.] — crista acustica (Anat.), one of the ridges in the internal ear to which filaments of the auditory nerve are distributed. See illus. under LABYRINTH.— c. ethmoidei (Ich.), the ethmoid bone.— c. femoris, same as LINEA ASPERA.— c. galli (Anat.), a process on the ethmoid bone for attachment of the dura mater. See illus. under SINUS.— c. helicis (Anat.), in the external ear, the continuation downward of the helix into the cavity of the concha.— c. inferior (Ornith.), a ridge of the lower border of the humerus of a bird.— c. superior (Ornith.), a ridge of the upper border of the humerus of a bird for the pectoralis major muscle.— c. tympanica (Anat.), the line of the tympanic ring to which the drum of the ear is attached.— c. ulnæ (Anat.), the external border of the inner bone of the forearm.

cris'tate, 1 kris'tēt; 2 crĭs'tāt, a. Crested; also, carinate. [< L. cristatus, < crista, crest.] cris'tat-ed‡.

Cris"ta-tel'li-dæ, 1 kris"tə-tel'i-dī; 2 crĭs"ta-tĕl'i-dē, n. pl. Helminth. A family of fresh-water phylactolæmatous polyzoans with locomotive colonies. Cris"ta-tel'la, n. (t. g.) [< L. cristatus; see CRISTATE.] — cris"ta-tel'lid, n.— cris"ta-tel'loid, a.

cris-ta'to-ru-gose', 1 kris-tē'to-ru-gōs'; 2 crĭs-tā'to-ru-gōs'. a. Bot. Having deep, sharp-edged wrinkles, as a leaf. [< L. cristatus (see CRISTATE) + RUGOSE.] cris-ta'to-ru'gous‡.

Criste'masset, n. Christmas.

crist'i-form, 1 krist'i-fōrm; 2 crĭst'i-fôrm, a. Having the form of a crest. [< L. crista, crest, + -FORM.] crest'i-form‡.

cris-tim'a-nous, 1 kris-tim'ə-nus; 2 crĭs-tĭm'a-nŭs, a. Having the claws crested, as calappoid crabs. [< L. crista, crest, + manus, hand.]

Cris-ti'no, 1 kris-ti'no; 2 crĭs-tī'no, n. Sp. Hist. An opponent of the Carlists and supporter of the Queen Regent Maria Christina (1806–1878).

cris"ti-o-tom'e-ter, 1 kris"ti-o-tem'i-tər; 2 crĭs"ti-o-tŏm'e-ter, n. An instrument by means of which the composition and the pressure of gases can be ascertained quickly. [Appar. < L. crista, crest, + Gr. ous, ear, + metron, measure.]

cris'to-bal-lite, 1 kris'to-bal-ait; 2 crĭs'to-băl-īt, n. Mineral. A dull-white silicon dioxid (SiO_2) that crystallizes in the orthorhombic system, and is closely related to tridymite. [< Cristobal, Mexico.]

Cris"to-fo'ri, 1 kris"to-fō'ri; 2 crĭs"to-fō'rī, Bartolomeo (5/4 1655–1/17 1731). A harpsichord-maker of Padua, who invented the pianoforte. Cris"to-fa'li‡.

crit., abbr. Critical; criticism; criticized.

cri-te"ri-ol'o-gy, 1 krai-ti"ri-ol'o-ji; 2 cri-tē"ri-ŏl'o-ġy, n. The doctrine of the more ultimate standards of correct judgment. [< CRITERION + -LOGY.]

cri-te'ri-on, 1 krai-ti'ri-ən; 2 cri-tē'ri-on, n. [-RI-A, pl.] 1. A standard by which to determine the correctness of a judgment or conclusion, especially some well-established truth or principle; the test to which a rule of judgment refers; as, knowledge is no criterion of character.

There is but one ultimate criterion of certainty, namely, self-evidence, or simple evidence.
MIVART Nature and Thought p. 65. [K. P. & CO. 1882.]

2. Math. An expression used in determining the value of a mathematical form. [< Gr. kritērion, < krinō, judge.] cri-te'ri-um‡. Syn.: measure, rule, standard, test, touchstone.— Galois's criterion (Math.), a rule that the radical solvents of irreducible equations must be all primes.— cri-te'ri-on-al, a.

crith¹, 1 krith; 2 crĭth, n. A chemical unit of mass for gases, the mass of one liter of hydrogen. [< Gr. krithē, barley-corn.]

crith², 1 krith; 2 crĭth, n. [Ir.] A dorsal protuberance.

crith'o-man"cy, 1 krith'o-man'si; 2 crĭth'o-măn'cy, n. Divination by means of barley-meal or cake offered in sacrifice. [< Gr. krithē, barley, + -MANCY.]

Cri'ti-as, 1 krish'i-əs; 2 crish'i-as, n. 1. An Athenian sculptor of the 5th century B. C. 2. An Athenian poet and orator of the 5th century B. C.; one of the Thirty Tyrants.

crit'ic†, vt. To criticize. cri-tique'†.

crit'ic, 1 krit'ik; 2 crĭt'ic, a. Pertaining to criticism or critics; critical; as, a critic taste.

crit'ic, n. 1. One who judges of the qualities of anything by some standard, criterion, or canon, particularly one who so judges productions of literature and art; one skilled in criticism; a reviewer. 2. One who is severe in judging; a faultfinder; caviler. 3. The doctrine of literary judgment and its canons; the science or art of criticism. 4. The product of such judging; a critique or review. [< F. critique, < L. criticus, < Gr. kritikos, < krinō, judge.] SYN.: see AMATEUR.

crit'i-cal, 1 krit'ı-kəl; 2 crĭt'ı-cal, a. 1. Of, pertaining to, or characteristic of a critic or criticism; exhibiting criticism; as, critical skill; a critical article.

It seems that the creative faculty and the critical faculty cannot exist together in their highest perfection.
MACAULAY Essays, Dryden p. 36. [A. 1880.]

2. Disposed to judge or discriminate with care and precision; competent to criticize; of fine and delicate taste and judgment; fastidious; as, a critical audience stimulates the performers. 3. Given to severe judgments; harsh in criticism; faultfinding; carping; as, he is so critical that nobody can please him. 4. Based upon principles or methods of criticism; analytical; thorough; exact; as, critical treatment of a subject. 5. Of the nature of or preliminary to a crisis; attended with danger; perilous; as, a critical moment; a critical situation. 6. Having to do with decisive judgment; assisting in determination or decision; as, critical evidence. 7. Med. Pertaining to a crisis in the course of a disease, as a paroxysm or symptomatic change; as, the seventh will be the critical day in his case. 8. Math. Relating to the coalescence of different values. [C.] 9. Having extremely slight points of distinction; differing in minute particulars; as, critical species of shells. 10. [C–] Of or pertaining to a school of Bible critics characterized by greater latitude than the school of the Traditionalists. SYN.: see CAPTIOUS.— critical age, menopause.— c. angle (Optics), the least angle of incidence at which a ray is totally reflected.— c. current (Elec.), that current at which a certain result is reached; in a dynamo, that value of current at which the characteristic curve departs from a nearly straight line.— c. days, in the course of a disease, the days on which a crisis is likely to occur.— c. density (Physics), the density of a body at its point of transition from a liquid to a gas.— c. function (Math.), any function that is symmetric of the differences of an equation's roots.— c. period, same as CLIMACTERIC, n.— c. philosophy, the philosophy of Immanuel Kant (1724–1804), contained in the Critique of Pure Reason, the Critique of Practical Reason, and the Critique of the Judgment: so called because Kant undertook to make a critical and critically complete examination of the entire cognitive faculty of man as applied in science, philosophy, and the maxims governing conduct and art. See KANTIANISM.— c. point. 1. Math. A point at which two values of a function become equal. 2. Physics. A point of temperature above which a given gas can not be reduced to a liquid form by pressure, the discontinuity between the gaseous and liquid forms being lost.— c. pressure (Physics), the pressure required at critical temperature to cause a gas to liquefy.— c. solution temperature (Phys. Chem.), the temperature above which a substance is soluble in any proportion in its solvent.— c. speed (Elec.), that rate of speed upon the attainment of which (1) a series dynamo excites itself, (2) a compound-wound dynamo has constant potential, or (3) a small change in rotation-speed of any dynamo greatly changes the electromotive forces.— c. state (Physics), an unstable condition of a substance when on the point of changing from a liquid to a vapor, or vice versa, defined by its critical temperature and its critical pressure. The former is the highest temperature at which that particular substance can exist in the liquid state at any pressure. Its value varies with different substances. The latter is the vapor-pressure at the critical temperature. For example, the critical temperature for carbon dioxid is 31° C.; and its critical pressure is 73 atmospheres.— c. temperature. 1. A temperature which is characterized by a change or transition. 2. Same as CRITICAL POINT, 2.— c. volume (Physics), the volume denoted by unity divided by the critical density.— crit"i-cal'i-ty, n. [-TIES, pl.] 1. The quality of being critical. 2. [Rare.] A critical observation; a criticism.— crit'i-cal-ly, adv.— crit'i-calness, n.

crit'ic-as-ter, 1 krit'ık-as-tər; 2 crĭt'ic-ăs-ter, n. A petty critic; a term of contempt. [Dim. < L. criticus; see CRITIC.]

crit'i-cis"a-bl(e", crit'i-cise, etc. Same as CRITICIZABLE, etc.

crit'i-cism, 1 krit'ı-sizm; 2 crĭt'ı-çĭsm, n. 1. The act or art of criticizing, or judging by some standard, or a judgment thus formed; formulated opinion.

Criticism of works of art really means intelligence brought to bear upon them to interpret them to the people.
TRUEWITT in Contemporary Review May, 1869, p. 101.

2. The principles or rules for judging anything, especially works of literature or art; the science made up of such principles and rules; as, literary criticism. 3. The application of rules in the examination and exhibition of the excellences and defects of works of literature and art. 4. Harsh or unfavorable judgment. 5. Metaph. The critical method, and its results, as this method was applied in the critical philosophy of Kant. 6. Theol. Detailed inquiry into the origin, integrity, authority, and text of literary and historical documents, especially of the Bible. In this usage, the lower criticism commonly deals with the text of such productions and the reconstruction of the autograph originals; the higher criticism with the historical and literary features and internal evidence generally. SYN.: see ANIMADVERSION.

crit'i-cize, } 1 krit'ı-saiz; 2 crĭt'ı-çĭz, v. [-CIZED; -CIZcrit'i-cise, } ING.] I. t. 1. To examine critically; discover and pass judgment on the merits and demerits, beauties, and blemishes of (a work of literature or art); as, to criticize a poem or a painting.

Parnell . . . often criticised English ways.
MCCARTHY in Contemporary Review Nov., 1891, p. 686.

2. To judge severely; detect and expose defects or failures in; censure.

II. i. To act the critic; express critical judgment and opinions; animadvert. SYN.: see EXAMINE; REVIEW.
— crit'i-cist, n. An advocate of the critical philosophy; Kantist.— crit'i-ciz"(or -cis")a-bl(e", a. Capable of being criticized; open to criticism.— crit'i-ciz"er or -cis"er, n.— crit'i-ciz'ing-ly or -cis'ing-ly, adv.

crit'le-kin, n. [Rare.] A petty critic. crit'le-ule‡.

crit'i-cold, 1 krit'ı-kəld; 2 crĭt'ı-cōld, n. [Rare.] Math. A differential invariant; used by Cockle.

cri-tique', 1 kri-tik'; 2 cri-tīk', n. 1. A critical examination, analysis, or estimate of any subject, especially in art or literature; a criticism or critical review; as, a critique of a play.

All time given to writing critiques on the works of others would be much better employed if it were given to original composition.
M. ARNOLD Essays in Criticism 1st ser. i, p. 3. [MACM. 1883.]

2. The art of criticism; the system of rules and principles underlying criticism. 3. Philos. The critical examination of man's cognitive faculty, especially as conducted in the three Critiques of Kant.

By the critique of the reason Kant understands the examination of the origin, extent, and limits of human knowledge.
UEBERWEG Hist. Philos. tr. by Morris, vol. ii, § 122, p. 154. [s. 1874.]

4†. A critic. [F.; see CRITIC.]

crit'lings, 1 krit'lıŋz; 2 crĭt'lings, n. pl. [Prov. Eng.] Cracklings.

Crit"o-la'us, 1 krit"o-lē'us; 2 crĭt"o-lā'ŭs, n. A Greek philosopher of the 2d century B. C. Kri-to'la-os‡ [Gr.].

Cri'ton, 1 krai'tən; 2 crī'ton, n. A Greek philosopher, disciple of Socrates. Cri'to‡; Kri'tōn‡ [Gr.].

Crit'ten-den, 1 krit'n-den; 2 crĭt'n-dĕn, n. 1. George B. (3/20 1812–11/27 1880), an American Confederate general; son of succeeding. 2. John Jordan (9/10 1787–7/25 1863), an American statesman: introduced Crittenden compromise. See under COMPROMISE. 3. Thomas (8/11 1815–7/21 1893), a United States general; son of John J. 4. A county in E. Arkansas; 623 sq. m.; county-seat, Marion. 5. A county in W. Kentucky; 390 sq. m.; county-seat, Marion.

crit'ter, 1 krit'ər; 2 crĭt'er, n. 1. [Colloq., U. S.] A creature; especially, a domestic animal. 2. [Ir.] Sympathetic term applied to one in sorrow or destitute circumstances; as, the poor critter.

Creature, or rather 'critter' is much too honourable a term for such an animal [as an opossum], being appropriated to cattle. . . . A 'Possum, Sir, is not a critter, but a varmint.
F. H. GOSSE Letters from Alabama letter xi, p. 234. [M. & c. 1859.]

crit'ther-a, 1 krith'ər-ə; 2 crĭth'er-ə, n. [Ir.] A hunchback crit-theen'‡.

cri-vetz', 1 kri-vetz'; 2 cri-vĕtz', n. [Slav.] A violent northeasterly wind of Roumania; literally, wind of the north.

Cri'xas, 1 kri'shəs; 2 crī'shās, n. A river in Goyaz, Brazil; 200 m. long to Rio Grande.

criz'zle, 1 kriz'l; 2 crĭz'l, vi. [CRIZ'ZLED; CRIZ'ZLING.] To become wrinkled or speckled, as the skin when affected by cold. [For crisple, < CRISP, v.] criz'le‡.

criz'zle, n. A roughness on the surface of glass, clouding its transparency. criz'zel‡.

cro, 1 krō; 2 crō, n. [Scot.] Same as WERGILD. croy‡.

croak, 1 krōk; 2 crōk, v. I. t. 1. [Rare.] To utter with a croak; utter in a hoarse, guttural tone; as, he croaked his apology. 2. [Rare.] To herald by a croak; as, the frog croaks the coming of eventide.

II. i. 1. To make a harsh guttural sound, like that of a frog, raven, or person afflicted with extreme hoarseness. 2. To talk in a doleful or complaining tone; forebode evil; grumble.

Plan of American Croquet-court (Official setting).

DETAILS: A, home or winning stake; B, lower or turning-stake; a, b, c, d, e, f, g, h, i, wickets; C D D C, boundary-line; E F F E, playing-line. The dotted lines indicate the octagonal form sometimes used.

DIMENSIONS: C C, optional, usually 24 yds.; C D, optional, usually 12 yds.; distance between C D D C and E F F E, 2 ft. 6 in.: A–a, B–g, 2 yds. 2 ft.; a–b, f–g, 2 yds. 1 ft.; distance from nearest boundaries to c, e, h, i, 3 ft. 9 in.; d–d, 1 ft. 6 in.; height of wicket out of ground, 10 in.; width of hoop (inside measurement), 4 in.; height of stake out of ground, 1½ in.

The course of the ball is usually through the wickets in the order a, b, c, d–d, e, f, g, to the lower stake B, and back through the wickets in the order g, f, h, d–d, i, b, a, to home stake A. In passing through wickets c, e, h, i, the ball must pass in a course toward, not from, the center of the field.

The shape of the field, the course of the ball, the position and number of the wickets are subject to variation. Sometimes a single wicket, parallel to the other wickets, takes the place of the double center wicket d–d, and sometimes a pair of wickets, crossed at right angles to form a basket or cage, is substituted. It is also common to place the side wickets, c, e, h, i, nearer to the center wicket than in the official setting.

times faced with rubber), wire wickets (known also as arches or hoops), and wooden stakes or pegs. The object is to drive the balls by means of the mallets through the arches in a prescribed order from one end of the field to the other and return, and to prevent one's opponents from doing so. The player or players of the side first striking the home stake win. From croquet has developed the game roque. In the list of terms under roque, those used in croquet are marked with the letter c.

Elec.* A rearrangement of electric wires by which the usual paths of the current are interchanged to avoid breaks or faults. In telephony such a change may be permanent, and is called transposition.— c.-country, a. Of or pertaining to a route across the country fields and lots, regardless of the roads: as, a daring cross-country rider.— c.-course, n. Mining. A vein of ore that crosses the main vein, sometimes throwing it out of regular course.— c.-crib, n. A headquarters for crooks and blacklegs.— c.-curve, n. Geom. The locus of points in a plane each of which has two coincident corresponding points in another plane.— c.-curves of stability (Naval Arch.), an aggregation of curves graphically indicating righting moments of athwartships stability.— cross'cut", tr. To cut crosswise or through; run across; intersect. — c.-cut, a. 1. Used or made for the purpose of cutting something across; as, a cross-cut saw. 2. Cut on the bias; as, a cross-cut silk.— c.-cut, n. 1. A cut across or a short cut. 2. A level intersecting the lode or the main workings. 3. Math. Same as COFUNCTION, 2.— c.-days, n. pl. Eccl. The three days just before Ascension day.— c.-division, n. Logic. 1. A division the subordinate classes of which are not mutually exclusive. 2. A division the subordinate classes of which do not correspond with those of another division of the same genus; as, the division of mankind according to race, and the division according to religion, are cross-divisions.— c.-drawing, n. Finance. The act of making an accommodation paper.— c.-education, n. Psychol. The gain in facility acquired by any organ due to the education of the corresponding organ on the other side of the body.— c.-examination, n. Law. The examination of a witness by or in behalf of the party against whom he is called.— c.-examine, tr. Law. To question (a witness called by the opposing party) for the purpose of testing the reliability of (his) previous testimony; hence, to cross-question generally. — c.-examiner, n.— c.-eye, n. See STRABISMUS.— c.-eyed, a. Affected with strabismus.— c.-face. I. a. Having one face set at an angle of 90° with the other: said of a hammer. II. n. A cross-face hammer, used by sawmakers.— c.-facet, n. An oblique facet.— c.-feed. I. tr. & ri. To feed crosswise. II. n. A device for feeding the tool or material crosswise of the axis of the machine.— c.-fertilizabl(e), a. Bot. Capable of being cross-fertilized.— c.-fertilization, n. Bot. 1. Fecundation of the ovules of a flower by the pollen of another. 2. In a wider sense, the fecundation of the female element of a plant by the male element of another individual; cross-pollination; allogamy.

The good effects of cross-fertilization are transmitted by plants to the next generation.

Darwin Cross and Self Fertilization ch. 12, p. 438. [a. 1877.]

Hybridization is so much more certain and easy a way than selection of getting something new that breeders would nearly always be working against their own interests if they do not expose their plants as freely as possible to natural cross-fertilization.

Hugo de Vries The Mutation Theory, vol. i, p. 76. [o. c. '09.]

— c.-fertilize, tr. 1. Bot. To fertilize by the male element from another flower or individual. 2. To produce cross-fertilization in.— c.-fiber, n. Mineral. A variety of fibrous serpentine, in which the structure lies almost at a right angle to the vein-walls.— c.-figure, n. A plane-figure, parts of which cross each other, as a figure 4.— c.-file, n. A file having two unequal oval faces.— c.-filing, n. Filing done by guiding the file in the direction of its length.— c.-fingering, n. Mus. An irregular placing of the fingers in playing a reed instrument, in order to obtain certain extreme or peculiar tones.— c.-fire. I. ri. 1. Mil. To fire from two or more quarters so that the lines of fire cross. 2. [Cant.] To interfere by striking the opposite fore foot: said of horses. II. n. Mil. A firing from two or more quarters, so directed that the lines of fire cross each other: used also figuratively; as, a cross-fire of questions.— cross'fish", n. A starfish.— c.-fishing, n. Fishing with a cross-line.— c.-flow, ri. To flow across; as, a cross-flowing stream.— c.-flower, n. Bot. The milkwort organ-flower (Polygala vulgaris).— c.-flucan, n. Mining. A fissure crossing the lode and filled with flucan.— c.-fox, n. A North-American fox (Vulpes rulpes, var. decussatus) having a dark cross-shaped mark in the fur on the back.— c.-fur, tr. Plastering. To cover (a wall) before plastering with laths diagonally to the regular furring.— c.-furrow. I. tr. To plow at right angles to a former plowing. II. n. A furrow at right angles to the main furrows, as for the purpose of draining them.— c.-garnet, n. A T-shaped hinge, for doors, box-lids, etc.; a cross-tailed hinge.— c.-girder, n. One of the chief cross-beams in a girder bridge.— c.-grain, n. 1. A grain that runs across the regular grain. 2. The grain cut transversely, as in wood.— c.-grained, a. 1. Having the grain gnarled and hard to cut; as, a cross-grained board. 2. Hard to please or persuade; stubborn; perverse; as, a cross-grained fellow.— c.-guard, n. 1. The bar, at right angles to the blade, constituting the hilt-guard of some swords. 2. A similar defensive bar on a spear near the head.— c.-hackle, tr. To hackle with cross-questions.— c.-hair, n. Same as CROSS-WIRE, 2.— c.-handed, adv. & c. With, or having, the hands placed cross-wise.— c.-handle, n. A handle placed in a crosswise direction to the axis of a tool, as in a gimlet.— c.-handled, a. Having a cross-shaped handle.— c.-hatch, tr. To shade, as a picture, by the use of cross-hatching.— c.-hatch, n. A shaded space composed of lines crossing each other diagonally or at right angles.— c.-hatching, n. The art of shading, as in drawing or engraving, by crossed parallel lines; also, such lines collectively.— c.-haul, n. In lumbering: (1) A short road cut at right angles to a log-pile, to allow a team to roll up logs. (2) The team rolling up the logs.— c.-hawse, adv. Naut. Swung, as a moored vessel, so as to bring a cross in her cables.— c.-head, n. 1. Mech. A beam across the top of something. Specif.: (1) A block sliding upon one guide-bar, or between two or more, to give a piston motion in a straight line, axial with the cylinder. (2) A cruciform bar with four handles, by which to turn a drill-rod or earth-auger. (3) A sleeve with hooks for the suspension-tackle of a well-drill. 2. A skull in which the sagittal suture extends to the rest of the nose, forming a cross with the coronal suture; hence, a person so marked. 3. In printing, a title set in the body of matter, to denote a new topic or division of treatment, or the like. 4. Auto. The connection between the piston and connecting-rods.— c.-heading, n. Mining. 1. An air-way or other heading extending from one breast or gangway to another. 2. A haulage-road which intersects other haulage-roads. 3. A haulage-road excavated indirectly to the rise of the seam.— c.-heredity, n. The mutual resemblance between ancestors and descendants of opposite sex. — c.-hilt, n. A hilt with a cross-guard.— c.-interrogate, tr. Law. To cross-question a witness.— c.-interrogatory, n. Law. An interrogatory propounded to a witness by the party opposed to the party taking the deposition.— c.-jack, n. Naut. The sail carried on the cross-jack yard, the lower yard on the mizzenmast of a full-rigged ship.— c.-keelson, n. A structure placed across the keelson as a support for the machinery, etc.— c.-keys, n. Her. An emblem or sign composed of two keys borne cross-wise, as in the papal coat-of-arms.— c.-lamination, n. Geol. False bedding. See BEDDING.— c.-land†, n. Irish Hist. Land possessed by the Church in the counties palatine of Ireland.— c.-legged, a. Having the legs crossed.— c.-line. I. vt. To mark with transverse lines. II. n. 1. A line that crosses another object. 2. A fishing-line with numerous attached hooks placed across a stream.— c.-lock, n. In an interlocking railroad signal-frame, one of numerous levers or bars placed transversely over the locking-bars and having a notch for each lever to be locked.— c.-loop, n. Medieval Fort. A loophole cut in the form of a cross, so as to give marksmen better facilities. c.-loophole†.— c.-lots, adv. [Colloq.] Across the lots, by a cross-cut.— c.-marriages, n. pl. Marriages made by a brother and sister with a brother and sister. — c.-matched, a. Mated crosswise: said of a team of four horses and two colors, as chestnut and white, harnessed diagonally.— c.-mate, vt. To mate (a queen bee of any breed or race) with a drone of another breed or race.— c.-memory, n. Psychol. Cross-education in the form of a transference of habit or so-called organic memory.— c.-mint, n. A plant, Mentha crispa.— c.-motion, n. Astron. The motion or the passage of a star at right angles to the line of vision expressed in astronomical linear units (miles per second). — c.-multiplication, n. See DUODECIMAL.— c.-parental, a. Related to or considered in connection with the characteristic differences of parents of opposite sexes.— c.-peen, a. Used of a hammer whose peen is transverse to the line of the handle. See illus. under HAMMER.— c.-plow, vt. To plow (as a field) transversely or at right angles to a former plowing. c.-plought.— c.-point. I. vt. Rope-making. To point by transversely plaiting the seizing or nettles. II. n. 1. In a compass, a point intermediate between any two cardinal points. 2†. A dancing-step.— c.-pointing, n. A method of laying the nettles in pointing a rope.— c.-pollenize, *vt. 2. An ancient instrument of torture on which criminals were fastened and exposed until they died from exhaustion: generally made of two timbers, an upright set into the ground and a crosspiece. 3. A sacred or mystic symbol in many ancient religions, supposed to have been originally emblematic of the union of the active and passive elements in nature.

By one of the many strange coincidences in this meeting of two grades of culture so widely sundered, the cross was not only a Christian but also a Mexican symbol.

FISKE Discovery of Am. vol. ii, ch. 8, p. 250. [H. M. & CO. 1892.]

The cross as a sacred or mystic symbol dates from remote antiquity, and its use as an instrument of punishment is scarcely less ancient; but there was no connection between the two before Christianity. The symbolic cross, of many different shapes, may be resolved into four primitive forms: (1) the Greek cross found on Assyrian tablets, on Egyptian and Persian monuments, and on Etruscan pottery; (2) the crux decussata or oblique cross, vulgarly called St. Andrew's cross, no less common in ancient sculpture; (3) the Latin cross or crux immissa, found on monuments, coins, and medals before Christ; and (4) the tau cross, crux commissa, or patibulata, a mystic symbol of very ancient origin, probably a phallic emblem, thought by some archeologists to be the oldest form, the Greek cross being its double. (5) The crux ansata, the tau cross combined with a circle, as in the hands of Isis Osiris, and other Egyptian divinities, is the symbol of life or immortality.

4. That which resembles a cross or crucifix, as two lines crossing each other; as, he put a cross to his name.

cru-sade2, n. 1. Hist. One of a number of warlike enterprises undertaken by Christians of western Europe, under the banner of the cross, against the Saracens, for the conquest of Jerusalem and the Holy Sepulcher.

There were seven principal crusades to the Holy Land, extending from 1096 to 1271. The first crusade, undertaken in 1096, resulted in the capture of Antioch and Jerusalem. The second c. (1147) was unsuccessful. The third c. (1189) effected the capture of Acre. The fourth c. (1202) led to the taking of Constantinople and the establishment of the Latin kingdom of Jerusalem. The fifth c. (1217) resulted in the capture of Jerusalem, but lost in 1244. The sixth c. (1228) was unsuccessful, as was the seventh c. (1248). Some authorities reckon nine crusades. The chief promoters of the crusades were St. Bernard, Peter the Hermit, and Popes Urban II., Gregory VIII., and Innocent III.

The Crusades were not without effect on the Renaissance and the Reformation. Friendly intercourse with the Mohammedan world brought Europe into contact with accomplishments and virtues which were felt to be lacking at home. The New Schaff-Herzog Encyclopedia of Religious Knowledge vol. iii, p. 317.

Am.] To hunt (usually on snow-shoes) large game, as deer, when the snow is so crusted as to support the hunter but not the game. — c.-hunter, n. One who crust-hunts. crust'er‡. — c.-hunting, n. crust'ing‡. — c.-lizard, n. The Gila monster. — flotation c. (Geol.), the earth's crust considered as a thin mass floating upon a molten interior. — in c. (Currying), in the condition of a hide which has not been glazed, but has been tanned and colored. — the upper c., the aristocratic class in society; the upper ten thousand. — weathered c. (Geol.), the outside layer of a stone or rock which has been acted upon by rain, frost, sun, etc.

crus'ta, 1 krus'tə; 2 crŭs'ta, n. [-TÆ, 1 -tī; 2 -tē, pl.] 1. Something, as a gem, prepared for inlaying upon some object that is to be ornamented or incrusted. 2. Anat. (1) The basal portion of the crura cerebri. See illus. (2) The bony layer investing the root of a tooth; crusta petrosa. See illus. under TOOTH. 3. A hard coating or covering; a crust. 4. Bot. The brittle upper surface of some lichens. [L., crust.] — crusta lactea, substantia nigra.

Crusta.

Cross-section of the peduncles of the brain, or crura cerebri. a, aqueduct of Sylvius; b, tegmentum; c, crusta or pes pedunculi; d, substantia nigra.

Crus-ta'ce-a, 1 krus-tē'shı-ə; 2 crŭs-tā'she-a, n. pl. Zool. A prime division of arthropods, containing lobsters, crabs, crawfish, shrimps, prawns, barnacles, sow-bugs, etc. The leading divisions are Malacostraca, Entomostraca, and Leptostraca. [< L. crusta, crust, from the crust-like shell.] — crusta'cean, a. & n. — crusta'ce-old, a. — crus-ta"ce-ol'o-gy, n. Carcinology. — crus-ta"ce-o-log'i-cal, a. — crus-ta"ce-ol'o-gist, n. — crus-ta"ce-o-ru'brin, n. A red pigment found in some crustaceans.

1. Male crawfish (Astacus fluviatilis), dorsal view: ant, antennules; a, a, antennæ; ey, eye; C, cephalothorax — r, rostrum; co, cephalostegite; cv, cervical groove; br. c, branchiocardiac grooves; om, omostegite; A, abdomen; t, tergum; p, pleuron; T, telson; G, ambulatory legs — 3, ischiopodite, 4, 4, meropodite, 5, 5, carpopodite, 6, 6, propodite, 7, 7, dactylopodite. 2. Female of the crawfish, from the ventral side and partly dissected: sc, scale of antenna; md, mandible with palpi; mx, mx', first and second maxillæ; f, abdominal feet (pleopods); go, genital opening; ov, ova; an, anus.

crus-ta'ceous, 1 krus-tā'shus; 2 crŭs-tā'shŭs, a. 1. Zool. (1) Having a crust-like shell; of or pertaining to the Crustacea. (2) Entom. Having a thin and hard, but not rigid, crust. 2. Bot. (1) Of hard and brittle texture. (2) Having a thallus that forms a crust so closely adhering to the substratum that it can not be separated without injury: said of some lichens. 3. Of, pertaining to, or like a crust or shell. [< L. crusta, crust.] — crus-ta'ceous-ness, n.

crus'ta-cite, 1 krus'tə-sait; 2 crŭs'ta-cīt, n. A fossil of or like a crustacean.

crust'al, 1 krust'əl; 2 crŭst'al, a. 1. Of or pertaining to the earth's crust.

There is . . . but little if any evidence of diminished activity in crustal movement during recent geologic time.
R. S. WOODWARD in Am. Geologist Nov., 1889, p. 280.

2. [Rare.] Relating to or like crust; crustaceous. 3. Of or pertaining to a crustal.

crust'al, n. One of the elements of a given order which compose the crust of an element of another order: a word used in the translation of Swedenborg.

crust'a-log'i-cal, crus-tal'o-gist, crus-tal'o-gy. Same as CRUSTACEOLOGICAL, etc.

crus'tate, 1 krus'tēt; 2 crŭs'tāt, a. Covered with a crust; as, crustate basalt. [< LL. crustatus, pp. of crusto, crust, < L. crusta, crust.] crust'tat-ed‡. — crus-ta'tion, n. An incrustation; a crust. [crust.

crus-tif'ic, 1 krus-tif'ik; 2 crŭs-tif'ic, a. [Rare.] Forming a crust.

crust"i-fi-ca'tion, 1 krust'ı-fı-kē'shən; 2 crŭst'i-fi-cā'shon, n. Geol. The characteristic structure of mineral deposits, often banded, when formed from circulating liquids, on the walls of rock-cavities or -fissures. [< CRUST + L. facio, make.] crus'tose, 1 krus'tōs; 2 crŭs'tōs, a. Bot. Crust-like; crustaceous.

crust'y, 1 krust'ı; 2 crŭst'y, a. [CRUST'I-ER; CRUST'I-EST.] 1. Crust-like. 2. Morosely curt in manner or speech; cross; surly; as, a crusty old bachelor. Syn.: see ACRIMONIOUS; MOROSE. — crust'i-ly, adv. — crust'i-ness, n. 1. The quality of being crusty. 2. Surliness.

crut[1], 1 krut; 2 crŭt, n. The shaggy part of oak-bark. [Cp. F. croûte, crust, < L. crusta, crust.]

crut[2], n. [North. Eng.] A dwarf.

crutch, } 1 kruch; 2 crŭch, vt. 1. To prop up, as on cruch[F], } crutches. 2. In soap-making, to stir with a crutch.

crutch, n. 1. A staff with a concave crosspiece fitting under the armpit, and often with a grip for the hands midway on the staff, used as a support in walking.

Labour is a blind cripple, and it is contented for the organisation of unionism that it provides a powerful crutch for the labourer. J. W. CROMBIE in Westminster Rev., Oct., 1891, p. 358.

2. Any one of various mechanical devices involving the principle or use of such a support. (1) Naut. (a) A forked support for a swinging boom when not in use. (b) The part of a ship's knee-timber strengthening the heels of the cant-timbers abaft. (c) A support for spare spars and booms. In nautical uses also written crotch. (2) The leg-rest on a woman's saddle. (3) The cross-handle of a casting-ladle. (4) The forked support of the anchor-escapement of a clock. (5) In military engineering, a temporary wooden support for the cap-sill of a gallery-case. (6) In soap-boiling, a wooden implement or mechanical arrangement for stirring the ingredients; a crutching-machine. (7) A rack. (8) Tanning. An instrument used in hand-staking. (9) [Gt. Brit.] A hooked rod used to immerse sheep while washing. 3. The crotch of a human body. 4†. The place where the flukes of a whale's tail come together. [ME. crucche, < AS. crice, crutch, staff, orig. hooked stick; cp. CROOK.] — cruccheț; crutcheț. See CRUCH.

— crutch'-han"dle, n. A T-shaped handle, especially of a cane. — c.-handled, a. — c.-hole, n. A hole in a boat-rail for a steering-oar, or one for a stanchion to hold a boom or other spar in place.

crutch'et, 1 kruch'et; 2 crŭch'ĕt, n. [Dial., Eng.] The common perch.

crutch'ings, 1 kruch'ıŋz; 2 crŭch'ings, n. pl. [Austral.] Wool rubbed or clipped from the buttocks and tail of herded sheep. [crwth‡.

cruth, 1 krūth; 2 cruth, n. Same as CROWD[2]. crut‡; cruve, 1 krūv; 2 cruv, n. Same as CRUIVE.

Cru"vell'hier', 1 krū'vēl'yē'; 2 crū'vel'yę', Jean (2/9 1791–2/9 1874). A French anatomist and author, whose name has been given to a progressive form of paralysis. See ATROPHY.

cry"al-ge'si-a, 1 krai'al-jī'sı-ə; 2 cry"ăl-ĝē'si-a, n. Pathol. Pain following an application of cold. [< Gr. kryos, cold, + algēsis, pain.]

cry'-ba"by, 1 krai'-bē"bı; 2 cry'-bā"by, n. A person, especially a child, who cries much and readily.

cry'er, 1 krai'ər; 2 cry'er, n. 1. Same as CRIER. 2. A young or female goshawk, the falcon-gentle. [Def. 2, < F. gruyer, trained to hunt cranes, < grue, < L. grus, crane.]

cry"es-the'sia, 1 krai"es-thī'zə; 2 cry"ĕs-thē'zha, n. Pathol. Abnormal sensitiveness to cold. [< Gr. kryos, cold, + ESTHESIA.]

cry'ing, 1 krai'ıŋ; 2 cry'ing, pa. Calling for immediate action or redress; notorious; urgent; great; as, a crying evil. — cry'ing, n.

cry'ing-bird", 1 krai'ıŋ-būrd"; 2 cry'ing-bird", n. A courlan.

cryket, n. A creek.

cry"mo-dyn'i-a, 1 krai"mo-din'ı-ə; 2 cry"mo-dyn'i-a, n. Chronic rheumatism. [< Gr. krymos, chilliness (< kryos, cold), + odynē, pain.]

cry"mo-ther"a-peu'tics, 1 krai"mo-ther"ə-pū'tiks; 2 cry"mo-ther"a-pū'tics, n. Med. The treatment of disease by the use of intensely cold local applications. [< Gr. krymos, chilliness, + THERAPEUTICS.] cry"mo-ther'a-py‡.

cry'o-, 1 krai'o-; 2 cry'o-. From Greek kryos, cold, frost: a combining form. — cry-oc'o-nite, n. Mineral. An ashy dust which collects on arctic ice: supposed to be meteoritic. — cry'o-gen, n. A freezing-mixture. — cry"o-gen'ic, a. cry"o-hy'drate, n. Chem. A compound, as of salt with water, which forms below the freezing-point of water. — cry"o-hy'dric, a. Referring to the freezing-point of a cryohydrate; as, a cryohydric temperature. — cry'o-lite, n. Mineral. A vitreous snow-white translucent sodium-aluminum fluorid (Na_3AlF_6) occurring crystalline or massive. It is a source of aluminum, and is used in making soda and also glass, to which it gives a milky hue. — cry"o-lith'i-o-nite, n. Mineral. A crystallized mineral composed of sodium, lithium, and aluminum ($Li_3Na_3Al_2F_{12}$), found in Greenland. — cry-om'e-ter, n. Physics. An instrument for measuring a lower temperature than the ordinary mercury-thermometer will indicate, as an alcohol-thermometer. — cry"o-phor'ic, a. Relating to the cryophorus. — cry-oph'o-rus, n. An instrument of various forms for showing the decrease of temperature in water through evaporation: so called because such decrease may freeze the water. — cry-oph'yl-lite, n. Mineral. An emerald-green iron-aluminum silicate containing lithia and potassium ($H_2F_4(Li.K)_7FeAl_4Si_{10}O_{40}$), that crystallizes in the monoclinic system, and has optical properties similar to zinnwaldite. — cry"o-plank'ton, n. Microscopic colored animals and colored plants collectively, mostly algic, which, occurring in vast numbers, cause the phenomena of red snow and green snow. — cry"o-scop'ic, a. Observing by means of freezing. — cry-os'co-py, n. Physics. The study of low temperatures, especially of freezing by evaporation. — cry'o-stase, n. Chem. An antiseptic compound formed of equal parts of saponin, phenol, and camphor with a trace of oil of turpentine.

Cry-phæ'us, 1 krı-fī'us; 2 cry-fē'ŭs, n. Paleon. A genus of fossil trilobites from the Devonian strata. [< Gr. kryphatos, concealed.]

cryph'i-o-lite, 1 krif'ı-o-lait; 2 cryf'i-o-lit, n. Mineral. A vitreous honey-yellow calcium-magnesium phosphate closely related to wagnerite. [< Gr. kryphtos, concealed, + -LITE.]

cryp'sis, 1 krip'sıs; 2 cryp'sis, n. 1. Concealment. 2†. Same as KRUPSIS. [< Gr. krypsis, hiding, < kryptō, hide.]

cryp-sor'chid, 1 krip-sōr'kıd; 2 cryp-sôr'cid, n. Same as CRYPTORCHIS. [< Gr. kryptō, hide, + orchis, testicle.] cryp-sor'chist‡.

crypt, 1 kript; 2 crypt, n. 1. A secret recess or vault, especially one used, as in the catacombs, for interment. 2. A vault under some churches, used as a chapel, cemetery, etc.

Portions of this edifice [the church built by Constantine on the site of the Holy Sepulcher] remain to the present day, and its crypt is still used as a cistern by the Copts.

Crypt (11th Century) of the Church of Saint Eutroplus, at Saintes, France.

3. Anat. A minute follicle or secreting cavity of the skin or mucous membrane. [< L. crypta, < Gr. kryptē, f. of kryptos, hidden, < kryptō, hide.] — crypts of Lieberkühn (Anat.), microscopic tubular glands that open in great numbers upon the surface of the mucous membrane of the small and large intestines. follicles of Lieberkühn‡; glands of Lieberkühn‡. — Morgagni's crypts (Anat.), small depressions in the prostatic portion of the urethra.

cryp'ta, 1 krip'tə; 2 cryp'ta, n. [-TÆ, 1 -tī; 2 -tē, pl.] Same as CRYPT, 3.

Cryp"ta-can-thod'i-dæ, 1 krip"tə-kan-thod'ı-dī; 2 cryp"ta-cān-thōd'i-dē, n. pl. Ich. A family of blennioidean fishes with an eel-like body, long spiny dorsal fin, and oblong pitted head. Cryp"ta-can'tho-des, n. (t. g.) [< CRYPTO- + Gr. akantha, spine, + eidos, form.] Cryp"ta-can'thi-dæ‡. — cryp"ta-can'tho-did, n. — cryp"ta-can'tho-doid, a. & n. [a crypt.

crypt'ed, 1 kript'ed; 2 cryp't'ed, a. [Rare.] Vaulted.

cryp'tic, 1 krip'tik; 2 cryp'tic, a. 1. Not plainly evident or understandable; hidden; secret; occult.

The cryptic forms of error and of wrong.
OWEN MEREDITH Wanderer, Epilogue pt. iii, st. 33.

2. In animal coloration, fitted to effect concealment amid the natural environment. See ANIMAL COLORS, under COLOR. 3. Of the nature of or resembling a crypt. [< LL. cryptic us, < Gr. kryptikos, < kryptos; see CRYPT.] cryp'ti-cal‡. — Cryptic Rite, a method of Freemasonry, embracing certain high degrees. Called The Council in the United States. — c. syllogism (Logic), an incomplete or irregular syllogism. — cryp'ti-cal-ly, adv.

cryp'ti-din, } 1 krip'tı-din, -din or -dīn; 2 cryp'ti-din, cryp'ti-dine, } -din or -dīn, n. Chem. A reddish-yellow oily quinolin base ($C_{11}H_{11}N$), from coal-tar. [< Gr. kryptos; see CRYPT.]

cryp-ti'tis, 1 krip-tai'tis or -tī'tis; 2 cryp-ti'tis or -tī'tis, n. Same as FOLLICULITIS.

cryp'to-, 1 krip'to-; 2 cryp'to-. From Greek kryptos, hidden (see CRYPT): a combining form. — cryp'to-branch.

I. a. Having the gills (branchiæ) hidden. ‖ II. n. An animal of the Cryptobranchidæ.— Cryp"to-bran"chi-a'ta, n. pl. Animals with concealed gills. (1) Conch. A section of anthobranchiate nudibranchiates with a radula and retractile gills, including the Doridida. (2) Herp. The Derotremata. — cryp"to-bran'chi-ate, a. & n.— Cryp"to-bran'chi-dæ, n. pl. Herp. A family of trematoderous amphibians like large salamanders, with teeth on the anterior border of the vomeropalatine bone; hellbenders. Cryp"to-bran'chus, n. (t. g.) — cryp"to-bran'chid, n.— cryp"to-bran'choid, a. & n.— Cryp"to-Cal'vin-ism, n. 1. A modification of the Lutheran doctrine of the eucharist, belonging to the 16th century, charged with approximating the Calvinistic view: an opprobrious term. 2. [U. S.] An epithet applied to certain doctrinal teachings by the Missouri Lutherans.— Cryp"to-Cal'vin-is'tic, a. & n.— Cryp"to-Cal"vin-is'tic, a.— cryp'to-carp, n. Bot. Same as CYSTOCARP.— cryp"to-car'pic, a.— Cryp"to-car'pæ, n. pl. Zooph. A section of discophorous acalephs with hidden genital organs; Hydromedusæ.— cryp"to-car'pous, a.— Cryp"to-ca'ry-a, n. Bot. A genus of apetalous aromatic trees, natives of Asia, Australia, Brazil, and South Africa.— Cryp"to-Ca-thol'i-cism, n. A supposedly esoteric system of Roman Catholicism which flourished in the middle ages.— Cryp"to-Cath'o-lic, a. & n.— Cryp"to-ceph'a-la, n. pl. Zool. That division of polychætous worms in which the mouth-parts are much reduced.— cryp"to-ceph'a-lous, a. Having the head concealed. cryp"to-ce-phal'ic‡.— cryp"to-ceph'a-lus, n. [-LI, pl.] Terat. A monster with a hidden rudimentary head.— Cryp"to-cer'a-ta, n. pl. Entom. A section of pagiopodous bugs with antennæ hidden under the head.— cryp"toc'er-ate, cryp"toc'er-ous, a.— Cryp"to-che'la-tæ, n. pl. Crust. An order of pycnogonideans with chelifori in the young, but obsolete in the old, as in Ammotheidæ, etc.— cryp-toch'e-late, a.— Cryp"to-Chris'tian, n. One who is a Christian in secret.— cryp'-to-chro"ism, n. Physics. A quality of obscure radiation depending on wave-length and corresponding to color in visible radiation; the "invisible color" of infra-red or ultra-violet rays.— cryp"to-clas'tic, a. Geol. Composed of microscopic fragmental grains, derived from preexisting rocks, as shale.— cryp'to-clite, n. Gram. An irregular substantive in which the regular inflections have been replaced by phonetic modifications; as, woman, plural women. — Cryp"to-cœ'li-a, n. pl. Zool. The Urochorda.— Cryp"-to-cri'nus, n. A genus of Silurian cystideans.— cryp"to-crys'tal-line, a. Mineral. & Geol. Composed of crystalline particles not distinguishable by the naked eye.— Cryp"to-cys'tes, n. pl. Zool. A group of cell-parasites belonging to the order Myxosporidia and having pear-shaped spores.— cryp"to-de'list, n. One secretly a deist.— Cryp"to-dibran"chi-a'ta, n. pl. Conch. The Dibranchiata.— cryp"-to-di-bran'chi-ate, a. & n.— cryp"to-did'y-mus, n. [-MI, pl.] Terat. A monstrosity consisting of one fetus enclosed within another.— Cryp"to-di'ræ, n. pl. Herp. A superfamily or suborder of tortoises having a bony shell with marginal plates and neck bending in a vertical plane, including the common tortoises. Cryp"to-del'ra‡.— cryp-tod'i-ran. I. a. Of or pertaining to the Cryptodira. II. n. One of the Cryptodiræ.— cryp'to-dire, n.— cryp"-to-di'rous, a.— Cryp"to-don'ta, n. pl. Conch. An extinct order of bivalve shells with two muscular impressions, entire pallial line, and toothless hinge.— cryp'to-dont, a.— cryp'to-doub"le, n. Astron. A binary star, one member of which is dark.— Cryp"to-dril'i-dæ, n. pl. Helminth. A family of earthworms of the order Oligochæta.— cryp"-to-dy-nam'ic, a. Relating to or having latent force.

cryp'to-gam, 1 krip'to-gam; 2 crўp'to-ğăm, n. Bot. A plant of the class Cryptogamia. [< CRYPTO- + Gr. gamos, marriage.]

Cryp"to-ga'mi-a, 1 krip'to-gē'mı-ə; 2 crўp'to-ğā'mi-a, n. pl. Bot. The lower of the two great series of plants as divided by Linnæus. They have no true flowers containing stamens and pistils, nor seeds, but propagate by means of spores.

This group, while still in convenient and popular usage, has been variously arranged, the following being the accepted classification: (1) higher or vascular cryptogams, the Pteridophyta, including ferns, horsetails, and lycopods; (2) lower or cellular cryptogams, embracing (a) Bryophyta, including mosses and liverworts, and (b) Thallophyta, including algæ and fungi.— cryp"to-ga'mi-an, a.— cryp"-to-gam'ic, a. Bot. Of or pertaining to the Cryptogamia.— cryp-tog'a-mist, n. Bot. A person proficient in cryptogamic botany.— cryp-tog'a-mous, a. Bot. Pertaining to or having the characteristics of the class Cryptogamia.

Cryptogamous or Flowerless Plants do not bear real flowers, having stamens and pistils, nor produce real seeds, or bodies having an embryo ready formed in them.

ASA GRAY How Plants Grow p. 58. [I. B. & CO. 1876.]

— cryp-tog'a-my, n. Bot. The state of being cryptogamous, or of having "concealed" fructification.

cryp'to-gear, n. Mech. Any one of various forms of epicyclic gear in which two small toothed wheels actuate a larger exterior wheel cogged on its inner rim.— cryp-tog'e-nous, a. Of obscure origin. cryp"to-ge-net'ic‡; cryp"to-gen'ic‡.— cryp"to-gil-o'ma, n. Pathol. An early stage of glioma of the retina.

cryp'to-gram, 1 krip'to-gram; 2 crўp'to-ğrăm, n. Anything written in characters that are secret or so arranged as to have a hidden meaning; a cipher writing; cryptograph. [< CRYPTO- + Gr. gramma, writing, < graphō, write.] — cryp"to-gram'ma-tist, n. One who can solve cryptograms.— cryp"to-gram'mic, a.

cryp'to-graph, 1 krip'to-graf; 2 crўp'to-ğrăf, n. 1. A cryptogram.

The Jew and the Christian who entered on such themes [atrocities committed by the Government] could only do so under the disguise of a cryptograph.

FARRAR Christianity p. 46. [E. P. D.]

2. A system of cipher-writing; a cipher. [< CRYPTO- + Gr. graphō, write.] — cryp-tog'ra-pher, n. One who writes in cipher, or who reads such writing. cryp-tog'ra-phist‡.— cryp"to-graph'ic, a. 1. Written in cipher. 2. Used for cipher-writing purposes; as, cryptographic paper. 3. Petrol. Having a graphic structure of intergrowths so minute that it can not be resolved by a microscope. cryp-tog'ra-phal‡; cryp"to-graph'i-cal‡.— cryp-tog'ra-phy, n. 1. The art of cipher-writing. 2. A system of cipher-writing; a cryptograph.

cryp"to-hal'ite, n. Mineral. A gray ammonium fluosilicate, $(NH_4)_2SiF_6$, that crystallizes in the isometric system. — cryp'to-her"e-sy, n. Heresy not divulged.— cryp"to-her'e-tic, n.— Cryp"to-Jes'u-it, n. A person in secret communion with Jesuits.— Cryp"to-Jes'u-it-ism, n.

cryp'to-lin, 1 krip'to-lin; 2 crўp'to-lin, n. A fluid of organic composition, occasionally found in the cavities of chrysoberyl, quartz, and topaz. On exposure to the atmosphere it becomes a hard resinous substance. [< CRYPTO- + -OL.]

cryp'to-mere, 1 krip'to-mir; 2 crўp'to-mēr, n. Biol. A plant character which may exist in the germ-cells without making its presence visible.

Cryp"to-me'ri-a, n. Bot. 1. A genus of evergreen trees of the pine family, the only species (C. japonica) being a native of northern China. 2. [c-] A tree of this genus.— cryp-tom'er-ous, a. Geol. Finely granular, as rocks.— cryp"tom-ne'si-a, n. Memory exercised by means of the subliminal consciousness; the potency of memory that is latent or inert.— Cryp"to-mon"a-di'na, n. pl. A protozoan family including the Oxyrrhis, Chilomonas, Cyathomonas, and Cryptomonas, belonging to the order Flagellata.— Cryp"-to-neu'ra, n. pl. Zool. A division of organisms supposed to be without nerves; Acrita.— cryp"to-neu'rous, a.— cryp'to-nym, n. A secret name; specifically, the name given to a member of a brotherhood, secret society, or association, which is known only by his fellow members.— cryp-ton'y-mous, a.— Cryp"to-pa-ram'er-a, n. pl. Zooph. A grade of zoantharian Anthozoa including the order Actinidæ.— Cryp"to-pen-tam'er-a, n. pl. Entom. The Subtetramera.

Twig and Leaves of Cryptomeria japonica.

— cryp"to-pen-tam'er-ous, a.— cryp"to-per'thite, n. Mineral. A variety of feldspar, probably perthite, but with structure so fine that it can not be discerned by the microscope.— Cryp"to-phag'i-dæ, n. pl. Entom. A family of small, clavicorn beetles, with a whole thorax and long first ventral segment. Cryp-toph'a-gus, n. (t. g.)— cryp-toph'a-gid, a. & n.— cryp-toph'a-goid, a.— cryp"to-phan'ic, a. Barely perceptible: said of an amorphic acid ($C_{16}H_{18}N_2O_{10}$), of which slight traces are believed bysome to be found in urine.— Cryp"to-phi-al'i-dæ, n. pl. Crust. A family of abdominalian cirripeds having abdominal appendages in three pairs and an exsertile mouth, and burrowing in shells. Cryp"to-phil'a-lus, n. (t. g.)— cryp"to-phil'a-lid, n.— cryp"to-phil'a-loid, a.— cryp'to-phone, n. An electrical apparatus hidden beneath a roadway to give notice of approaching footsteps.— cryp"toph-thal'mos, n. Pathol. 1. Complete congenital adhesion of the eyelids, usually attended by imperfect development of the eyeballs. 2. A person so afflicted. cryp"toph-thal'mi-a‡.— Cryp"-to-phyc'e-æ, n. pl. Bot. Same as CYANOPHYCEÆ.— cryp'to-phyte, n. [Rare] A cryptogam, or one of the lower cryptogams; a thallophyte.— cryp'to-pin, cryp'to-pine, n. Chem. A white crystalline alkaloid ($C_{21}H_{23}NO_5$) contained in small quantity in opium. cryp-to'pi-a‡. — Cryp"to-pod'i-dæ, n. pl. Crust. A family of malacostracan crabs with the carapace laterally expanded and covering the legs. Cryp"to-po'di-a, n. (t. g.)— cryp-top'o-did, n.— cryp-top'o-doid, a.— cryp"to-por'ti-cus, n. Rom. Antiq. 1. A porch before a crypt. 2. A gallery, generally wholly or in part subterranean, having side-walls with large openings: not one with columns.— Cryp"-to-proc'ti-dæ, n. pl. Mam. A family of æluroid carnivores with an elongated body, plantigrade feet, and no allisphenoid canal: including the foussa. Cryp"to-proc'ta, n. (t. g.)— cryp"to-proc'tid, n.— cryp"to-proc'toid, a. & n.— Cryp"to-proc-ti'næ, n. pl. Mam. The Cryptoproctidæ as a subfamily.— cryp"to-proc'tine, a. & n. — cryp"to-py'lic, a. Pathol. Accompanied by hidden discharge of pus.— cryp-tor'chis, n. [-CHI-DES, pl.] Terat. An individual in whom the testes have not descended into the scrotum. cryp-sor'chid‡; cryp-sor'chis‡; cryp-tor'chid‡.— cryp-tor'chism, n. cryp-tor'chidism‡.— cryp'to-scope, n. Optics. An instrument for observing fluorescence; a fluoroscope.— cryp"to-scop'ic, a. — cryp-tos'co-py, n. Optics. The study of fluorescence by means of the cryptoscope.— Cryp"to-stem'mi-dæ, n. pl. Arach. A family of opilionine arachnids, embracing all the Rictnulea. Cryp"to-stem'ma, n. (t. g.) Cryp"to-stem-mol'dæ‡.— cryp"to-stem'mid, a. & n.— cryp"to-stem'moid, a.— cryp"to-sto'ma, n. [-MA-TA, pl.] Bot. A sac-like receptacle in certain algæ: it contains only sterile filaments.— cryp"to-sto'ma-tous, a.— Cryp"to-te-tram'er-a, n. pl. Entom. A group of beetles having three well-developed tarsal joints and a fourth concealed, including the ladybugs or coccinellids, etc.— cryp"to-te-tram'er-ous, a.— cryp'tous, a. [Rare.] Secret; concealed.— cryp"to-zo'ic, a. 1. Zool. Living hidden: said of animals whose habit is to hide themselves under stones, logs, etc. 2. Petrog. Concealing evidence of organic origin: said of certain limestones whose structure can not be determined without the aid of a microscope.— Cryp"to-zo'ni-a, n. pl. Echin. An order of starfishes with marginal plates inconspicuous and papulæ often on the actinal surface.— cryp"-to-zo'nate, a. & n.— cryp"to-zy-gos'i-ty, n. The quality of being cryptozygous.— cryp-toz'y-gous, a. Crantol. Having the zygomatic arches hidden when the skull is viewed from above.

Cryp-tu'ri, 1 krip-tiū'rai; 2 crўp-tū'ri, n. pl. Ornith. An order of birds with a carinate sternum and dromæognathous palate, including the Tinamidæ. [< Gr. kryptos; see CRYPT.] — cryp'tu-rous, a.

crys., abbr. Crystal; crystallography.

cryst., crystal., crystallog., abbr. Crystallography.

crys'tal, 1 kris'tal; 2 crўs'tal, tl. [-TALED or -TALLED; -TALING or -TAL-LING.] [Rare.] To cause to crystallize.

crys'tal, a. 1. Composed of or like crystal; extremely clear; limpid; crystalline.

His drink the crystal well. T. PARNELL The Hermit l. 4.

2†. Of or pertaining to the crystalline heavens (see phrases under CRYSTALLINE).

Syn.: clear, crystalline, glassy, lucid, pellucid, pure, transparent. Glassy is an admissible synonym of crystal or crystalline, but has in some connections the unfavorable sense of shining with a superficial, and perhaps ghastly, glitter; as, a glassy eye; a glassy stare.— Ant.: cloudy, dark, dim, muddy, opaque, thick, turbid.

crys'tal, n. 1. Chem. & Mineral. (1) The solid mathematical form, included under plane surfaces, systematically arranged and connected by angles of fixed and definite value, which a chemically homogeneous substance tends to assume by undisturbed growth. (2) A chemically homogeneous body which, in the absence of internal or external stress, is anisotropic and possesses the property of growing in a supersaturated solution. (3) A liquid possessing certain crystalline properties such as interference colors and double refraction. Such a liquid is produced when cholesteryl is melted. 2. Colorless, or nearly colorless, transparent quartz. 3. (1) Flint glass: usually having a base of lead and potash, tho the Bohemian has a lime-and-potash base. (2) An object, generically, made of such glass; specif., cut-glass ornaments or dishes. 4. A clear white diamond. 5. The glass protecting a watch-dial. 6. Her. White or pearl: said when blazoning by precious stones. 7. A material of corded silk with a wool filling. 8†. A fine quality of durance or tammy. [< F. cristal, < L. crystallum, < Gr. krystallos, < kryos, frost.] cris'tal†; crys'talle†.— asthma crystals, needle-like crystals present in the sputum of persons suffering from asthma.— berg'-crys"tal, n. Rock crystal; quartz.— Boettcher's crystals (Pathol.), crystals formed by the prostate and ejected with its secretion: perhaps the same as Charcot's crystals.— chamber crystals, crystals of nitrosulfonic acid ($SO_2HO.NO_2$), formed in the leaden chambers used in the manufacture of sulfuric acid.— Charcot's crystals (Pathol.), crystals of rhomboidal or octohedral form observed in the sputum of asthmatic and bronchitic persons. Charcot-Leyden crystals‡.— cleavage c., loosely, a crystal fragment bounded by cleavage faces; a cleavage fragment. See CLEAVAGE.— coffin-lid crystals, triple phosphate crystals in urine, appearing coffin-shaped under the microscope. — compound c., a twin crystal.— corroded crystals (Petrog.), crystals which have undergone partial resorption by the molten magma before its hardening.— crys'tal-cell", n. Bot. A plant-cell containing a crystal or cluster of crystals. — c.-gazing, n. Psychol. 1. The act of looking into a ball of crystal with the object of inducing hallucinatory pictures within it, or exercising divination by it; crystallomancy. 2. The ability to see such visions. c.-vision‡.— c.-seer, n. One who pretends to tell the future by gazing into a crystal. c.-gazer‡.— crystals of tartar, cream of tartar. — crystals of Venus†, crystalline acetate of copper.— c.-varnish, n. A solution of Canada balsam in turpentine spirits, used as a varnish for maps, pictures, etc.— dumb-bell crystals, calcium oxalate crystals, occasionally found in urine.— equatorial c., a crystal whose main axis of symmetry is perpendicular to the principal plane of symmetry. — hedgehog crystals, sodium urate crystals in urine characterized by numerous needle-like projections.— hopper c., a hollow pyramid-shaped crystal or one which, owing to rapid and imperfect crystallization, has faces thus shaped. — Iceland c., same as ICELAND SPAR.— knife-rest crystals, those of triple phosphate in the urine.— leucocytic crystals, Charcot's crystals: so named from their frequent association with leucocytes.— liquid c., same as CRYSTAL, 1 (3).— negative c. 1. A cavity in a mineral mass having the form of a crystal, usually of the same system of crystallization as the mineral. 2. A crystal exhibiting negative double refraction. See NEGATIVE.— Platner's crystals, crystals formed by bile-acid salts.— secondary c., a crystal derived from an elementary form.— skeleton c., a hollow crystal with developed edges.— Teichmann's crystals, crystals of hemin made by evaporating hemoglobin with sodium chlorid and glacial acetic acid.— Virchow's crystals, hematoidin crystals.— Whetstone crystals, xanthin crystals occasionally seen in urine.— crys-tal'lic, a. Of or pertaining to crystals or crystallization.— crys"tal-lif'erous, a. Bearing or containing crystals.— crys"tal-lig'erous, a. Containing crystals; as, the crystalligerous swarm-spores of radiolarians.

Crys'tal Falls. A city in Iron county, Mich.

Crys'tal Hills. The White Mountains, New Hampshire.

crys-tal'li-form, 1 kris-tal'i-fōrm; 2 crўs-tăl'i-fōrm, a. Having a crystalline form. [< L. crystallum, crystal, + forma, form.]

crys'tal-lin, 1 kris'tal-in; 2 crўs'tal-in, n. 1. Globulin. 2. Anilin: a former name.

crys'tal-line, 1 kris'tal-in or -ain; 2 crўs'tal-in or -in (XIII), a. 1. Of, belonging, pertaining to, or having the nature of crystals; formed by crystallization; yielding or forming crystals; as, crystalline structure; a crystalline compound. 2. Like crystal; transparent; pure; clear; pellucid; as, the crystalline sky; the crystalline humor of the eye. 3. Composed of angular grains or particles more or less crystallized in place, and not of rounded fragments of preexistent masses: opposed to fragmental; as, granite is crystalline. [< L. crystallinus, < Gr. krystallinos, < krystallos; see CRYSTAL, n.]

Syn.: see CRYSTAL.— crystalline aggregate, any material, such as marble or granite, that is composed of coherent crystals or crystalline particles, especially one in which the constituents have grown together and are not elastic.— c. cone, a conical transparent, refractive body at the base of each ommatidium in a compound eye. See illus. under OMMATIDIUM.— c. heavens or spheres, in the old Ptolemaic astronomy, two spheres supposed to exist between the outer circle or primum mobile of the heavens (which moved and carried with it all its contents) and the region of the fixed stars.— c. lens or humor, a transparent biconvex lentiform body situated between the iris and the vitreous body. See EYE.— c. paper, paper brush-coated with dextrin and salt or a similar preparation.— c. style, a minute gelatinous rod, of doubtful utility, occurring in or about the cæcum of certain bivalve mollusks.

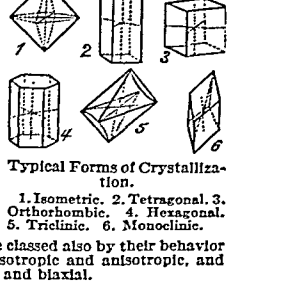
crys'tal-lite, 1 kris'tal-ait; 2 crўs'tal-it, n. Petrol. One of certain minute spherical, rod-shaped or hair-like bodies without the true properties of a crystal but resulting from a crystallizing tendency, observable in thin sections of igneous rock and in slags. [< Gr. krystallos; see CRYSTAL, n.] — crys"tal-lit'ic, a.

crys"tal-li'tis, 1 kris'tal-ai'tis or -i'tis; 2 crўs'tal-i'tis or -i'tis, n. Inflammation of the crystalline lens; phacitis.

crys"tal-li-za'tion, 1 kris'tal-ı-zē'shən; 2 crўs'tal-i-zā'shon, n. 1. The process of forming crystals; the act of crystallizing; figuratively, assemblage or presentment in concrete form.

There are six systems of crystallization, based upon the kind of symmetry possessed by crystals, or upon the manner in which the faces of the crystal are related to certain imaginary fixed lines, having definite direction and relative length, in the crystal. According as one or the other method of characterization is adopted, the systems are known as (1) the isometric, monometric, regular, cubic, tesseral, or tessular; (2) the tetragonal, dimetric, quadratic, pyramidal, or quaternary; (3) hexagonal or rhombohedral; (4) orthorhombic, orthosymmetric, trimetric, rhombic, or prismatic; (5) monoclinic, monosymmetric, clinorhombic, or oblique; (6) triclinic, asymmetric, clinorhomboidal, anorthic, or doubly oblique. Crystals are classed also by their behavior toward polarized light into isotropic and anisotropic, and the latter again into uniaxial and biaxial.



Typical Forms of Crystallization.

1. Isometric. 2. Tetragonal. 3. Orthorhombic. 4. Hexagonal. 5. Triclinic. 6. Monoclinic.

Crystallization is always effected in the laboratory by bringing the particles of solid bodies into a mobile state, either by solution, fusion, or vaporization.
FARADAY Chemical Manipulation, p. 50. [W. PH. 1827.]

2. The body formed by the crystallizing process.

crys'tal-lize, 1 kris'təl-aiz; 2 crȳs'tal-īz, v. [-LIZED; -LIZ'ING.] I. t. To cause to form crystals or become crystalline; figuratively, to bring together or give fixed shape to.

Thomas Jefferson . . . caught and crystallized the spirit of free institutions. DEPEW Orations and Speeches, p. 6. [CAS. CO.]

II. i. To assume the form of crystals or a crystalline structure; figuratively, to change from an indefinite or vague condition to a definite one; take on a definite aspect; grow together as if by cohesion. crys'tal-lis(e).

Glass melts at a greater heat, and will crystallize, if you let it cool slowly enough, in stars, much like snow.
RUSKIN Ethics of the Dust lect. iii, p. 41. [S. E. & CO. 1867.]

— crys'tal-liz"(or -lis")a-bl(e), a. — crys'tal-liz"er [or -lis"er], n. Anything that causes or helps crystallization, or a receptacle in which crystallization takes place.

crys'tal-lo-, 1 kris'təl-o-; 2 crȳs'tal-o-. From Greek krystallos, CRYSTAL: a combining form. — crys"tal-lo-ce-ram'ic, a. Designating the incrustation of glass upon clay.

crys'tal-lo-chore, 1 kris'təl-o-kōr; 2 crȳs'tal-o-cōr, n. Bot. Ecol. A plant distributed by glaciers.

crys'tal-loid, 1 kris'təl-oid; 2 crȳs'tal-ōd, n. The supposed odic force of crystals. See ODˀ. [< CRYSTAL + ODˀ.]

crys'tal-lo-drome, n. A substance, as a stone, that sinks into ice and forms a cylindrical cavity. — crys"tal-lo-en-grav'ing, n. A process of ornamenting glass by placing a design in the mold.

crys"tal-lo-gen'e-sis, 1 kris'təl-o-jen'ı-sis; 2 crȳs'tal-o-ĝĕn'e-sis, n. The development or growth of crystals. — crys"tal-lo-gen'ic, crys"tal-lo-gen'i-cal, a.

crys"tal-log'e-ny, 1 kris'təl-oj'ı-nı; 2 crȳs'tal-ŏĝ'e-ny, n. The science and theory of the production of crystals [< CRYSTALLO- + -GENY.] — crys"tal-lo-ge-net'ic, a. Of or pertaining to crystallogeny; as, crystallogenetic observations.

crys"tal-lo-gran'u-lar, a. In the form of a powder composed of minute crystals.

crys"tal-log'ra-phy, 1 kris'təl-og'ra-fı; 2 crȳs'tal-ŏg'-ra-fy, n. 1. The science of crystals. It includes geometrical, physical, and chemical crystallography. For the systems, see CRYSTALLIZATION. 2. A book treating of this science. [< CRYSTALLO- + -GRAPHY.] — crys"tal-log'ra-pher, n. One versed in crystallography. — crys"tal-lo-graph'ic, a. Of or pertaining to crystallography. -i-cal‡.— -i-cal-ly, adv.

crys'tal-loid, 1 kris'təl-oid; 2 crȳs'tal-ōid, a. Like a crystal. [< Gr. krystalloeidēs, < krystallos (see CRYSTAL): and see -OID.]

crys'tal-loid, n. 1. One of a class of substances, usually crystallizable, whose solutions are readily diffusible: opposed to colloid. 2. Bot. A crystal-like protein-body in plant-cells; a protein-crystal. — crys"tal-loi'dal, a.

Living matter displays, in fact, the energy of colloidal and the plan of crystalloidal matter.
MAUDSLEY Body and Mind p. 296. [MACM. 1873.]

crys"tal-lol-dl'tis, n. Pathol. Phacitis. — crys"tal-lol'o-gy, n. The science of the structure of crystals. It embraces crystallography and crystallogeny. — crys"tal-lo-mag-net'ic, a. Pertaining to or characteristic of a crystal under magnetic influence. — crys'tal-lo-man"cy, n. Divination by gazing into a crystal globe, precious stone, or bright metal. See CRYSTAL-GAZING, under CRYSTAL. — crys"tal-lo-met'ric, a. Relating to crystallometry. — crystallometric angles, the angles formed by the symmetrical planes of a crystal, being either 30, 45, 60, or 90 degrees. — crys"tal-lom'e-try, n. The art of measuring the angles of crystals: a branch of crystallography. — crys'tal-lo-type, n. Photog. A photograph printed on glass. — crys'tal-lo-ty"py, n. Print. A method by which tracings resembling hoar-frost, formed by the crystallization of certain salts, are transferred to surfaces for printing. — crys'tal-lur"gyt, n. Crystallization.

Crys'tal Springs. A village in Copiah county, Miss.

crys'tal-wort", 1 kris'təl-wûrt"; 2 crȳs'tal-wûrt", n. 1. Any liverwort of the family Ricciaceæ. 2. The hepatica.

crys'tic, 1 kris'tık; 2 crȳs'tic, a. Geol. Pertaining to ice, especially to glaciology. [< Gr. krystallos, ice.]

crys'to-graph, 1 kris'to-graf; 2 crȳs'to-grâf, n. A writing or drawing on glass. [< CRYSTAL + -GRAPH.]

crys-to'le-um, 1 kris-tō'lı-um, 2 crȳs-tō'le-ūm, n. A copy on glass of an oil-painting or photograph; also, the method of producing it. [< CRYSTAL + L. oleum, oil.]

crys'to-phene, 1 kris'to-fin; 2 crȳs'to-fēn, n. The sheet of perpetual ice beneath the surface of the arctic tundra. [< Gr. krystallos, ice, + phainō, show.]

C. S. A., abbr. Confederate States Army.

Csab'a, 1 chəb'o; 2 chab'a, n. A town in Hungary, united with Békés. See BÉKÉS.

Csal-kis'ten, 1 chal-kis'ten, 2 chl-kis'tēn, n. A district in Hungary between the Danube and the Theiss; 340 sq. m.

Csa-nad', 1 cha-nod'; 2 cha-nad', n. A county in E. Hungary; 699 sq. m.; capital, Csanad.

Csa-nad' Pa'lo-ta. A town in Csanad county, Hungary.

Csan'ta-vér, 1 chon'to-vēr; 2 chan'ta-vęr, n. A village in Bacs-Bodrog county, Hungary.

C. S. C., abbr. Civil Service Club; Congregatio Sacri Cordis, (Congregation of the Sacred Heart); Congregatio Sanctæ Crucis (Congregation of the Holy Cross); Conspicuous Service Cross.

Cser-ven'ka, 1 cher-ven'ko; 2 chēr-vēn'ka, n. A town in Bacs-Bodrog county, Hungary.

Csik, 1 chik; 2 chik, n. A county of Hungary; 1,735 sq. m.; capital, Csik-Szereda.

csk. [CSKS., pl.], abbr. Cask.

C. S. O., abbr. Chief Signal Officer.

Cso'ma de Kö'ros, 1 chō'mo de kō'ros; 2 chō'ma de kō'rōs, Alexander (ı/1784–ı/1842). A Hungarian traveler and philologist: Tibetan and English Dictionary and Grammar.

Cson-grād', 1 chon-grād'; 2 chōn-grād', n. 1. A county in Hungary; 1,313 sq. m.; capital, Szegedin. 2. A town in Hungary, 70 m. S. E. of Budapest.

C. S. P., abbr. Congregation of St. Paul (the Paulists).

Csp., abbr. Caspar.

C. SS. R., abbr. Congregatio Sanctissimi Redemptoris (Congregation of the Most Holy Redeemer), the Redemptorists.

C. S. T., abbr. Central Standard Time.

C. T., abbr. Certificate (stock reports); communicating trench.

Ct., abbr. Connecticut; Count, Court.

cten-, cteno-, (tēn-), comb: combining forms. — cten"a-can'thus, n. A spine of an extinct selachian often found in Carboniferous strata. — cten'ate, a. Having numerous tooth-like processes; comb-like. — ctene, n. A swimming-plate of a ctenophore. — cte-nid'i-al, a. Of or pertaining to a ctenidium. — Cte-nid"i-o-bran'chi-a, n. pl. Conch. 1. A suborder of zygobranch gastropods with large paired ctenidia or gills, as haliotids. 2. A suborder of tectibranchiate gastropods with a persistent ctenidium, as in aplysiids, etc. Cte-nid"i-o-bran"chi-a'ta.— cte-nid'i-o-branch, cte-nid"i-o-bran'chi-ate, a. & n. — cte-nid'i-um, n. [-I-A, pl.] I. One of the respiratory organs of mollusks; a gill-comb or gill-plume. 2. One of the comb-like structures situated on the body in certain insects, as fleas, and on the toes of some birds. — cten'i-form, a. Having the same eye-formula as spiders of the genus Ctenus. — Cten"o-bran'chi-a, n. pl. Conch. The Pectinibranchiata. Cten"o-bran"chi-a'ta. — cten'o-branch, cten"o-bran'chi-ate, a. & n. — cten'o-cyst, n. Zooph. The sensory body at the aboral pole of ctenophores, probably auditory or for regulating the movement of the swimming-plates. — Cten"o-dac"ty-li'næ, n. pl. Mam. A subfamily of octodontoid rodents with three molars in each jaw-bone; comb-rats. Cten"o-dac'ty-lus, n. (t. g.) — cten"o-dac'tyl, cten"o-dac'tyle, n. — cten"o-dac'ty-line, a. & n. — Cten"o-dip"ter-i'ni, n. pl. Paleon. An order of the Dipnoi with the bones of the skull small and numerous. — cten'o-dont, a. Having comb-like ridges on the teeth, as certain dipnoan fishes (genus Ctenodus). — Cten"o-don'ta, n. Paleon. A genus of taxodont fossil pelecypods occurring in Cambrian and Lower Silurian strata. — cten'oid. I. a. 1. Having a comb-like margin; pectinated, as the scales in Ctenoidei. 2. Of or pertaining to the Ctenoidei. II. n. One of the Ctenoidei. cten'idt. — Cte-noi'de-i, n. pl. Ich. An order of fishes with ctenoid scales. — cte-noi'de-an, cte-noi'di-an, a. & n. — Cten"o-lab'ri-dæ, n. pl. Ich. The Pomacentridæ. — cten"o-lab'roid, a. & n. — cte-no'li-um, n. A comb-like appendage in certain bivalves through which the threads of the byssus pass. — Cte-noph'o-ra, n. pl. Zooph. A class or order of cœlenterates with paddle-like locomotive plates in eight meridional rows on the outer surface of the body. — cten'o-phor, cte-noph'o-ran, a. & n. — cten"o-phor'ic, cte-noph'o-rous, cte-noph'o-ral, a. Of, pertaining to, or like a ctenophore; comb-bearing. — cten'o-phore, n. 1. One of the Ctenophora 2. One of the eight fringed paddle-like swimming-organs of the Ctenophora. — cten'o-phyte, n. A fungous parasite injuring its host-plant only by means of a chemical action it exerts. — Cten"o-stom'a-ta, n. pl. Helminth. A class, seen from the section of gymnolæmatous polyzoans with a broad side. 2. Abacwith each cell-mouth closable by marginal aspect of the ginal setæ. — cten"o-stom'a-tous, a. same. a, a, ctenophores. — cten'o-stome, n.

A Ctenophore.
1. Adult of Bolina alata, seen from the side. 2. Abac-tinal aspect of the same.

Cte'si-as, 1 tī'shı-as; 2 tē'shi-as, n. A Greek physician and historian, who wrote histories of Persia and India; about 400 B. C. Ktē'si-as‡ [Gr.].

cub[2], n. [Local, Eng.] A cattle stall; also, a cupboard; bin.

cub[3], n. [Prov. Eng.] An irregular mass; a heap; lump.

Cub[4], 1 kub, 2 cub, n. Bib. (R. V.) Ezek. XXX, 5.

cu'ba[1], n. See MEASURE.

Cu'ba[2], 1 kū'bə or (Sp.) kū'ba; 2 cū'ba or (Sp.) cų'bä, n. 1. Republic; the largest island of the West Indies; 44,164 sq. m.; capital, Habana; became independent from Spain in 1898 through the Spanish-American war; declared republic May 20, 1902. 2. See SANTIAGO DE CUBA. 3. A village in Fulton county, Ill. 4. A village in Allegany county, N. Y.

cu'bage, 1 kū'bıj; 2 cū'baĝ, n. Same as CUBATURE.

Cu'ban, 1 kū'bən; 2 cū'ban. I. a. Of or pertaining to Cuba. II. n. 1. A native or naturalized inhabitant of Cuba. 2. [c.] Cubanite. — Cuban mastiff, pine, etc. See MASTIFF, etc.

cub'an"gle, 1 kūb'aŋ'gl, 2 cūb'ăŋ'ĝl, n. Geom. A trihedral angle formed by three planes at right angles to each other. [< CUBE + ANGLE[1], n.] cu'ban-ite, 1 kū'bən-ait; 2 cū'ban-īt, n. Mineral. A bronze to brass-yellow copper iron sulfid ($CuFe_2S_3$) crystallizing in the isometric system: also found massive. [< Cuba.]

cub'a-rithm, 1 kūb'a-rithm; 2 cūb'a-rithm, n. A small cube with raised points on each face employed in calculations by the blind. [< CUBE + Gr. arithmos, number.]

cu-ba'tion, 1 kiu-bē'shən; 2 cū-bā'shon, n. Same as CUBATURE.

cu'ba-to-ry, 1 kiū'bə-to-rı; 2 cū'ba-to-ry. [Rare.] I. a. Lying or recumbent. II. n. A sleeping-place.

cu'ba-ture, 1 kiū'bə-chur or -tiur; 2 cū'ba-chur or -tūr, n. 1. The process of determining the cubical contents of a solid. 2. Cubical contents. [< L. cubus; see CUBE.]

cub'bing, 1 kub'ıŋ; 2 cūb'ing, n. [Eng.] The sport of hunting young foxes.

cub'bridge-heads", 1 kub'rij-hedz"; 2 cūb'ridĝ-hĕds", n. pl. Naut. The bulkheads of the half-decks of a vessel: made of boards. [Allied with CUPBOARD.]

cub'by, 1 kub'ı; 2 cūb'y. I. a. Snug. II. n. [CUB'BIES, pl.] 1. [Rare.] A snug or narrow place. 2. [Orkney & Shetland.] A basket made of straw. [< LG. kubje, shed.] — cub'by-hole", n A small enclosed space; a pigeonhole; closet; figuratively, a small house.

One little fellow [a fox] when we let him loose . . . scampered back again incontinently to his cubby-hole on the deck.
KANE U. S. Grinnell Expedition p. 226. [C. & P. 1857.]

— c.-house, n. A play-house; doll-house. — c.-yew, n. [Eng.] The cobia.

cube, 1 kiūb; 2 cūb, vt. [CUBED; CUB'ING.] 1. To raise to the third power. 2. Eng. To pave with cubes or blocks. 3. To find the cubic capacity of (a hollow object, as the skull).

cube, n. 1. Geom. A solid bounded by six equal squares and having all its angles right angles. 2. Arith. The third power of a quantity; the product of three equal factors.

On the 15th May [1618, Kepler] . . . discovered the great law, that the squares of the periodic times of any two planets are to one another as the cubes of their distances from the sun.
BREWSTER Newton, p. 122. [H. 1839.]

3. Eng. A paving-block. [F., < L. cubus, < Gr. kybos, cube.] — cube'-ore", n. Mineral. Same as PHARMACOSIDERITE. — c. root, the number which taken three times as a factor produces another number, which is called its cube; as, 3 is the cube root of 27. — c.-spar, n. Mineral. Same as ANHYDRITE. — four-faced c., a tetrahexahedron.

cu'beb, 1 kiū'beb; 2 cū'bĕb, n. Med. A berry of Piper cubeba, which is dried unripe and used in medicine, especially in urinary and bronchial diseases: often smoked in the form of cigarets. [< LL. cubeba, < Ar. kabāba.] — African cubebs, the berries of Piper guineense found in western Africa, or the plant which bears them. West-African black pepper‡. — cu'beb-oil", n. See OIL. — Cu-be'ba, n. Bot. A former name for a genus of plants of the pepper family now included in the genus Piper. — cu'beb-ate, n. Chem. One of the cubebic-acid salts. — cu'beb-ene, n. Chem. An oily compound ($C_{15}H_{24}$) isomeric with oil of cubebs, from which it is derived by distillation with sulfuric acid. — cu-beb'ic, a. Chem. Of, pertaining to, or extracted from cubebs. — cubebic acid (Chem.), a yellowish resinous compound ($C_{15}H_{18}O_4$) contained in cubebs. — cu'beb-in, n. Chem. An inodorous crystalline compound ($C_{10}H_{16}O_2$) contained in cubebs.

cu-be'ra, 1 kū-bē'ra 2 cu-bę'ra, n. Ich. A large West-Indian snapper (Lutianus cyanopterus); unfit for food. [< Sp. cuba, tub, < L cupa, tub.]

Cu-be'ro, 1 kū-bē'ro; 2 cu-bę'ro, Pedro (1645–). A Spanish priest: said to be the first traveler round the world from west to east.

cub'hood, 1 kub'hud; 2 cūb'hŏŏd, n. The condition of being a cub.

cu'bi-. Same as CUBO-.

cu'bic, 1 kiū'bık; 2 cū'bic, a. 1. Formed like a cube; cube-shaped; as, a cubic die. 2. Being, or equal to, a cube whose edge is a given unit; as, a cubic yard of granite; a cubic foot of gas. 3. Measurable or measured by the unit of space contained in a given cube; cubical: said of extent or capacity; as, the cubic capacity of a tank. 4. Alg. Of the third degree. See DEGREE. 5. Crystal. (1) Isometric, monometric; as, cubic system. (2) Parallel to the faces of a cube; as, cubic cleavage. — cubic measure, the system adopted for measuring volume, especially solids, of which the unit is the cube of the linear unit. In Great Britain and the United States it is as follows:

1728 cubic inches (cu. in.)	= 1 cubic foot (cu. ft.)
27 cubic feet	= 1 cubic yard (cu. yd.)
24¾ cubic feet	= 1 perch (P).

In Great Britain a stack of wood = 108 cu. ft., a shipping ton = 40 cu. ft. of merchandise or 42 cu. ft. of timber; the ton of displacement of a ship = 35 cu. ft. — c. space curve (Math.), a curve of double curvature, which may be looked upon as the partial intersection of two ruled quadric surfaces having a common generator.

cu'bic, n. Math. An equation, curve, or function of the third degree. — circular cubic, any cubic curve that passes through the two circular points at infinity.

cu'bi-ca, 1 kiū'bı-kə; 2 cū'bi-ca, n. A fine worsted fabric, used for linings.

cu'bi-cal, 1 kiū'bı-kəl; 2 cū'bi-cal, a. 1. Pertaining to or expressed by a cube, relating to or involving all three dimensions of space; as, the cubical contents of a solid. 2. Cubic. — cubical index (Craniom.), the ratio of the cubical contents of a skull to that of a rectangular prism having the same diameters. — -ly, adv. — -ness, n.

cu"bi-ce-phal'ic, 1 kiū"bı-si-fal'ık; 2 cū"bi-ce-făl'ic, a. Craniol. Characterized by a brachycephalic head of which the occiput is flattened. [< CUBI- + CEPHALIC.]

cu'bi-cle, 1 kiū'bı-kl; 2 cū'bi-cl, n. A bedroom; chamber. [< L. cubiculum, < cubo, lie.] cu'bi-cule; cu-bic'u-lo-, cu'bi-cone, 1 kiū'bi-kōn; 2 cū'bi-cōn, n. A conical surface of the third degree. [< CUBI- + CONE.]

cu"bi-con"tra-va'ri-ant, 1 kiū"bı-kon'tra-vā'rı-ənt, 2 cū"bi-cōn'tra-vā'ri-ant, n. A contravariant of the third degree. [< CUBIC + CONTRAVARIANT.]

cu"bi-cos'ic, 1 kiū"bı-kos'ık; 2 cū"bi-cŏs'ic, a Relating to cubic equations. [< CUBI- + COSSIC.]

cu"bi-co-va'ri-ant, 1 kiū"bı-ko-vā'rı-ənt, 2 cū"bi-co-vā'ri-ant, n. A covariant of the third degree. [< CUBIC + COVARIANT.]

cu-blc'u-lar, 1 kiu-blk'yu-lər; 2 cū-blc'yu-lar, a. Of or pertaining to a bedchamber; private. [< L. cubicularius; see CUBICULARY.]

cu-blc'u-la-ry, 1 kiu-blk'yu-lē-rɪ; 2 cū-blc'yu-lā-ry. I. a. 1. Cubicular; as, cubicular furnishings. 2. [Rare.] Suitable for lying on. II†. n. A chamberlain. [< L. cubicularius, < cubiculum, bedchamber, < cubo, lie down.]

cu-bic'u-lum, 1 kiu-blk'yu-lum; 2 cū-blc'yu-lŭm, n. [-LA, pl.] [L.] 1. A small bedchamber; cubicle.

Confess publicly, and trace your approaching retirement from all the troubles of this life to the dimity-curtained cubiculum on Tweedside. J. WILSON Recreations of Christopher North, Cottages p. 142. [w. n. 1868.]

2. A burial-chamber with recesses in the walls for dead bodies, as in the Roman catacombs. 3. The mortuary chapel of a church. [cube.

cu'bi-form, 1 kiū'bɪ-fōrm; 2 cū'bi-fôrm, a. Shaped like a cu-bi'le, 1 kiu-baɪ'lī; 2 cū-bī'lē, n. [-BIL'I-A, 1 -bīl'ɪ-ə; 2 -bīl'i-a, pl.] The lowest or ground course of stones in a building. [L., < cubo, lie down.]

cu'bi-lose, 1 kiū'bɪ-lōs; 2 cū'bi-lōs, n. The mucilaginous secretion that forms the substance of edible birds'-nests. [< L. cubile; see CUBILE.]

cub'ist, 1 kiūb'ɪst; 2 cūb'ist, n. [Recent.] Art. One whose compositions are characterized by cubes or squared effects.

The Cubist also produces the quadrilateral, the trapeze, and plays pleasantly with the triangle. Literary Digest, Nov. 18, '11, pp. 914, 915.

—cub'ism, n. The cult of the cubist.

cu'bit, 1 kiū'bɪt; 2 cū'bit, n. 1. An ancient measure of length, originally represented by the length of the forearm, from the elbow to the end of the longest finger. See MEASURE. 2. Anat. (1) The forearm. (2) [Rare.] The ulna. 3. Entom. A cubitus. [< L. cubitum, elbow, < cubo (pp. cubitus), bend, lie down.] cu'bite†; cu'byte†.—cubit arm (Her.), a hand and arm cut off squarely at the elbow.—cu'bit-fash'ion, adr. With the forearm; in measuring.—cu'bit-ed, a. [Rare.] Of a cubit's length: used in compounds; as, five-cubited.

cu'bi-tal, 1 kiū'bɪ-təl; 2 cū'bi-tal, a. 1. Of or pertaining to the ulna or forearm, to the cubitus of an insect's wing, or to a cubit. 2. Of the measure of a cubit. [< L. cubitalis, < cubitum; see CUBIT.]

cu"bi-ta'le, 1 kiū"bɪ-tē'lī; 2 cū"bi-tā'le, n. [-LI-A, pl.] A cu-cu"bi-ta'lis, 1 kiū"bɪ-tē'lɪs; 2 cū"bi-tā'lis, n. A muscle on the ulnar side of the forearm.—cubitalis anterior, the flexor carpi ulnaris. c. internus‡.—c. gracilis, the palmaris longus.—c. posterior, the extensor carpi ulnaris. c. externus‡.—c. Riolani, the anconeus. [L.] cu"bi-ti-dig'i-tal, 1 kiū"bɪ-tɪ-dij'ɪ-təl; 2 cū"bi-ti-dig'i-tal, a. Anat. Of or pertaining to both the forearm and the fingers. [< L. cubitum, elbow, + DIGITAL, a.]

cu"bi-to-car'pal, a. Anat. Of or pertaining to the forearm and wrist. [< L. cubitum, elbow, + carpal.]—cu"bi-to-plan'tar, a. Anat. Relating to the forearm and sole; specif., to a nerve in horses so situated.—cu"bi-to-ra'di-al, a. Anat. Of or pertaining to the ulna and the radius.

Cu'bitt, 1 kiū'bɪt; 2 cū'bit, Sir William (1785–10/12 1861). An English engineer who constructed Berlin water-works, and invented the prison treadmill.

cu'bi-ture, n. Same as CUBATURE.

cu'bi-tus, 1 kiū'bɪ-tus; 2 cū'bi-tūs, n. [-TI, 1 -taɪ; 2 -tī, pl.] 1. A cubit. 2. Entom. (1) The second longitudinal vein of the fore wing. (2) The radial or stigmal vein in the Chalcididæ. (3) The tibia of the anterior leg. [L., < cubo, bend.] [(Dryoscopus cubla).

cub'la, 1 kūb'lə; 2 cūb'la, n. [Afr.] A South-African shrike cu'bo-, 1 kiū'bo-; 2 cū'bo-. From Greek kybos, cube: a combining form meaning, (1) in mathematics, pertaining to a cube; (2) in anatomy, pertaining to the cuboid bone.—cu"bo-bl"quad-rat'ic, a. Math. Of the seventh degree.—cu"bo-cal-ca'ne-al, a. Anat. Relating to the cuboid bone and the calcaneum.—cu"boc-ta-he'dral, a. Of, pertaining to, or having the form of a cuboctahedron.—cu"boc-tahe'dron, n. Geom. A solid formed by cutting off equally the eight vertices of a cube by planes passing through the middle points of the edges. It is bounded by squares and triangles. An Archimedean truncated c. has 26 faces in the form of regular tetragons, hexagons, and octagons.—cu'bo-cube", n. Math. The square of the cube; the sixth power of a number.—c.-cubic, a. Of the sixth order or degree.—cu'bo-cu"bo-cube", n. The cube of the third power of a number; cube of the cube, or ninth power.—c.-c.-cubic, a. Of the ninth degree.—c.-cuneiform, a. Of or pertaining to both the cuboid and the cuneiform bones.—c.-dodecahedron, n. A figure combining the forms of the cube and the dodecahedron.—c.-dodecahedral, a.

cu'bold, 1 kiū'boɪd; 2 cū'bōld, a. Shaped like a cube. [< Gr. kyboeidēs, < kybos, cube; and see -OID.] cu-bol'dal‡.

cu'boid, n. 1. Anat. The outer distal bone of the tarsus or ankle. See illus. under TARSUS. cu-bol'des‡. 2. Anthrop. A short, wide and high cranium, cuboidal in form.

cu'bo-ite†, n. Same as ANALCITE.

cu'bo-man"cy, n. Divination by means of dice.—Cu"bo-me-du'sæ, n. pl. Zooph. A suborder of Scyphomedusæ with 4 septa and gonads on the septa, as Charybdæidæ.—cu"bo-me-du'san, a. & n.—cu"bo-met"a-tar'sal, a. Relating to both the cuboid and metatarsal bones.—cu"bo-na-vic'u-lar, a. Relating to both the cuboid and scaphoid bones. cul"ti-va'tion, 1 kul'tı-vē'shən; 2 cŭl'ti-vā'shon, n. 1. The working of ground for the purpose of raising crops; tillage. 2. The raising of crops by tillage; as, the cultivation of wheat. 3. Improvement by breeding; artificial propagation; as, the cultivation of trout in ponds. 4. Development by study or attention; fostering; care.

The cultivation of the affections is rarely combined with full development and force of intellect. JOHN YOUNG Christ of History bk. iii, pt. iii, p. 223. [C. & BROS. 1860.]

5. The state of being cultivated; improved condition, as of body, mind, or morals; social, intellectual, and esthetic refinement; culture. 6. Bacteriol. A culture. 7. [Rare.] Cultivated ground; land with growing crops.

Syn.: see REFINEMENT.—cul"ti-va'tion-pad'dock, n. [Austral.] A field reserved for cultivating, as contrasted with forage-land.

cul'ti-va"tor, 1 kul'tı-vē"tər or -tər; 2 cŭl'ti-vā"tor, n. 1. One who cultivates; a husbandman; agriculturist. 2. A machine used in cultivating standing crops, as corn: commonly having several shares, sweeps, or blades, which loosen the ground and destroy weeds.

Cultivators are named (1) from their use; as, corn-cultivator, cotton-c., tobacco-c., etc.: (2) from their shape; as, buggy c., duck's-foot c., sulky c., etc.: or (3) from their mechanism or mode of operation; as, disk c. (having two sets of revolving disks instead of shares), expanding c. (adjustable to width of furrow), gang-c. (operating on both sides of a row at once), rotary c., etc.

Cultivators.

1. Riding cultivator, showing control levers (l, l, l) and shovels (s, s, s). 2. Hand-cultivator, showing teeth (t, t, t) plows (p, p), and hoe attachment (h).

3. One who gives close attention to the development of a subject; one who assiduously fosters a thing; as, a cultivator of friendship or of science.—cul'ti-va"tor-plow", n. An implement having a front plowshare, followed by cultivator-shares, and sometimes by harrow-tines and by a chain harrow.

cul'trate, 1 kul'trēt; 2 cŭl'trāt, a. Sharp-edged and pointed; specifically, shaped like a pruning-knife, as the beak of a bird. [< L. cultratus, < culter, knife.]

cul'tri-, 1 kul'trı-; 2 cŭl'tri-. Derived from Latin culter, knife: a combining form.—cul'tri-form, a. Cultrate.—cul"tri-ros'tral, a. Having a cultrate or knife-like bill. cul"ti-ros'tral‡.—Cul"tri-ros'tres, n. pl. Zool. An obsolete group of birds including the waders, as the cranes and herons.—cul-trir'o-rous, a. [Rare.] Swallowing, or pretending to swallow, knives.

cul'tur-a-bl(eᴱ), 1 kul'chur-[or-tiur-]ə-bl; 2 cŭl'chur-[or -tūr-]a-bl, a. [Rare.] Capable of culture or cultivation; cultivable.

cul'tur-al, 1 kul'chur-əl or -tiur-əl; 2 cŭl'chur-al or -tūr-al, a. 1. Of or pertaining to culture. 2. Resulting from cultivation: said of plant varieties artificially produced. 3. Bacteriol. Relating to culture-media or to the character of the micro-organisms artificially produced upon them.—cultural map, a chart showing the details of the cultural process.—cul'tur-al-ly, adv. 1. In a cultural manner. 2. Bacteriol. With reference to culture-media or their development.

cul'ture, 1 kul'chur or -tiur; 2 cŭl'chur or -tūr, tt. [CUL'TURED; CUL'TUR-ING.] To educate or refine; cultivate.

cul'ture, n. 1. The working of the ground in order to raise crops; cultivation; tillage. 2. Attention and labor given to the growth or propagation of plants or animals, especially with a view to improvement of the stock or breed; as, oyster-culture.

Of all species except the shad, those of the salmon-family prove to be the best adapted for artificial culture. J. W. MILNER in Rep. U. S. Fish Commission, '72-'75 p. 25. [GOV. PTG. OFF. 1874.]

3. The training, development, or strengthening of the powers, mental or physical, or the condition thus produced; improvement or refinement of mind, morals, or tastes; enlightenment or civilization.

Giving up wrong pleasure is not...self-sacrifice, but self-culture. RUSKIN Ethics of the Dust lect. vi, p. 117. [S. E. & CO. 1867.]

4. Biol. (1) The process of securing the growth and multiplication of bacteria or other micro-organisms in artificial media, as gelatin, beef tea, etc., or as parasitic fungi upon plants. (2) The bacteria or other micro-organisms, collectively, resulting from such a process. The propagation of bacteria is carried on in laboratory practise by means of various suitable culture-media, either fluid (c.-fluid), as meat broth, bouillon (bouillon c.), sugar solutions, etc.; semisolid, as gelatin (gelatin c.); or solid (solid c.), as potatoes and other vegetable substances. Such cultures are developed in specially made flasks, as c.-tubes and c.-bulbs; in open or flat vessels, as c.-dishes; on media spread and allowed to solidify on glass plates, as poured plate cultures; by insertion into suitable media on the end of a platinum needle, as puncture or stab cultures, or by drawing the inoculated needle across the medium, as streak or stroke cultures; in specially arranged moist chambers (culture-cells), in drops of water on a glass plate (drop-c.), or suspended from the under side of a glass plate (hanging-drop c.), for microscopic observation. Special processes are used for certain cultures, as the shaking of the liquid culture-medium in the tube and allowing it to solidify (shake c.), to secure thorough distribution of the micro-organisms; the tilting of the tube before the medium hardens (slant c.), to secure a slanting surface; the rolling of the tube on a cake of ice (roll c.), to hasten surface solidification: and the heating of the micro-organisms in suitable devices (c.-ovens), to determine their reactions to certain temperatures. Permanent cultures or colonies of bacteria (stock cultures) can be kept for long periods, from which transfers can be made to suitable nutrient matter from time to time, thus establishing new colonies. Inoculations of culture-media with matter suspected of bacterial infection may prove fertile (positive cultures) or inoperative (negative cultures). These may be made through smears of pus taken directly from a wound or through the blood of an infected person (direct culture), or through bacteria taken from other culture-media (indirect c.). Micro-organisms of any particular kind, as those of anthrax, diphtheria, etc., can be isolated and cultivated in a proper medium (pure c.). Cultures are found to thrive best in medium temperatures, extreme cold or heat usually killing the bacteria, tho frequently not affecting the spores, which are very tenacious of life. Darkness is favorable, and light, especially direct sunlight, unfavorable to the growth of cultures. From cultures are prepared sera which have been found invaluable both as preventive and as remedial agents in various diseases. See ANTITOXIN, BACILLUS, BACTERIUM, SERUM, TOXIN.

5. The features of a map which are not physical, as parallels, meridians, towns, and roads. 6†. Worship; homage, as of a deity. 7†. A cultivated field; also, good tilth. [F., < L. cultura, < cultus, pp. of colo, cultivate.] Syn.: see HUMANITY; REFINEMENT.

—cul'ture-fea"tures, n. pl. Surv. Features resulting from human labor or skill as distinguished from natural features.—c.-hero, n. Any prehistoric hero regarded as the author of an advanced culture and civilization, as Prometheus.— c.-medium, n. Some substance, as meat broth, gelatin, etc., in which bacteria or other organisms are placed for cultivation.— c.-myth, n. A myth relating to the cultural awakening of any tribe or race.— c.-province, n. Anthrop. An area in which, under the influence of geographical and social environment, certain metamorphic types of man developed.— c.-stock, n. A number of social groups exhibiting the same type of culture.— c. system, the plan, formerly in use in Dutch East Indies, of forcing the natives to labor upon the government plantations in lieu of paying a land-tax.— c.-yeast, n. A special form of yeast (Saccharomyces cerevisiæ), prepared in laboratories for the production of pure beer. Different cultures produce different beers, what are known then as top-fermentation yeasts being employed in the production of English, Scotch, and North-German beers, while bottom-fermentation yeasts produce South-German and Austrian varieties, such as Lager and Pilsener.— cul'ture-less, a. Being without culture.— cul'tur-ist, n. One who cultivates; a friend of culture.

cul'tured, 1 kul'churd or -tiurd; 2 cŭl'chụrd or -tûrd, pa. Possessing or manifesting education and refinement.

Cul-tur'kampf, n. Same as KULTURKAMPF.

cul'tus, 1 kul'tus; 2 cŭl'tŭs, n. [L.] 1. A system of religious belief and worship; cult.

In brief, Baal seems to have been wherever his cultus was established, a development or form of the old sun-worship.
MACKEY Encyc. Freemasonry, Baal p. 98. [mos. 1879.]

2. State of religious, ethical, or esthetic development. — cultus image, an image that is worshiped; an idol, as distinguished from a statue or votive image of a god. cultus statuet.

cul'tus-cod", 1 kul'tus-ked"; 2 cŭl'tŭs-cŏd", n. A hexagrammoid food-fish (Ophiodon elongatus) sometimes weighing 40 pounds, of the Pacific coast of North America. [< Chinook cultus, worthless, + COD, n.] cul'ver, 1 kul'vər; 2 cŭl'vẹr, n. 1. [Dial. or Obs.] A pigeon or dove. 2. [Local, Eng.] Same as WOOD-PIGEON. — cul'ver-foot"t, n. An English cranesbill, possibly Geranium columbinum.— c.-house, n. A dove-cote.

cul'ver-in, 1 kul'vər-in; 2 cŭl'vẹr-in, n. In early ordnance, a long cannon: specif., the largest gun used in the 16th century, sometimes of extraordinary length, firing a 15- to 20-pound shot with a heavy charge. [< F. couleurine, < LL. colubrina, < L. colubra, f. of coluber, serpent.] cul'ver-t.— cul'ver-in-eer', n. A soldier who loaded and fired a culverin.

cul'ver-key", 1 kul'vər-kī"; 2 cŭl'vẹr-kē", n. 1. The columbine (Aquilegia vulgaris). 2. The cowslip (Primula veris). 3. A samara or winged fruit of the ash. [Prob. < CULVER (< AS. culfre, dove) + KEY, the husk containing seed.]

Cul'ver's-phys'ic, 1 kul'vərz-fiz'ik; 2 cŭl'vẹrz-fĭz'ĭc, n. A tall weed (Leptandra virginica) from 3 to 8 feet high, with from 1 to 5 long terminal racemes of flowers. [< Dr. Culver.] Cul'ver's-root"t.

cul'vert, 1 kul'vərt; 2 cŭl'vẹrt. I. tr. To build culverts in, as a bank or road. II. n. Any artificial covered channel for the passage of water through a bank or under a road, canal, or the like. [Prob. cor. of F. coulouëre, gutter, < couler; see CULLET.]

Culvert.

Cul'vert, George (1744–1839). A Choctaw chief; served in Revolutionary and Seminole wars.

cul'vert-age, 1 kul'vərt-ij; 2 cŭl'vẹrt-ăj, n. 1. A penalty and term of reproach. 2. The state of a serf or villain. 3. Forfeiture of property and degradation to serfdom. [OF.]

cul'ver-tail, 1 kul'vər-tēl; 2 cŭl'vẹr-tāl, n. A dovetail joint. [Cp. CULVERKEY.] — cul'ver-tailed, a. Naut. Dovetailed.

Cu-ma'ce-a, 1 kiu-mē'shi-ə or -si-ə; 2 cū-mā'shẹ-ə or -ce-ə, n. pl. Crust. A suborder or order of thoracostracans with eyes sessile and a short carapace covering head and anterior thoracic segments. [Perhaps < Gr. kyma, wave.] — cu-ma'cean, a. & n.— cu-ma'ceous, a.

Cu'mæ, 1 kiū'mi; 2 cū'mē, n. An ancient city on the coast of Campania; earliest Greek colony in Italy or Sicily.

Cu-mæ'an, 1 kiu-mi'ən; 2 cū-mē'an, a. Relating to the ancient city Cumæ in Campania, Italy; as, the Cumæan Sibyl. See SIBYL.

Cu"ma-na', 1 kū"mə-nā'; 2 cụ"mä-nä', n. A seaport town in Bermudez state, Venezuela, South America.

Cumb., abbr. Cumberland.

Cum-bal', 1 kum-bāl'; 2 cum-bäl', n. A volcano in the Andes mountains; S. part of Cauca department, Colombia; 15,620 ft. high.

cum'bent, 1 kum'bent; 2 cŭm'bẹnt, a. [Rare.] Recumbent.

cum'ber, 1 kum'bər; 2 cŭm'bẹr, tr. 1. To hinder by or as by a weight or burden; bear or rest upon uselessly; hamper, obstruct, or clog in any way.

I disgrace nobody, and cumber nobody: that's something.
DICKENS Bleak House ch. 27, p. 440. [e. & l. 1886.]

2. To weigh down; oppress; perplex; trouble; as, to be cumbered with cares. 3†. To overwhelm; prostrate; destroy. [< OF. combrer, < LL. incumbro, < L. in, in, + LL. combrus, hindrance, < L. cumulus, heap.] — cum'ber-ground", n. Anything useless or worthless.

cum'ber, n. [Archaic.] 1. Embarrassment; trouble; perplexity; distress. 2. An encumbrance or obstruction; hindrance; accumulated rubbish.

Or, mid the tangling cumber, And pack of mountain lumber.
WHITTIER Voyage of the Jettie st. 9.

cum'berd, pp. Cumbered. S. S.

Cum'ber-land, 1 kum'bər-lənd; 2 cŭm'bẹr-lạnd, n. 1. Richard (1631–1718), an English prelate; moral philosopher; opponent of Hobbes; De Legibus Naturæ, etc. 2. Richard (1732–1811), an English dramatist; novelist; essayist; Wheel of Fortune, etc. 3. If a nation desires perfect stability it must put up with a certain slowness and cumbrousness. BRYCE Am. Commonwealth vol. i, pt. i, ch. 26, p. 301. [MACM. 1888.]

cum d., cum div., abbr. Cum dividendo (with dividend).

Cu-mel'li-dæ, 1 kiu-mel'i-dē; 2 cū-mĕl'ĭ-dē, n. pl. Crust. A family of cumaceans with the 3 hinder pairs of legs very slender and with strong curved claws, and without pleopods in males. Cu-mel'la, n. (t. g.) [< CUMA.] — cu-mel'lid, n.— cu-mel'loid, a.

cu'mene, 1 kiū'min or kum'in; 2 cū'mẹn or cŭm'ẹn, n. Chem. A colorless oily compound (C_9H_{12}) obtained variously, as by distilling cuminic acid with lime. Cumol; isopropyl-benzol. [< CUMIN.]

cu-men'gite, 1 kiū-men'jait; 2 cū-mẹn'gīt, n. Mineral. An oxychlorid of copper and lead, found at Boléo, Lower California. [< M. Cumenge, French chemist.] cu-menge'ite.

cum'frey, n. Same as COMFREY.

Cu'mi-dæ, 1 kiū'mi-dī; 2 cū'mi-dē, n. pl. Crust. A family of cumacean crustaceans, especially those having the 4 hinder pairs of legs without exopodites, and no telson. Cu'ma, n. (t. g.) [Perhaps < Gr. kyma, wave.] — cu'mid, a. & n.— cu'moid, a.

cu-mid'ic, 1 kiu-mid'ik; 2 cū-mid'ic, a. Chem. Relating to α-cumidic acid, $C_6H_3(CH_3)_2(CO_2H)$ 2, and β-cumidic acid, $C_6H_2(CH_3)_2(CO_2H)_2$: both dibasic organic acids.

cu'mi-din, } 1 kiū'mi-din, -din or -din; 2 cū'mi-dĭn, -dĭn cu'mi-dine, } or -din, n. Chem. An organic liquid compound ($C_9H_{13}N$) homologous with anilin, derived from cumene. [< CUMIN.]

cum'in, 1 kum'in; 2 cŭm'ĭn, n. 1. An annual (Cuminum cyminum) of the parsley family, about a foot high, with fennel-like leaves. It is found wild in Hindustan, as well as in Syria and Egypt, but has been cultivated from the earliest times. 2. The seeds of this plant, pale-brown, aromatic, and used especially among the Mohammedans as a condiment; cumin-seed. [< AS. cumin, < L. cuminum, < Gr. kyminon, < Heb. kammōn, cumin.] cum'mint. — black cumin, the seeds of the nutmeg-flower (Nigella sativa), also of black hellebore (Helleborus niger).— sweet c., anise (Pimpinella anisum).— wild c., a small Levantine annual (Lagœcia cuminoides) of the parsley family.

Cum'ling, 1 kum'iŋ; 2 cŭm'ĭng, n. A county in N. E. Nebraska; 580 sq. m.; county-seat, West Point.

cu-min'ic, 1 kiu-min'ik; 2 cū-mĭn'ic, a. Of, pertaining to, or derived from cumin. cum'let.— cuminic acid, a crystalline compound ($C_{10}H_{12}O_2$) formed when cuminol is oxidized.— c. aldehyde, same as CUMINOL.

cu'mi-nil, 1 kiū'mi-nil; 2 cū'mi-nil, n. Chem. A yellow, crystalline, volatile compound ($C_{20}H_{22}O_3$) formed when cuminoin is oxidized with chlorin.

cu"mi-nil'ic, 1 kiū'mi-nil'ik; 2 cū'mi-nil'ic, a. Chem. Relating to cuminilic acid, $[(CH_3)_2CHC_6H_3]_2C(OH)CO_2H$, which forms when potassium hydroxid and cuminil are fused together.

cu-min'o-in, 1 kiu-min'o-in; 2 cū-mĭn'o-ĭn, n. Chem. A white crystalline compound ($C_{20}H_{12}O_3$) obtained by boiling cuminol with alcoholic potassium cyanid.

cu'mi-nol, 1 kiū'mi-nōl or -nol; 2 cū'mi-nōl or -nŏl, n. Chem. A colorless oil ($C_{10}H_{12}O$) contained in the oil of cumin and water-hemlock, and also prepared synthetically; paracuminaldehyd. [< CUMIN + -OL.]

cum'mer, 1 kum'ər; 2 cŭm'ẹr, n. [Scot.] 1. One associated with a mother; godmother. 2. A familiar female friend; woman or girl; gossip; also, a midwife or a sorceress.

cum'mer-bund, 1 kum'ər-bund; 2 cŭm'ẹr-bŭnd, n. [Anglo-Ind.] A shawl or broad sash worn as a waistband; also, a girdle; a belt.

Cum'ming, Roualeyn Gordon (1820–1866). A Scottish sportsman; Five Years of a Hunter's Life in S. Africa.

Cum'mings, 1 kum'iŋz; 2 cŭm'ĭngş, n. 1. Amos Jay (1841–1902), an American journalist and Congressman. 2. Thomas Seir (1804–1894), an American miniature-painter; a founder of the National Academy of Design.

cum'ming-ton-ite, 1 kum'iŋ-tən-ait; 2 cŭm'ĭng-tọn-īt, n. Mineral. A monoclinic of amphibole that is essentially an iron-magnesium silicate, $(Fe,Mg)SiO_3$. [< Cummington, Mass.]

Cum'mins, 1 kum'inz; 2 cŭm'ĭnş, n. 1. George David (1822–1876), an American divine; first bishop of Reformed Episcopal Church. 2. Maria S. (1827–1866), an American novelist; The Lamplighter.

cum'mudge, 1 kum'uj; 2 cŭm'ŭj, a. [Scot.] Cozy; snug.

cum'mul, 1 kum'əl; 2 cŭm'ul, n. [Anglo-Ind.] A large blanket. Compare CUMBLY.

cu'mol, 1 kiū'mōl or -mol; 2 cū'mōl or -mŏl, n. Same as CUMENE. [< CUMIN + -OL.]

cum. pref., abbr. Cumulative preference.

cum'quat, n. Same as KUMQUAT. cum'quott.

cum'shaw, 1 kum'shō; 2 cŭm'shạ. [Pidgin-English.] I. n. Something given as a present; a tip; bakshish. II. tr. To give bakshish to; to tip.

cum'ter-tine, 1 kum'tər-tain; 2 cŭm'ter-tĭn, n. [Fiji Isls.] A species of flying-fish.

cu'mu-lant, 1 kiū'miu-lənt; 2 cū'mū-lant, n. Math. Continuant. [< L. cumulan(t)-s, ppr. cumulo; see CUMULATE.]

cu'mu-lar, 1 kiū'miu-lər; 2 cū'mū-lar, a. Cumulous.

cu'mu-late, 1 kiū'miu-lēt; 2 cū'mū-lāt, tr. [-LAT"ED; -LAT"ING.] 1. To collect into a heap; pile up; gather together; accumulate. 2. In Louisiana law, to combine (actions or causes of action) in one action. [< L. cumulo (pp. cumulatus), < cumulus, heap.] — cu"mu-la'tion, n. 1. The action or process of massing or heaping together; accumulation; a heap. 2. The joining of two or more defenses or causes of action in one action. — cu'mu-lat-ist, n. [Rare.] One who accumulates or gathers.

cu'mu-la-tive, } Gathering volume or strength by addition or repetition; superadded; as, a cumulative force or effect; cumulative evidence.

The man who inherits family traditions and the cumulative humanities of at least four or five generations.
HOLMES Autocrat ch. 1, p. 25. [o. & co. 1871.]

2. Gained or acquired by accumulation; consisting of portions gathered or collected one after another; as, cumulative interest, wealth, or knowledge; a cumulative legacy.— cu'mu-la-tiv(e-ly), adv.— cu'mu-la-tiv(e-ness), n.

The rare and late fruit of a cumulative culture.
EMERSON Nature, Literary Ethics p. 156. [u. s. & co. 1889.]

— cumulative action (Med.), the violent action of a medicine suddenly supervening after successive doses previously taken without apparent effect.— c. argument, an argument consisting of several proofs each of which is not dependent upon the others, but is complete in itself; as, the argument for the home agency is cumulative.— c. dividend, the delayed payments on a dividend which accumulate and demand payment before any other dividend.— c. error (Surv.), an error in an initial measurement or calculation which grows as processes of calculation are multiplied; also, an error repeated in the same form, as one due to sagging of a suspended chain.— c. intercession (Law), the assuming of the liability for a debt by one or more sureties.— c. proposition (Logic), a proposition constituted so as to represent essentially a combined series or compound of several propositions; as, "every fish lives in water" is a summary of the propositions: "this fish lives in fresh water," "that fish lives in salt water," etc.— c. sentence, a sentence which imposes successive penalties for several offenses of the same kind.— c. voting, a system whereby an elector may divide among candidates for a group of coordinate offices, or give to one of them, votes not exceeding in number the offices in the group. c. votet.

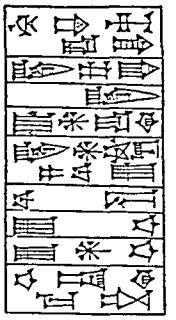
The most important of these signaries and alphabets are the Accadian, which was the oldest, its characters being ideographic; the Assyro-Babylonian, which was the largest and most complicated, with about 700 characters partly alphabetic, partly syllabic, and written from left to right; the New Susian; the Old Persian, which had about 60 phonetic characters, and when deciphered by Grotefend in 1802 gave a clue to the other cuneiform systems; and the Armenian. The shape of these characters was largely governed by the tool or stylus used: the straight line being the easiest made and the arrow-shaped head being presumably the result of the initial cut of the stylus. See ACCADIAN; ARROW-HEADED.



Cuneiform Characters, from the Inscriptions of Hammurabi.

2. cur'ren-cy, 1 kur'en-sı; 2 cûr'ĕn-çy, n. [-CIES, 1 -sız; 2 -çiş, pl.] 1. The accepted and current medium of exchange of values; that which is in general use and circulation, as money, as coin or bank-notes, or government notes; also, the total amount in circulation: properly not including bank-checks.

It was apparent that the volume of currency in the country was not sufficient for the enormous requirements of the public expenditure.

NICOLAY AND HAY Lincoln vol. vi, ch. 11, p. 230. [c. co. 1890.]

2. The state of being current; general circulation; as, the currency of paper money; the currency of a rumor. 3. Current value or estimation; general esteem or standing; as, to gain currency without desert.

Even if good literature entirely lost currency with the world, it would still be abundantly worth while to continue to enjoy it by oneself. MATTHEW ARNOLD Essays in Criticism second series, essay i, p. 55. [MACM. 1888.]

4. Formerly, natives collectively of the Australian colonies. 5†. Continuous flow, as of a stream; glibness of speech. [< LL. currentia, < L. curren(t-)s; see CURRENT. SYN.: see MONEY.

— asset currency (Finance), currency issued under the security of general assets, merchants' bills, etc., as distinguished from that secured by deposits, as of government bonds.— c. principle or doctrine (Finance), the principle that banks should be allowed to issue notes against only bullion or coin. It was made a feature of the act of Parliament of 1844 that regulated the note issue of the bank of England. This principle is opposed to the banking principle or doctrine under which bank-notes are held to be a form of credit and permit of an elasticity of currency.— divisional c., currency including the small fractional coins.— emergency c. (Finance), currency devised for immediate relief in periods of financial panic or anxiety, and restricted to the passing requirements of the occasion; as, the paper-money or tokens in a besieged town.— flexible c. (Finance), currency which is regulated by existing business requirements, being made to increase or decrease in accordance with their demands. elastic c.†.— fractional c., money or coins of any denomination less than the standard monetary unit: in the United States, less than a dollar.— paper c., paper issued on the authority of a state and designed to serve as money; government notes and bank-bills issued under authority of law.

cur'rent, 1 kur'ənt; 2 cûr'ant, a. 1. Passing from hand to hand or from mouth to mouth, as money or as news; circulating or circulated; generally accepted as valid, authentic, or true; as, current coins; current ideas.

Our gold's laid up in sunsets safe from thieves;
And all our current silver's in the stars.
H. S. MORRIS To Poverty l. 10.

2. In actual progress, or belonging to the time immediately passing; as, the current month; the current number of a periodical. 3. Math. Differing from point to point; as, current lines. 4. [Archaic.] Moving; running; flowing. [< OF. currant, < L. curren(t-)s, ppr. of curro, run.]

SYN.: see AUTHENTIC; POPULAR.— to pass current, to be generally accepted or recognized.

cur'rent, n. 1. A continuous movement in the same direction, as of a fluid; flow; stream; also, the fluid that is in motion; as, a current of air or water.

Currents of fragrance, from the orange-tree.
BRYANT The Child's Funeral st. 4.

Specif.: (1) Such a movement in the midst of a great body of fluid of the same kind; as, ocean currents; atmospheric currents. (2) Elec. A molecular disturbance or activity assuming a directional form in a closed conductor or between bodies in different states of electrification connected by a conductor. It is due to the effort of nature to equilibrate the potential between adjacent bodies or parts of bodies. While popularly known as a current it is rather a condition or a series of successive conditions into which material substances are thrown by disturbances of molecular equilibrium proceeding from chemical, physical, and mechanical causes. A charged particle placed in a field of force tends to move toward that end of the field which is oppositely charged, and, if a series of conducting particles or molecules are held in such a way as to be immovable, then the charge of the field tends to move through them in the direction they would take if at liberty, which tendency constitutes the current. The rate of current flow is measured in amperes, and is inversely as the resistance and directly as the difference of potential. The quantity of current delivered depends upon the intensity and the time in which it acts. Its unit of measurement is the coulomb. See AMPERE, COULOMB, and OHM'S LAW, under LAW.

2. Any connected onward movement; course; tendency; progression; a course of progress, especially as governed by a tendency; as, the current of time, events, opinion.

Isolated from the great currents of public life which flow through the telegraph and the press. HAMERTON Intellectual Life pt. x, letter viii, p. 377. [S. DNOS. 1875.]

3. The degree of pitch given to a roof to make the water falling upon it run off in a certain direction.

SYN.: course, drift, flow, flux, stream, tide.

— ac'tion-cur'rent, n. Physiol. An electric current developed in a muscle or nerve under stimulation.— active c. (Elec.), that component of an alternating current which is in phase with the electromotive force: opposed to reactive current.— after-current, n. Electrotherapeutics. An electrical current produced in muscles and other animal tissue after they have been subjected to a galvanic current flowing in the opposite direction.— alternating c., see ALTERNATE, v.— alternative c. (Electrotherapeutics), a suddenly alternating current.— atonic c. (Elec.), a unit of current-strength used in Germany: equivalent to 1.111 amperes.— average c. (Elec.), the time average strength of an alternating current.— axial c. (Physiol.), the central portion of the blood-stream in the small vessels, which is chiefly occupied by the red corpuscles, the leucocytes traveling near the walls.— Benguela c. (Oceanography), a cold current that flows northward along the west coast of South Africa.— black c., same as JAPAN CURRENT.— blaze c., n. Physiol. The positive electric current induced in living tissue in response to mechanical or electrical stimulation.— Brazil c. (Oceanography), a warm current flowing southward along the Brazilian coast.— cable c., n. Elec. The current formed in a broken submarine cable between the copper wire and the iron sheathing, which act as the two elements of a battery with the sea-water as the fluid.— cellulifugal c. (Neurol.), a nerve-current which flows from the body of a neuron along its processes.— cellulipetal c. (Neurol.), a nerve-current which flows toward the body of a neuron along its processes.— charge c., n. Elec. A current passing between the outside and inside coatings of a charged and uncharged jar when they are placed in connection.— charging c., n. Auto. The current used to charge the accumulator of an electric vehicle.— Chilean c., same as PERUVIAN CURRENT.— commuted c. (Elec.), a current that at the point of generation is alternating, but is changed to a continuous current by a commutator.— connectional c., a vertical current in gases and liquids resulting from the variation in temperature at the different levels.— constant c. (Elec.), a direct or alternating current whose effective intensity is constant.— continuous c. (Elec.), a direct current whose intensity is uniform.— c.-bedding, n. Same as FALSE BEDDING. See BEDDING, n.— c.-bottle, n. Oceanography. A bottle cast into the sea for the purpose of making observations on the direction and speed of currents. In such bottles is sealed a statement showing their purpose and requesting their return.— c.-collector, n. Elec. Any mechanism, as a brush or a trolley, by means of which current is carried from moving to fixed portions of a circuit and reversely.— c.-density, n. Elec. The quantity of current passing in any part of a circuit, as compared with the area of cross-section of the conductor at that point.— c.-intensity, n. Elec. Current-strength as defined by the quantity of electricity passed by such current in a given time. Its practical unit is the ampere.— c.-meter, n. 1. Elec. An instrument, as a galvanometer, for measuring the strength of an electric current. 2. A device for determining the velocity of flowing water, as in deep-sea currents.— c. of injury (Elec.), the current generated at the site of an injury to a muscle or nerve, which becomes negatively electrified in relation to the surrounding uninjured surface.— currents of motion (Electrotherapeutics), currents set up in living nerves or muscles after sudden contraction or relaxation.— currents of rest (Electrotherapeutics), the electric currents set up when two portions of an unstimulated nerve or muscle are placed in connection. Their existence is not universally accepted.— c.-wheel, n. Hydraul. A water-wheel driven by an open stream of water, as distinguished from one in a race or penstock.— derived c. (Elec.), a current flowing through a derived conductor; a shunt current.— dielectric c. (Elec.), same as DISPLACEMENT CURRENT.— direct c. (Elec.), a current that is constant in direction, as distinguished from an alternating current.— direct induced c. (Elec.), the extra current produced on opening a circuit. See EXTRA CURRENT.— discharging c. (Elec.), the current obtained from a charged condenser or storage-battery.— displacement c. (Elec.), the theoretical current which flows through an insulating material or dielectric when an electromotive force is impressed upon it, producing displacement and interior stress.— earth currents (Physics), light electric currents apparently traversing the earth's surface, but which in reality only exist in a wire grounded at both ends, due to small potential differences between the two points at which the wire is grounded.— eddy c. (Elec.), a current produced in a solid conductor, such as the armature or pole-piece of a dynamo or motor, which is wasted by conversion into heat. To obviate this loss armature-cores are often laminated.— energy c. (Elec.), same as ACTIVE CURRENT.— extra c. (Elec.), a current of very brief duration but great intensity, produced by electromagnetic induction at the moment of opening or closing a circuit. In the former case it is in the same and in the latter in the opposite direction to the ordinary current.— Faradic c. (Electrotherapeutics), an induced or secondary alternating current such as that derived from a magneto-generator: opposed to voltaic current.— Foucault c. (Elec.), same as EDDY CURRENT.— Franklinic c. (Electrotherapeutics), the current generated by an electrostatic machine.— galvanic c. (Electrotherapeutics), same as VOLTAIC CURRENT.— Guinea c. (Oceanography), a current flowing eastward along the Guinea coast in a direction counter to the equatorial Atlantic current.— Hermann's demarcation c. (Elec.), same as CURRENT OF INJURY.— Humboldt c., same as PERUVIAN CURRENT.— idle c. (Elec.), wattless current: former name.— induced c. Elec. 1. The current produced in a conductor by varying the conditions of the field of force in which it is situated, as by movement. 2. A current produced by induction. It is always opposite in direction to the causative or primary current. Induced currents are inversed by closing a circuit whose direction is opposite to that of the producing current. See INDUCTION.— intermittent c. (Elec.), an interrupted direct current.— inverse c. (Elec.), same as INDUCED CURRENT, 2.— Japan c. (Oceanography), a current flowing from a point near the Bashi Islands northward to latitude 26°, where it divides, the main part washing the eastern shores of Japan and then the Aleutian Islands.— leakage c. (Elec.), a term formerly used for the exciting current of a transformer, that is, the very slight current passing through the primary circuit when the secondary circuit is open, owing to the counter-electromotive force developed.— local c. (Elec.), same as EDDY CURRENT.— magnetic c. (Elec.), magnetic flux: the total number of lines of force passing through a magnetic circuit.— make-and-break c. (Elec.), a series or succession of current impulses of short duration separated by momentary intervals in which no current flows.— marking c. (Teleg.), the current recording dot and dash symbols on the paper ribbon in the polarized receiver of Wheatstone's automatic telegraph.— molecular c. (Elec.), same as AMPERIAN CURRENT. See AMPERIAN.— muscle c., n. Neurol. Same as CURRENTS OF REST.— oscillating c. (Elec.), a current the direction of whose flow is periodically reversed and whose opposite wave-lengths decrease successively in the same ratio.— Peruvian c. (Oceanography), a very cold current flowing northward along the coast of Peru.— planktonic c. (Biol.), a current or stream of floating or swimming organisms in water.— polyphase c. (Elec.), a system combining two or more alternating currents of constantly different time phase.— poncelet c. (Hydraulics), a current of water whose dynamic energy represents one poncelet.— power c. n. Elec. Same as ACTIVE CURRENT.— primary c. (Elec.), the current passing through the primary coil of any inductive device and giving rise to an induced current: any originating, as opposed to a derived or secondary, current.— pulsating c. (Elec.), a current whose intensity changes at fixed intervals, but whose direction is constant.— pulsatory c.†.— reactive c. (Elec.), that component of an alternating current which is in quadrature with the electromotive force.— rectified c. (Elec.), same as COMMUTED CURRENT: so called because the undulations of the sine curve representing an alternating current, which normally

extend above and below the zero line, are represented in this type of current as rectified, appearing as a series of short convex curves on the same side of the zero line.— reverse c. (Elec.), same as INDUCED CURRENT, 2.— rotary c. (Elec.), same as POLYPHASE CURRENT, especially one of three phases. rotating c.‡.— secondary c. (Elec.), an induced current.— spacing c. (Teleg.), the current running in opposite direction to the marking current in Wheatstone's automatic telegraph and providing for the spaces between dots and dashes on the paper ribbon.— terrestrial currents (Physics), same as EARTH CURRENTS.— Tesla c. (Elec.), same as OSCILLATING CURRENT.— undulatory c., a current the strength and direction of which changes gradually: distinguished from a pulsatory current, which changes suddenly.— voltaic c. (Electrotherapeutics), a current derived from chemical action, as from a battery: opposed to Faradic current.— wattless c. (Elec.), same as REACTIVE CURRENT.— working c. (Elec.), same as ACTIVE CURRENT.

—cur'rent-ly, adv. In a current manner; flowingly; commonly.— cur'rent-ness, n. 1. The state of being current; currency; especially, circulation or acceptance. 2. The quality of being flowing or smooth, as verse.

Cur'rent riv'er. A river in southern Missouri and northeastern Arkansas; 220 m. long to Big Black river.

Cur'rer Bell. The pen-name of Charlotte Brontë.

cur'ri-cle, 1 kur'i-kl; 2 cûr'i-cl. I. tr. To drive in a curricle. II. n. 1. A two-wheeled two-horse carriage with a pole. 2†. A short course. [< L. curriculum, race, < curro, run.]

cur-ric'u-lar, 1 ku-rik'yu-lər; 2 cû-ric'yu-lar, a. 1. Of or pertaining to a college course or curriculum. 2. [Rare.] Of or pertaining to carriages or driving. [< L. curriculum, chariot.]

cur-ric"u-lar-i-za'tion, 1 ku-rik'yu-lər-i-zē'shən; 2 cû-ric"yu-lar-i-zā'shon, n. Subjection to an arbitrary and inflexible curriculum: opposed to the elective system.

cur-ric'u-lum, 1 ku-rik'yu-lum; 2 cû-ric'yu-lŭm, n. [-LA or -LUMS, pl.] 1. A course; especially, a course of study, as in a college.

2. A racing-track. [L.; see CURRICLE.]

cur'rie[1], n. Same as CURRY.

cur'rie[2], n. [Scot.] A little stool.

Cur'rie, 1 kur'i; 2 cûr'i Sir Arthur William (12/31 1875–). Canadian lieutenant-general in command of Canadian troops in Europe during the World War; Chancellor of McGill University since 1920.

cur'ri-er, 1 kur'i-ər; 2 cûr'i-er, n. 1. One who curries or dresses leather. 2†. A small musketoon on a swivel.

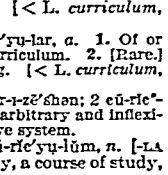
—cur'ri-er-y, n. The trade of a currier, or the place in which it is carried on.



Beam and Knife used by Curriers.

cur'rish, 1 kūr'ish; 2 cûr'ish, a. 1. Like a cur; snarling, quarrelsome; churlish. 2. Beatting a cur.— cur'rish-ly, adv.— -ness, n.

My wife will hang me, that's my currish destiny. MIDDLETON Mayor of Quinborough act i, sc. 1.

cur'rit, 1 kur'it; 2 cûr'it, vi. [Scot.] To run: said of vehicles.

Cur'ri-tuck, 1 kur'i-tuk; 2 cûr'i-tŭk, n. A county in northeastern North Carolina; 273 sq. m.; county-seat, Currituck.

Cur'ri-tuck Sound. A body of water on the east coast of Currituck county, N. C.

cur'ry[1], 1 kur'i; 2 cûr'y, vt. [CUR'RIED; CUR'RY-ING.] 1. To rub down and clean with a currycomb; groom: said of a horse. 2. To dress or put in shape for use by soaking, scouring, smoothing, coloring, etc.: said of tanned hides; hence, colloquially, to beat or pummel; as, I'll curry his hide. 3†. To flatter. [< OF. conraier, courroyer, dress leather, orig. prepare, < conroy, gear, preparation, < con- (< L. cum), with, + roi, < Low G. rēde, order.] cur'ri-er.— cur'ry-card", n. A piece of wood or leather with bent wire teeth, for use as a currycomb.— cur'ry-ing-glove", n. A rough glove for rubbing down horses.— to c. favor, to seek favor by adulation and excessive attentions: thought to be a corruption of to curry favel. See FAVEL.

Nobody expects him [the farmer] to cringe, or smirk, or curry favor, in order to sell his produce.
GREELEY What I Know of Farming p. 186. [TR. ASS. 1871.]

cur'ry[2], vt. [-RIED; -RY-ING.] To flavor with curry.

cur'ry[1], n. [-RIES, 1 -iz; 2 -is, pl.] 1. A highly flavored and pungent sauce used as a relish for boiled rice, meats, etc. curry sauce†. 2. A dish, as of meat, fowl, or game, with rice, cooked with this sauce.

While the palate is still hot with a curry, an unflavored dish seems insipid.
SPENCER Principles of Psychol. vol. i, pt. i, p. 109. [A. 1883.]

[< Tamil kari, curry.]— cur'ry-leaf", n. The leaf of an East-Indian tree (Murraya kœnigii) of the rue family, prized as a flavoring for curries.— c.-powder, n. A powdered condiment of pungent spices, chillies, turmeric, etc., used in making curry sauce.

cur'ry[2], n. [Archaic or Obs.] 1. Same as QUARRY[2], n., 4. 2. The cutting up of the entrails of dead game.

Cur'ry[3], n. 1. A county in New Mexico. 2. A county in southwestern Oregon; 1,454 sq. m.; county-seat, Gold Beach.

cur'ry-comb", 1 kur'i-kōm"; 2 cûr'y-cōm", n. A comb commonly consisting of a series of upright serrated metallic edges, with a handle, used in grooming horses.

—cur'ry-comb", vt. To comb with a currycomb.

cur'sal, 1 kūr'səl; 2 cûr'sal, a. Of or relating to a course: used of certain canons and prebendaries attached to Welsh dioceses, whose prebends were once changed annually in rotation. [< L. cursus; see COURSE, n.] curse, 1 kūrs; 2 cûrs, v. [CURSED or CURST; CURS'ING.] I. t. 1. To invoke evil or call down destruction upon; imprecate; execrate; in loose sense, to abuse profanely; swear at. 2. To be the cause of great evils to; bring calamities upon; harass; torment. 3. To put under an ecclesiastical ban; excommunicate; anathematize.

II. i. To utter imprecations; swear. [< AS. cursian; cp. Dan. forse, make sign of the cross, < kors, cross, Ice. krossa, < OF. crois, < L. crux.] kurse†. SYN.: anathematize, blaspheme, execrate, swear, swear at. Compare synonyms for OATH.— curs'er, n.

curse, n. 1. An imprecation of evil; malediction; loosely, any profane oath; as, curses loud and deep.

These Orientals are as profuse in their benediction and their curses as they were in ancient times.
T. L. CUYLER From the Nile to Norway p. 91. [c. & BROS. 1882.]

2. Evil or calamity invoked or threatened; as, a curse is upon that man. 3. A source of calamity; that which brings evil: opposed to blessing; as, war is a curse. 4. Something cursed or accursed; an object of execration. [AS. curs, curse.] corst; curst. SYN.: see ABOMINATION; BANE; OATH.— not worth a curse, good for nothing; worthless.— the curse of Canaan, negro slavery, regarded as a fulfilment of Noah's curse (Gen. ix, 25, 26).— the c. of Cromwell [Ir.], an invocation of evil or a threat: from the outrages committed by the troops of Cromwell on the Irish peasantry.— the c. of Scotland, the nine of diamonds: perhaps from its likeness to the Stair coat of arms, as the first earl was hated for his connection with the Glencoe massacre (1692).

curs'ed, 1 kūrs'ed; 2 cûrs'ĕd, a. 1. Under a curse or deserving a curse; execrable; detestable. 2. [Archaic or Dial.] Of a hateful disposition; vicious; ill-tempered: generally written curst.— -ly, adv.— -ness, n.

cur'sent†, n. To christen.

cur'ship, 1 kūr'ship; 2 cûr'shĭp, n. The state of being a cur; also, one having the qualities or character of a cur.

cur'si-tat"ing, 1 kūr'si-tēt"iŋ; 2 cûr'si-tāt'ing, a. [Rare.] Changing from place to place; flitting; not stationary.

cur'si-tor, 1 kūr'si-tər; 2 cûr'si-tôr, n. 1. Formerly, one of the clerks in the English Court of Chancery, whose duty it was to make out original writs which issued of course, or de cursu. 2†. A courier. [LL., = L. cursor; see CURSOR.]

cur'sive, } 1 kūr'siv; 2 cûr'sĭv, a. Running; flowing: cur'siv, } said of writing in which the letters or characters are joined together, as in the ordinary running hand: distinguished from uncial and from majuscule in Greek and Latin manuscripts. In Egyptian hieroglyphics the hieratic and the demotic styles of writing are called curstive.

The hieroglyphics in the great pyramid, written in the cursive character on the stones before they were taken from the quarry, prove that writing had been long in use.
RAWLINSON Herodotus vol. ii, bk. ii, app., p. 290. [A. 1885.]

cur'sive, n. 1. A letter or character used in cursive writing. 2. A manuscript in cursive writing.

cur'sor, 1 kūr'sər; 2 cûr'sŏr, n. [Rare.] 1. A bachelor of theology who assisted a master in medieval universities. 2. Any part of a mathematical instrument moving along another part, as the sliding socket bearing the point of a beam-compass, the part of a proportional compass by which the points are set at any given ratio, etc. 3. [C-] The genus Cursorius. See CURSORIIDÆ. [L., runner, < curro (pp. cursus), run.]— radial cursor, in thermodynamical calculations, an addition to Lanchester's slide-rule.

Cur-so'res, 1 kūr-sō'riz; 2 cûr-sō'rēz, n. pl. 1. Ornith. (1) An order of birds, variously limited, (a) including the Ratitæ and Charadriomorphæ, or (b) the Ratitæ alone. (2) A cohort of Grallatores, including limicoline and similar birds. 2. Arach. The Citigradæ. [L., pl. of cursor; see CURSOR.]

Cur-so'ri-a, 1 kər-sō'ri-ə; 2 cur-sō'ri-a, n. pl. Entom. A section or suborder of orthopterous insects, variously limited, distinguished by cursorial movements, and including the cockroaches. [< LL. cursorius; see CURSORY.]

cur-so'ri-al, 1 kər-sō'ri-əl; 2 cur-sō'ri-al, a. 1. (1) Fitted for running or walking as opposed to other modes of progression: said of the limbs of animals. (2) Having, or executed by means of, such limbs; as, a cursorial bird; cursorial movements. 2. Of or pertaining to the Cursores or Cursoria. [< LL. cursorius; see CURSORY.]

cur-so'ri-ous† [Rare].

Cur"so-ri'i-dæ, 1 kūr"so-rai'i-dī; 2 cûr"sŏ-ri'i-dē, n. pl. Ornith. A family of charadriiform birds having a short bill and long tarsi, and nesting in a slight hollow scraped in the ground; coursers. Cur-so'ri-us, n. (t. g.) [LL.; see CURSORY.]— cur-so'ri-id, n.— cur-so'ri-oid, a.

Cur"so-ri-i'næ, 1 kūr"sō-ri-ai'nī; 2 cûr"sŏ-ri-i'nē, n. pl. Ornith. The Cursoriidæ as a subfamily of charadrioid birds. [< CURSORIUS.]— cur-so'ri-line, a.

cur'so-ri-ly, 1 kūr'sō-ri-li; 2 cûr'sŏ-ri-ly, adv. Rapidly and superficially; hastily and without minute attention; slightly; without thoroughness.

cur'so-ri-ness, 1 kūr'sō-ri-nes; 2 cûr'sŏ-ri-nĕs, n. The quality of being cursory; hastiness or superficiality in performance.

cur'so-ry, 1 kūr'sō-ri; 2 cûr'sŏ-ry, a. 1. Rapid and superficial; hasty; slight; not thorough; as, a cursory examination.

FARRAR Seekers After God, Seneca p. 8. [MACM.]

2. Entom. Cursorial. 3. Formerly, in universities, auxiliary; not formal: applied to lectures of bachelors of theology. 4†. Running about; not stationary. [< LL. cursorius, relating to running, < L. cursor; see CURSOR.] cur'so-ra-ry†. SYN.: careless, desultory, hasty, rapid, slight, summary, superficial. See DESULTORY.— ANT.: careful, critical, elaborate, exhaustive, minute, painstaking, profound, thorough.

curst, 1 kūrst; 2 cûrst, a. [Archaic.] Cursed; condemned to perdition; hence, hateful; malignant; detestable; ill-tempered. [Another form of CURSED.] curst'ful†.

curs'ta-bl(e", 1 kūrs'tə-bl; 2 cûrs'ta-bl, n. Arch. A course of stones decorated with moldings forming a string-course.

cur'sus, 1 kūr'sus; 2 cûr'sŭs, n. [LL.] A course. Specif.: (1) A race-course; a ground for driving or running. (2) A form of conducting religious worship. (3) A series of studies. (4) A course of offices making up the ordinary form of religious service; also, the written instructions for conducting this office.

curt, 1 kūrt; 2 cûrt, a. 1. Shortened. 2. Concise, compressed, and abrupt in act or expression; especially, short and sharp in manner; slightly rude or abrupt; brusk; as a curt sentence; a curt reply.

His look, his air, his curt speech, told
The man of action, not of books. WHITTIER A Sea Dream st. 21.

cur-tail', 1 kər-tēl'; 2 cur-tāl', vt. 1. To cut off or cut short; shorten; abridge; dock; hence, to lessen the extent of; decrease; as, to curtail an essay; to curtail expenses.

All governments necessarily curtail the natural rights of man.
E. A. NOONAN in North American Review Nov., 1891, p. 594.

2. To affect by taking something away from; limit by deprivation; as, to curtail a man in his privileges. [Cor. < CURTAL, < OF. courtault, < court (< L. curtus), short.] cur'tal†; cur'tall†. SYN.: see ABBREVIATE; RETRENCH.— cur-tail'ed-ly, adv.— cur-tail'er, n.

cur'tail, n. 1. The scroll-shaped end of an architectural member. 2†. Same as CURTAILMENT.— cur'tail-step", n. The step at the bottom of a flight of stairs, when the outer end of it is rounded off.

curtaild, pp. Curtailed. S. S.

cur-tail'ment, 1 kər-tēl'mənt or -mənt; 2 cur-tāl'ment, n. The act of curtailing, or the state of being curtailed; a shortening; reduction.

cur'tain, 1 kūr'tin; 2 cûr'tin, vt. 1. To enclose, cover, or adorn with or as with curtains. 2. To separate or exclude or cut off as by a curtain: followed by out, in, from, etc.

There is a cave,
All overgrown with trailing odorous plants Which curtain out the day with leaves and flowers.
SHELLEY Prometheus Unbound act iii, sc. 3.

cur'tain, n. 1. A draping or covering, hanging loosely, and readily adjustable, variously employed, as to prevent the passage of light through a window or other opening, to screen a stage from the auditorium, or to hide some object from view; as, an altar-curtain; a drop-curtain. 2. Anything that conceals or separates like a curtain.

'Twas daybreak, and the fingers of the dawn Drew the night's curtain. WILLIS David's Grief st. 1.

Specif.: (1) The metallic plate or guard sliding over a keyhole. (2) Hydraulic Engin. A woven fabric of willows to retard a current and permit the depositing of silt. (3) In the manufacture of sulfuric acid, the leaden plate separating into compartments the chamber where the sulfurous compounds are oxidized. (4) pl. Vertical planes between horizontal planes, constituting a form of box kite: often employed near the extremities of a biplane.

3. Fort. The part of a rampart bordered by a parapet that connects the flanks of two bastions or two towers; also, that part of a building-wall between two towers or piers; curtain-wall. 4. Arch. (1) That portion of a wall of a building which connects two advancing or more lofty portions, as the wall between two towers. (2) The wall-panels in a skeleton construction. 5. Same as CORTINA. 6†. A flag; ensign. [< OF. curtine, < LL. cortina, dim. of cortis; see COURT.] cor'tain†; cour'tain†; cur'teyn†.— auroral curtain, a drapery-like form of auroral light.— behind the c., in concealment; in secret.— cur'tain-an"gle, n. Fort. The angle between the flank of a bastion and the curtain.— c.-lecture, n. A private chiding or faultfinding, as administered by a wife to her husband: at first assumed to be given in an old-fashioned curtained bed, whence the name. See CAUDLE, MRS.— c. of fire, same as BARRAGE.— c. of mail, a piece of chain mail depending from the edge of a helmet to protect the neck; the camail.— c.-paper, n. A heavy, decorated, closely textured paper sometimes used for window shades.— c.-raiser, n. A one-act play, generally of one scene, given before a regular performance.

cur'tal†. I. a. 1. Cut off; short; curt; brief. 2. Having a docked tail: applied to dogs. See CURTAL DOG, below. 3. Short-trocked; as, a curtal friar. II. n. 1. An animal with docked tail; hence, any shortened object. 2. An obsolete cannon. 3. An instrument of the bassoon kind; also, an organ-stop of a corresponding tone. 4. (1) A person having cropped ears. (2) A person wearing a short cloak. 5. An immodest woman. cur'tall†; cur'toldet.— curtal dog†, in old English forestry, a dog whose tail was cut short to indicate that its master had not the privilege of coursing. curtail dog†.— c. friar†, a friar who served as an attendant at the gate of a monastery court and, for convenience, had the short frock.— cur'tal†, vt. To curtail.

cur'tal-ize†, vt. To shorten; abridge.

cur'tate, 1 kūr'tēt; 2 cûr'tāt, a. Shortened. [< L. curtatus, pp. of curto, shorten, < curtus, short.]— curtate distance (Astron.), the distance from the earth or from the sun to the foot of the perpendicular falling from a planet upon the plane of the ecliptic.— cur-ta'tion, n. 1. The amount by which a planet's curtate distance from the earth or from the sun is less than its true distance. 2. In alchemy, a speedy method of transmuting metals.

cur'ta-tive-ly, 1 kūr'tə-tiv-li; 2 cûr'ta-tiv-ly, adv. [Rare.] In abbreviated or shortened fashion; briefly.

Cur"ta-to'ne, 1 kūr"tə-tō"nē; 2 cur"tā-tō"nę, n. A town in Mantua province, Italy, where the Austrians defeated the Italian patriots May 29, 1848.

cur-tein', 1 kər-tēn'; 2 cur-tān', n. The pointless sword borne before the English kings at their coronation, as the sword of mercy. [< L. curtus, short.] cur-ta'nat.

cur'ti-lage, 1 kūr'ti-lij; 2 cûr'ti-laġ, n. Law. The ground adjacent to a dwelling-house, and used in connection with it. [OF., < curtil, < L. cor(t-)s, court.]

Cur'tin, 1 kūr'tin; 2 cûr'tin, n. 1. Andrew G. (4/31 1817–10/31 1894), an American statesman; war Governor of Pennsylvania; minister to Russia; member of Congress. 2. Jeremiah (3/31 1838–12/31 1906), an American linguist, translator, and ethnologist; knew more than 60 languages.

Cur'ti-o, 1 kūr'shi-ō; 2 cûr'shi-ō, n. A character in Shakespeare's Taming of the Shrew.

Cur'tis, 1 kūr'tis; 2 cûr'tis, n. 1. Benjamin R. (11/4 1809–9/31 1874), an American lawyer; one of the counsel for President Johnson. 2. George William (2/31 1824–8/31 1892), an American writer, lecturer, and journalist; Prue and I. 3. Samuel R. (2/31 1805–11/31 1866), an American general; served in the Mexican and Civil Wars; won battle of Pea Ridge, Ark., March 7–8, 1862. 4. William Eleroy (12/3 1850–12/31 1911), an American journalist and author; director of the Bureau of American Republics, Washington, 1890–1893; The True Jefferson.

Cur'tis, Mount. A mountain in Tennessee; 6,568 ft. high.

Curtiss, Glenn Hammond (5/31 1878–). An American pioneer aviator and inventor; originated aero-boat; built the NC4 which flew across the Atlantic, May 17, 1919.

Cur'ti-us, n. 1. 1 kur'tsi-us; 2 cur'tsi-ųs. Ernst (5/31 1814–7/31 1896), a German historian; antiquary; Hist. of Greece. 2. 1 kur'shi-us; 2 cûr'shi-ŭs. Mettus or Metius, a legendary Roman youth (B. C. 362), who leaped into a chasm in the forum. 3. Rufus Quintus, a Roman historian of the Augustan period; History of Alexander the Great.

curt'ly, 1 kūrt'li; 2 cûrt'ly, adv. In a curt manner; briefly; tartly.

Curt'man"tle, 1 kūrt'man'tl; 2 cûrt'măn'tl, n. [OF.] Sobriquet of Henry II. of England: in allusion to his use of the short Anjou mantle.

curt'ness, 1 kūrt'nes; 2 cûrt'nĕs, n. The quality of being curt; abruptness, as of manner; shortness. curt'l-tude†.

curt'sy, 1 kūrt'si; 2 cûrt'sy. I. vi. To make a curtsy. II. n. [-SIES, pl.] A downward movement of the body by bending the knees: made by women as an act of respect. See COURTESY. cur'chie†; curt'sey†.

cu'ru-ba, 1 kū'rū-bə; 2 cų'ru-ba, n. 1. The sweet calabash (Passiflora maliformis) of the West Indies. 2. [Braz.] The cassabanana.

cu"ru-cu'cu, 1 kū"rū-kū'kū; 2 cų'ru-cų'cų, n. [S. Am.] The bushmaster: native name. cou"ru-cu'cu†.

cu'ru-cui, 1 kū'rū-kwī; 2 cu'ru-cwī, n. [Braz.] A trogon (Trogon curucui).

cu'rule, 1 kiū'rūl; 2 cū'ryl, a. Rom. Antiq. 1. Of or pertaining to a chariot. 2. Privileged to sit in the curule chair; hence, magisterial; official. [< L. curulis, < currus, chariot, < curro, run.]

Curule Chair of marble found on the site of the ancient tribunal in the Forum at Rome during the Pontificate of Paul III.

— curule dignity, right to sit in the curule chair.— c. seat or chair, the official seat of Roman magistrates of the highest rank. It was originally in the form of a camp-stool with curved legs, and very plain, but afterward was highly ornamented.

cu-ru'ro, 1 kū-rū'ro; 2 cu-ry'ro, n. [S. Am.] A burrowing Chilean octodontine rodent (genus Spalacopus) with rudimentary ears.

cur'val, 1 kūr'val; 2 cûr'val, a. Her. Bowed; curved.

cur'vate, 1 kūr'vēt; 2 cûr'vāt, a. Evenly bent; curved. [< L. curvatus, pp. of curro; see CURB, v.] cur'vat-ed‡; cur'vous†.

cur-va'tion, 1 kūr-vē'shən; 2 cûr-vā'shon, n. The act of curving or bending. [< L. curvatio(n-), < curvatus; see CURVATE.]

cur'va-tive, } 1 kūr'va-tiv; 2 cûr'va-tiv, a. [Rare.] Bot.
cur'va-tivs, } Having the margins slightly turned up or down, but not bending inward: said of leaves.

cur'va-ture, 1 kūr'va-chur; or tiur; 2 cûr'va-chur or tûr, n. 1. The act of bending, or the state of being curved or bent; a curving; flexure. 2. Math. Deviation from straightness or planeness in form; amount or rate of bending as determined by the radius of a circle having the closest possible contact with a curve. The curvature is in inverse proportion to the radius. 3. In descriptive geometry, the property of being intersected in two points by a straight line even if the figure contains a point which is the intersection of two straight lines lying within it. 4. Something curved or bent. 5. Bot. An alteration in the growth-line of a plant-part, usually resulting from cell-turgescence caused by externally applied stimuli, such as concussion, contact, growth, heat, and light. [< L. curvatura, < curvatus; see CURVATE.] — aberrancy of curvature, the extent to which a curve departs from a circle.— absolute c., in a curve of double curvature, a curvature reciprocal to the radius of the osculating curve.— axis of c., the line of intersection of consecutive normal planes of a tortuous curve.— c. of concussion (Bot.), curvature in a growing internode resulting from a sharp stroke received on the concave side of the curvature.— c. of field, the imaginary curvature containing the foci of the different light-rays passing through a lens: the curvature is due to spherical aberration.— c. of the spine (Pathol.), abnormal curvature of the spinal column, either upward and backward, called angular or Pott's curvature, or laterally, called lateral curvature.— Darwinian c., curvature in the roots of plants induced by stimulation upon the convex side of the curvature: first observed by Darwin.— double c., the curvature of a tortuous curve. See CURVE.— Gaussian c. (Math.), the curvature of a surface regarded as inversely proportional to the products of the two principal radii of curvature at the point in question.— geodesic c. (Math.), the curvature of a geodesic at the given point of a surface.— indeterminate c. (Math.), curvature at some point, as a node, where ordinary methods of determining it fail.— radius of c., the radius of the osculating circle.— Sachs's c., the curvature of a plant-root due to unequal growth of its two sides.— specific c., the curvature of a surface as measured by a solid angle subtended by a unit area.— total c. Math. (1) Of a plane curve, the angle between the tangents at the ends. (2) Of a twisted curve, the length of the arc traced on a unit sphere by a radius moving parallel with the normal to the curve. (3) Of a curved area, the area on a unit sphere within the line traced by a radius moving parallel with the normal to the surface along the boundary of the area. Integral c.‡; whole c.‡.

curve, } 1 kūrv; 2 cûrv, v. [CURVED, CURVD[2]; CURV'ING.]
curv[2], } I. t. To cause to assume the form of a curve; bend.

> One put his curved hand to his ear as if to listen to some thin far off sound. MRS. OLIPHANT Beleag. City p. 145. [MACM. 1881.]

II. i. To take the form of a curve or move in a curve; bend. [< L. curro, < currus, bent.] curbt. Syn.: see BEND.— curv'ed-ly, adv.— curv'ed-ness, n. [Rare.]

curve, a. Having a different direction at every point; as, a curve line or surface. [< L. curvus, bent.] curbt.

curve, n. 1. A line continuously bent so that no portion of it is straight; a line that everywhere changes its direction. 2. Hence, a bending or something bent; as, the curve of a horse's neck; a railway curve.

> With many a curve my banks I fret.
> TENNYSON The Brook st. 7.

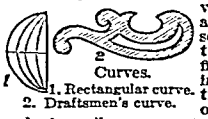
3. Geom. Any line whose course can be defined by an equation or general statement applicable to each and every point upon it, including the straight line as a special case. 4. Physics & Statistics. Any line the distances of whose successive points from a fixed axis represent the varying values of quantities; as, a curve of temperature; curve of population. Such a line, if drawn from observation, may be irregular and broken. 5. In baseball, the deviation in the course of a pitched ball produced by the pitcher, independent of the deviation caused by gravity: called an in curve or in when the ball is deflected toward a right-handed batter, an out curve or out when deflected away, an up shoot when deflected upward, and a drop when deflected downward. 6. An instrument used for making curved figures in drafting; as, a draftsmen's curve.— adjoint curve (Geom.), an algebraic curve so related to a given curve that each of the multiple points of the latter is also a multiple point of the next lower order on the former.— affective c. (Psychol.), a graphic representation of changes in affection (feeling) taking place in correlation with some other mental quality.— antifriction c., the tractrix applied mechanically, as for a pivot.— binomial c., a curve of which the ordinate can be given as a power of a binomial function of the abscissa.— Bruckner's c. (Civ. Engin.), a curve whose abscissæ are the lengths of the different cross-sections of a desired level, and the ordinates the algebraic sums of the parts cut away and filled in: the cuts are rated as positive; the fills, negative.— compound c., in railroading, a curve which is made up of two or more arcs of circles of varying diameters, joined as tangents so that all the centers are on the same side of the curve, thus joining two tangents and gradually increasing the curvature while decreasing the shock caused by inertia.— crinkly c. (Math.), a curve, such as Weierstrass's curve, which includes all the points in a given unit square.— curve'-add"er, n. A device for the automatic drawing of the sum of any two curves having any relations of period, amplitude, and phase.— c. of a complex (Math.), the curve enveloped by the lines lying in the complex and also in a plane (hyperpencil).— c. of buoyancy, same as CURVE OF CROSS-SECTIONAL AREAS.— c. of Carus, the imaginary curved line that represents the pelvic axis.— c. of comfort, in climatology, a line connecting points which most nearly correspond to the degrees of temperature and moisture compatible with a certain amount of human comfort for a given wind velocity.— c. of cosines, same as COSINUSOID.— c. of cross-sectional areas (Naval Arch.), a curve whose ordinates represent the cross-section areas up to a certain water-line for each point of the length.— c. of decay, a curve indicating the decrease in radioactivity of a substance, time being represented by one coordinate, the loss of radioactivity by the other.— c. of displacement, a curve showing the displacement of a vessel, in fresh or salt water, as a function of the mean draft.— c. of distribution, same as GALTONIAN CURVE.— c. of double curvature (Math.), a tortuous curve; one not traced in a plane.— c. of equal approach (Math.), a curve along which descent under the force of gravity, measured vertically, is proportional to the time.— c. of extinction, a graphic curve, used in naval construction, displaying the degree of subsidence of the angle of inclination of a boat coming to rest after having been set rocking in still water.— c. of fatigue, a curve representing the distortion of a body under continued stress.— c. of flexure, on an anticlastic surface, a curve produced by joining the successive elements of the inflexional tangents.— c. of frequency of error, same as PROBABILITY CURVE.— c. of loads, in the construction of ships, a curve constructed from the difference between the ordinates of the curve of buoyancy and those of the curve of weights for any one displacement.— c. of longitudinal shearing-stresses, a curve derived from the curve of loads by integration: it is used to determine the required longitudinal strength of a ship.— c. of metacenters or transverse metacenter, a curve showing the height of the metacenter as a function of the water-line for a given displacement. Compare METACENTER.— c. of quickest descent, a brachistochrone.— c. of resistance (Naval Arch.), a curve having the resistances to towing represented by the ordinate and the resulting speeds by the abscissa.— c. of search, a curve plotted from data such as the speed of a ship, time of departure from a given point, etc.— c. of sensitiveness, a diagrammatic curve showing the sensitiveness to rays of varying wave-lengths, of a photographic plate.— c. of stability, in a floating ship or model, a curve indicating the relation between the angle of inclination and the arm of a righting couple.— c. of style, same as STYLE-CURVE.— c. of velocity, a curve in which the abscissa of each point represents the length of time occurring after a certain instant, and the ordinate the velocity attained at the end of that length of time.— c. of weight, a curve indicating the weight of a ship with its cargo for each foot or unit of the length.— c.-pen, n. A ruling-pen in which the pen-points rotate to coincide with the direction of movement during drawing.— curves of ship calculations (Naval Arch.), curves plotted from the data obtained from experiments made on ships or models; they include: curve of displacement, curve of centers of buoyancy, curve of loads, etc.— c.-tracing, n. Math. The operation of determining the points of a curve, and hence its form, location, etc., from its equation.— cuspidal c. (Math.), the locus, on a surface, of cusps formed by passing planes of intersection through any of its points.— delimiting c., a curve forming a dividing line between two regions of the surface on which it is drawn.— derived c. (Math.), the graph representing the derivative of a function of x.— exterior of a simple closed c., the continuum, containing all sufficiently distant points, formed when a curve divides a plane.— field of a c. (Math.), in the calculus of variations, the part on either side of the curve in which the normals of near-by points in the curve do not meet.— French c., a draftsmen's curve. See illus. in next column.— frequency c., same as PROBABILITY CURVE, under PROBABILITY.— Galtonian or Galton's c., a curve somewhat like the probability curve, clearly depicting the variation of any given characteristic from the norm of that characteristic in a particular species.— geometrical c., same as ALGEBRAIC CURVE. See under ALGEBRAIC.— Hessian c. (Geom.), a curve formed of double points of another curve's first polar.— ichthyoid c., a curve which has a fish-like outline.— inertia c., the imaginary path of a mass which moves on the surface of the earth, or other revolving body, with no resistance or influencing force other than inertia and gravity. At the equator, the path is a straight line; at the pole, a point; and at all other places, a circle which varies with the latitude and velocity.— integral c., a curve considered in relation to its derived curve.— interior of a simple closed c., the continuum, containing no sufficiently distant point, formed when a curve divides a plane.— isacoustic c. (Arch.), an imaginary line of curvature in an auditorium uniting all the points at which a sound from the platform can be heard with equal distinctness; also, incorrectly, the curvature of a floor and the apparently symmetrical view of the lift of tiers of seats upon it.— isedonal c., in a theater, etc., an imaginary curve along which the views obtained of the stage are equally good.— isentropic c., in a thermodynamic diagram, a curve of which all points correspond to states of equal entropy.— isogyric c., an isogyre.— isothermal c., a curve showing expansion or compression of a gas during a period when conditions of temperature are unvarying.— Jordan c. (Math.), one of a series of non-intersecting equivalent curves connecting two points on a simply united surface.— liquidus c. (Phys. Chem.), the freezing-point curve in a drawing illustrating the connection between concentration and temperature for a system including solid-solution and liquid-solution phases. In this system the melting-point curve is known as the solidus curve or solidus. liquidus‡.— Lissajous c., one of a series of curves formed by compounding two simple harmonic motions, as those described by a double pendulum, or by a beam of light reflected successively from two tuning-forks.— load-c., n. Elec. A curve showing the relation between the load-variations of a power system and certain variables which affect the load, such as the time of day, etc.— magnetic c., one of the curved lines formed by sprinkling iron-filings upon a sheet, as of paper, held in a magnetic field, and tapping the sheet to aid them in arranging themselves in the direction of the lines of magnetic force.— mixed c., a curve into the formation of which several curves enter.— plane c. (Math.), a curve every point of which is in the same plane: opposed to twisted or tortuous curve.— polytropic c., in the thermodynamics of a perfect gas, a curve along which the specific heat remains constant.— Quételet's c., same as GALTONIAN CURVE.— rectangular c. (Geom.), a curve or meridian-line that makes a right angle in crossing the equator, or another meridian.— reversed c., a curve formed of two curves with their convexities in opposite directions; an S-curve; cyma.— solidus c., see LIQUIDUS CURVE, above.— tortuous c. (Math.), a curve no finite portion of which lies wholly in one plane. twisted c.‡.— transition c. (Railroad.), a curve of variable radius placed at each end of a railway curve to cause the rolling-stock to run more smoothly in passing from the curve to the straight line or tangent track. easement c.‡.— Weierstrass's c. (Math.), a curve that is zigzag to an infinite degree, so that any arc between two of its points, however close together, is not finite. From it can be proved the proposition of Riemann that a function may be continuous throughout without being differentiable.



Curves.
1. Rectangular curve.
2. Draftsmen's curve.

cur'vet, 1 kūr'vet or kər-vet'; 2 cûr'vĕt or cur-vĕt' (XIII), v. [CUR'VET-ED or CUR'VET-TED; CUR'VET-ING or CUR'VET-TING.] I. t. To cause to prance or make curvets.

II. i. To move in curvets; prance; hence, to frisk about.

> J. P. KENNEDY Swallow Barn ch. 3, p. 40. [G. P. P. 1854.]

cur'vet, n. 1. A light, low leap of a horse made by raising and advancing first the fore legs and then, as they begin to fall, the hind legs, so that at one movement all four legs show in the air.

> After a few graceful wheels and curvets, we take our ground.
> THACKERAY Roundabout Papers, Ogres p. 203. [H. 1863.]

2. [Archaic.] A prank; frolic. [< It. corvetta, < corvare, bend, < L. curro, < curvus, bent.] cor'vet‡.

cur'vi-, 1 kūr'vi-; 2 cûr'vi-. From Latin curvus, curved: a combining form.— cur"vi-cau'date, a. Having a bent or crooked tail.— cur"vi-cos'tate, a. Having curved ribs.— cur"vi-den'tate, a. Having curved teeth.— cur"vi-fo'li-ate, a. Having curved leaves.— cur'vi-form, a. Curved.— cur'vi-fy†, tr. & ri. To bend or curve.— cur"vi-lin'e-ad, n. An instrument for describing curved lines.— cur"vi-lin'e-ar, a. Formed by curved lines. cur"vi-lin'e-al‡.— cur"vi-lin"e-ar'i-ty, n. The state of being curvilinear, or of consisting of curved lines.— cur"vi-lin'e-ar-ly, adv.— cur"vi-ner'vate, a. Having curved veins or nerves, as the leaves of a plant or the wings of an insect. cur'vi-nerved‡.— cur"vi-ros'tral, a. Ornith. 1. Having the bill curved downward, as the curlew. 2. Having a twisted, crossed bill, as the crossbill.— Cur"vi-ros'tres, n. pl. Ornith. A group of passerine birds, including creepers and nuthatches.— cur"vi-se'ri-al, a. Arranged in a curved line or spirally, as leaves along and around a stem.— cur"vi-tab'u-lar, a. Geol. Consisting of, containing, or pertaining to a series of horizontal curving joints, or short cleavage-planes, with their convexities upward; also, having the characteristics of one individual of such a series; as, curvitabular structure or jointing. [curves.

cur'vi-tal, 1 kūr'vi-tal; 2 cûr'vi-tal, a. Pertaining to cur'vi-ty, 1 kūr'vi-ti; 2 cûr'vi-ty, n. The state of being curved; curvature. [< LL. curvitas, < L. curvus, bent.]

cur'vo-graph, 1 kūr'vo-graf; 2 cûr'vo-grăf, n. An arcograph. [< L. curvus, bent, + Gr. graphō, write.]

cur-vom'e-ter, 1 kūr-vom'i-tər; 2 cûr-vŏm'e-ter, n. A device for measuring the length of a curve, as a wheel with a registering dial rotated along the curve.

cur'vu-late, 1 kūr'viu-lēt; 2 cûr'vū-lāt, a. Slightly curved. [< L. curvus, bent.]

Cur'wen, 1 kūr'wen; 2 cûr'wĕn, John (11/12 1816–8/12 1880). An English clergyman; music-teacher; promoter of tonic sol-fa system.

Cur'wens-ville, 1 kūr'wenz-vil; 2 cûr'wĕnz-vil, n. A borough in Clearfield county, Pa.

cur-whib'ble, 1 kər-hwib'l; 2 cur-hwĭb'l, n. 1. [Local, Eng.] A device; contrivance. 2. pl. [Ir.] Curious or unusual gestures; quibbling or mysterious speech. cur'ri-fib'bles‡; cur'ry-whib'bles‡.

Cur-zo'la, 1 kūr-dzō'la; 2 cur-dzō'lä, n. 1. An island belonging to Dalmatia, Austria; in Adriatic sea; length, 30 m. 2. Its capital, a seaport town on the eastern coast.

Cur'zon, 1 kūr'zən; 2 cûr'zon, n. 1. George Nathaniel (1/12 1859–3/22 1925), Earl of Kedleston (Eng.); an English statesman; viceroy of India, 1899–1905; Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, 1919–1924. 2. HOLLAND Titcomb Letters pt. ii, p. 136. [S. 1870.]

cut'ting, n. 1. The act of severing. 2. Something obtained or made by cutting; a piece cut off or out, as a newspaper clipping, a microscopic section, a young shoot cut off for rooting and development into an independent plant, an excavation made for the construction of some special object, as a canal, road-bed, tunnel, etc.

All one has to do to make a cutting grow in Bermuda is to stick it in the ground. JULIA C. R. DORR Bermuda p. 68. [S. 1884.]

3. The act or habit of interfering: said of horses. 4. pl. Oats or other grain bruised for making gruel or porridge; groats. 5. pl. Mining. Cheap ore or refuse obtained from cleansing ore. 6. Coal-mining. The operation of making openings across a coal-seam so as to isolate a portion for subsequent blasting out. The cutting is made to cross the undercutting at right angles. 7. The reduction of color to the proper shade in calico fabrics. 8†. A curvet or caper.— clean cutting, Forestry. 1. The cutting down of the entire stand. clear c.:. 2. An area upon which the entire stand has been cut down. See phrases under FORESTRY.— clean-c. method, see METHOD.— cut'ting-al"mond, n. Same as FEVER-FEW.— c. angle (Mech.), see CLEARANCE, 3.— c. area (Forestry), the area over which cuttings have been or are to be made.— c. height (Forestry), the height above the ground at which a tree is to be cut. See STUMP HEIGHT.— c.-horse, n. A horse especially trained to bring refractory animals out of a herd.— c. limit, see DIAMETER LIMIT. — c. series (Forestry), a block or a part of a block containing even-aged stands whose ages differ uniformly within given limits and which are to be cut in turn, the cuttings usually following a given direction. A perfect cutting series seldom exists, except under the clean-cutting method followed by artificial reproduction, or under the sprout method. c.-shoe, n. A horseshoe with nails on the outside only, for horses that interfere.— final c. (Forestry), see STAND METHOD. — improvement c. (Forestry), see IMPROVEMENT THINNING. — preparatory cuttings (Forestry), see STAND METHOD.— regeneration cutting (Forestry), reproduction cutting.— removal cuttings (Forestry), see STAND METHOD.— reproduction cutting (Forestry), any cutting intended to invite or assist reproduction. regeneration c.:.— seed cuttings (Forestry), see STAND METHOD.— severance cutting (Forestry), the cutting of all trees upon a narrow strip before natural pruning has far advanced, in order that the trees bordering this strip may, as the result of partial exposure, become wind-firm through the development of strong roots. Thus severance cuttings are made to strengthen the trees on the edge of a stand which will later be entirely exposed through the removal of the stand which now protects it.

Compound words with cutting as the first element are used to name things used in or for cutting; as, cutting-bit, c.-board, c.-box (for receiving cut material or for catching dust, as in diamond-cutting), c.-compass, c.-engine (for cutting refuse silk or for gear-teeth), c.-file, c.-frame, c.-gage (a scribing-gage which cuts as well as measures), c.-line, c.-liquor (in calico-printing), c.-nippers, c.-plane, c.-pliers, c.-press (for use on metal sheets), c.-punch, c.-room, c.-shop, c.-spade (for cutting blubber from whales), c.-wire (in ceramics), etc.

cut'tle, 1 kut'ł; 2 cŭt'l, tr. To fold (cloth) so that it will lie in cuttles or plaits.— cut'tle, n. A layer of cloth so folded.

cut'tle, n. 1. A cuttlefish. 2. Cuttlebone. 3†. A foul-mouthed fellow. [Prop. cuddle, < AS. cudele; cp. G. kuttelfisch, cuttlefish.] cut'telt.

cut'tle-bone", 1 kut'l-bōn"; 2 cŭt'l-bōn", n. The internal calcareous plate of a cuttlefish, used as a relish for cage-birds and as a polish, etc. cut'tle-fish"-bone"†.

cut'tle-fish", ⎫ 1 kut'l-fish"; 2 cŭt'l-fish", n. A dicut'l-fish"r, ⎭ branchiate cephalopodous mollusk with 8 to 10 sucker-bearing arms; specif., a sepioid cephalopod having a depressed sac-like body with fins extending laterally for most of its length, 10 sucker-bearing arms around the mouth, and an internal calcareous shell or bone. Cuttlefish are marine, rapacious, and carnivorous, and swim forward by their fins or backward by ejecting water from a funnel connected with the gills. They have also the power of ejecting an inky fluid, the sepia. The arms are used in walking and for seizing prey. scut'tle-fish"†.

The Cuttlefish (Sepia officinalis). 1/12

cut'to, 1 kut'o; 2 cŭt'o, n. [Local, U. S.] A large knife used formerly in New England. cut'toe†; cut'too†.

cut'too-plate", 1 kut'ū-plēt"; 2 cŭt'o͞o-plāt", n. An inside mud-guard for an axle-journal.

cut'ty, 1 kut'i; 2 cŭt'y, a. [Scot.] Short, in any sense; [hasty; quick.

cut'ty, n. [-TIES, 1 -iz; 2 -is, pl.] [Scot.] 1. Anything cut short, as a spoon, tobacco-pipe, popgun, etc.: diminutive of CUT. 2. The hare. 3. A thick-set girl. 4. A low-lived, slovenly woman or girl; slattern.— cut'ty-gun", n. A popgun.— c.-quean, n. 1. See CUTTY, n., 4. 2. The cutty-wren.— c.-sark, n. A short chemise.— c.-stool, n. 1. A little stool. 2. [Scot.] A seat in church where offenders sat to receive public rebuke.— c.-stoup, n. [Scot.] A vessel of pewter holding an eighth of a quart or chopin.— c.-wren, n. [Eng.] The wren.

cut'wal, 1 kut'wal; 2 cŭt'wal, n. [Anglo-Ind.] The chief of police in a city.

cut'wa"ter, 1 kut'wō"ter; 2 cŭt'wą"ter, n. 1. Naut. That part of a vessel, forward of the stem, which forms the profile of the bow and cuts the water when the vessel is under way.

He had steered his ship in the trough of the sea, which had not only strained the ship very much, generally, but loosened the cut-water again. MACKENZIE Paul Jones vol. ii, p. 2. [R. 1878.]

2. The angular edge on the up-stream side of a bridge-pier designed to turn the water or ice descending the river. 3. The black skimmer (Rhynchops nigra). 4. A toy consisting of a thin notched disk of metal to be whirled in water and thus made to sprinkle the by-standers.

cut'with, 1 kut'with; 2 cŭt'with, n. [Dial., Eng. & Scot.] The bar of a plow to which the traces are fastened.

cut'worm", 1 kut'wûrm"; 2 cŭt'wûrm", n. 1. A larval noctuid moth of Agrotis or a related genus that comes forth at night and cuts off young corn, cabbage, and similar plants, usually at or near the surface, or that climbs trees and eats the buds, as A. scandens. 2. [Local, U. S.] The shipworm; teredo. The species are very numerous, and many of them take their names from the plants on which they feed, or from their characteristics and markings: as, bean-cutworm (Orgocoonta cinereola), black c. (Agrotis ypsilon), bronzed c. (Nephelodes violans), climbing c. (Paragrotis scandens), clover-c. (Mamestra trifolii), cotton-boll c. (Prodenia ornithogalli), cotton-c., same as GRANULATED C., dark-sided c. (Paragrotis messoria), dingy c. (Feltia subgothica), granulated c. (Feltia annexa), greasy c., same as BLACK C., pretty c. (Mamestra legitima), shagreened c. (Feltia malefida), speckled c. (Mamestra subjuncta), spotted c. (Noctua c-nigrum), striped c. (Feltia jaculifera), variegated c. (Peridroma saucia), Western striped c. (Feltia herilis), W-marked c. (Noctua clandestina).

cu"vée', 1 kū"vē'; 2 cū"vę', n. [F.] 1. The contents of a wine-vat or -cask; also, a vintage. 2. The mixing together of the wine produced of different vineyards. See quotation.

After being racked and fined, the produce of the different vineyards is now ready for mixing . . . [which] is usually effected in gigantic vats holding at times as many as 12,000 gallons each, and having fan-shaped appliances inside, which on being worked by handles ensure a complete amalgamation of the wine. This process of marrying wine on a gigantic scale is technically known as making the cuvée. HENRY VIZETELLY Facts about Champagne p. 49. [W. L. & co. 1879.]

cu-vette', 1 kū-vet'; 2 cū-vĕt', n. [F.] 1. Ceram. A bowl or basin of pottery or china; a flat-bottomed piece containing a water-pot. 2. The vessel in which molten glass is received from the reaming-pot and borne to the table for casting and rolling. 3. Fort. A cunette. 4. Phot. A vessel, as of vulcanite or porcelain, used as a container for chemical solutions, as silver nitrate, etc.

Cu"vier', 1 kū"vyē'; 2 cū"vyę', n. 1. Frédéric (8/21773–7/21835), a French naturalist, brother of the succeeding. 2. Georges Chrétien Léopold Frédéric Dagobert, Baron (8/21769–5/11832), a French naturalist, statesman, and philosopher; founded the science of comparative anatomy.

Cu"vi-e'ri-an, 1 kiū"vi-i'ri-ąn; 2 cū"vi-ē'ri-an, a. Zool. Of, pertaining to, or named after Georges Cuvier or his system of classification.

Cu'vo, 1 kū'vo; 2 cų'vo, n. A river in Lower Guinea, W. Africa; 400 m. long to Atlantic ocean.

cuʻvy, 1 kiū'vi; 2 cū'vy, n. [Orkney Islands.] A seaweed (Laminaria digitata).

Cux'ha"ven, 1 kūks'hą"fen; 2 cųks'hä"fĕn, n. German naval base on the Elbe: bombed by British 1914.

Cu"ya-ba', 1 kū"yo-bā'; 2 cų"yä-bä', n. A city, capital of Matto-Grosso, Brazil.

Cuy"a-ho'ga, 1 kuī"ą-hō'ga; 1 cŷ"a-hō'ĝa, n. 1. A river in N. E. Ohio; 100 m. long to Lake Erie at Cleveland. 2. A county in N. E. Ohio; 472 sq. m.; county-seat, Cleveland.

Cuy"a-ho'ga Falls. A village in Summit county, O.

Cu"ya-po', 1 kū"yu-pō'; 2 cų"yä-pō', n. A town in Nueva Ecija province, Luzon, P. I.

Cuy'ler, 1 kuī'ler; 2 cŷ'ler, Theodore Ledyard (9/21822–2/21909). An American Presbyterian clergyman, temperance advocate, and author; Mountain-tops with Jesus, etc.

Cu-yo', 1 kū-yō'; 2 cų-yō', n. 1. An island of the Cuyos group, Calamianes province, P. I. 2. A town in Cuyo, P. I.

Cuyp, 1 kaip; 2 cŏyp, n. 1. Albert (1605–1691), a Dutch painter. 2. Jacob Gerritsz (1575–1649?), a Dutch portrait-painter; father of the preceding. Culjp‡; Kuyp‡.

Cuz'co, 1 kūs'ko; 2 cųs'co, n. 1. A department in S. Peru; 156,270 sq. m. 2. Its capital, taken by Pizarro in 1536.

CV., abbr. Convertible bonds: in ticker-tape usage.

C. W., abbr. Canada West.— cwt., abbr. Hundred-weight.

-cy, suffix. Denoting office, quality, rank. [< L. -cia, -tia, or Gr. -kia, -tia, -teia.]

CY., abbr. Currency: ticker-tape usage.

Cy, abbr. Cyanogen group.

cy-am'e-lid, ⎫ 1 sai-am'i-lid, -lid or -laid; 2 cŷ-ăm'e-lĭd, cy-am'e-lide, ⎭ -lid or -lid, n. Chem. A white inodorous compound ($(CNOH_2)_3$) polymeric modification of cyanic acid.

cy-am'el-lone, 1 sai-am'e-lōn; 2 cŷ-ăm'ĕ-lōn, n. Chem. A theoretical compound ($C_6H_2N_{12}$) derived from cyanogen, known only by its salts. Formerly called hydromellonic acid, now called mellonhydrid. [< CYANIC + MELLONE.]

cy-am"e-lu'ric, 1 sai-am'i-liū'rik; 2 cŷ-ăm'ĕ-lū'rĭc, a. Relating to or designating the tribasic acid $C_6H_3N_7O_3+2^1/_2H_2O$. [< CYAMELLONE + URIC.]

Cy-am'i-dæ, 1 sai-am'i-di; 2 cŷ-ăm'i-dē, n. pl. Crust. A family of parasitic caprellidean amphipods with a broad, depressed body and second antennæ obsolete; whale-lice. Cy'a-mus, n. (t. g.) [< Gr. kyamos, bean.]— cy'a-mid, n.— cy'a-mold, a.

Cy'a-mon, 1 sai'ą-mon; 2 cŷ'ą-mŏn, n. Bib. (Apocrypha.) [Judith vii, 3.

cy'an, 1 sai'an; 2 cŷ'ăn, n. Same as CYANOGEN.

cy"an-a-cet'ic, 1 sai"an-ą-set'ik; 2 cŷ"ăn-ą-cĕt'ĭc, a. Chem. Derived from chloracetic acid by treating it with potassium cyanide: as cyanacetic acid ($CN.CH_2CO_2H$). [< CYANIC + ACETIC.]

cy"an-al'kin, ⎫ 1 sai"an-al'kin, -kin or -kin; 2 cŷ"ăn-ăl'kin, cy"an-al'kine, ⎭ -kin or -kin, n. Chem. Any one of a class of metadiazin compounds derived from alkylcyanides by polymerization. [< CYANO- + ALKALIN.]

cy"an-am'id, ⎫ 1 sai"an-am'id, -id or -aid; 2 cŷ"ăn-cy"an-am'ide, ⎭ ăm'id, -id or -id, n. Chem. A white crystalline compound (CH_2N_2) formed variously by the action of cyanogen chlorid on ammonia. [< cyan- (in CYANOGEN) + AMID.]

cy"an-an'i-lin, ⎫ 1 sai"an-an'i-lin, -lin or -lin; 2 cŷ"ăn-ăn'icy"an-an'i-line, ⎭ lin, -lin or -lin, n. A basic, crystalline compound, $(NH:CNHC_6H_5)_2$, formed by subjecting anilin to the action of cyanogen. [< CYANO- + ANILIN.]

cy'a-nate, 1 sai'ą-nēt; 2 cŷ'ą-nāt, n. Chem. A salt of cyanic acid; as, ammonium cyanate (NH_4CNO), a white crystalline compound readily convertible into urea.

cy"an-au'rate, 1 sai'an-ō'rēt; 2 cŷ'ăn-ą'rāt, n. Same as AURICYANID.

cy"an-au'ric, 1 sai'an-ō'rik; 2 cŷ'ăn-ą'rĭc, a. Chem. Relating to the acid $HAu(CN)_4.3H_2O$, which can be broken up by heat into gold, cyanogen, and hydrocyanic acid. [< CYANO- + AURIC.]

Cy-an'e-a, 1 sai-an'i-ą; 2 cŷ-ăn'ĕ-a, n. Zoöph. 1. A genus typical of Cyaneidæ. 2. [c-] A discomedusan of this genus. [< L. cyaneus; see CYANEOUS.]

Cy"a-ne'i-dæ, 1 sai'a-nī'i-di; 2 cŷ"ą-nē'ĭ-dē, n. pl. Zoöph. A family of semostomous discomedusans with a thick umbrella thinner toward the margin and deeply lobed. [< CYANEA.] Cy-an'i-dæ‡.— cy-an'e-id, n.— cy-an'e-oid, a.

cy'a-ne'ous, 1 sai-ē'ni-us; 2 cŷ-ą-nē'ŭs, a. Azure-colored; blue, like lapis lazuli. [< L. cyaneus, < Gr. kyaneos, < kyanos, a dark-blue substance.] cy-an'e-an‡.

cy"an-eph'i-dro'sis, 1 sai"an-ef'i-drō'sis; 2 cŷ"ăn-ĕf'ĭ-drō'sis, n. Pathol. A condition characterized by blue discoloration of the secretion of the sweat-glands; blue sweat. [< CYANO- + EPHIDROSIS.]

cy"a-nes'cent, 1 sai'a-nes'ent; 2 cŷ"ą-nĕs'ĕnt, a. Having a tendency to turn dark blue.

cy"an-eth'in, ⎫ 1 sai'an-eth'in, -in or -in; 2 cŷ"ăn-ĕth'in, cy"an-eth'ine, ⎭ -in or -in, n. Chem. A compound ($C_4H_{11}N_3$) obtained by subjecting ethyl cyanid to the action of potassium; hydrocyanic ether. [< CYANO- + ETHYL.]

cy"an-for'mic, 1 sai'an-fōr'mik; 2 cŷ'ăn-fōr'mĭc, a. Same as CYANOFORMIC.

cy"an-hem"o-glo'bin, 1 sai'an-hem'o-glō'bin; 2 cŷ'ăn-hĕm'o-glō'bin, n. Chem. A compound formed by the action of hydrocyanic acid upon hemoglobin. [< CYANO- + HEMOGLOBIN.]

cy"an-hi-dro'sis, 1 sai'an-hi-drō'sis; 2 cŷ'ăn-hi-drō'sis, n. Pathol. A bluish sweat. [< Gr. kyanos, dark-blue, + hidros, sweat.]

cy"an-hy'drate, 1 sai'an-hai'drēt; 2 cŷ'ăn-hŷ'drāt, n. Same as CYANHYDRIN. [Same as HYDROCYANIC.

cy"an-hy'dric, 1 sai'an-hai'drik; 2 cŷ'ăn-hŷ'drĭc, a. Chem.

cy"an-hy'drin, 1 sai'an-hai'drin; 2 cŷ'ăn-hŷ'drin, n. Chem. Any one of the compounds of cyanogen and hydroxyl, formed usually by the addition of hydrocyanic acid to an aldehyde or ketone.

cy-an'ic, 1 sai-an'ik; 2 cŷ-ăn'ĭc, a. 1. Chem. Of, pertaining to, or containing cyanogen. 2. Of or pertaining to blue. [< Gr. kyanos, dark-blue.] 3. Same as CYANOTIC.— cyanic acid, a volatile liquid compound (HCNO), with a penetrating pungent odor and caustic properties, that is stable at low temperatures only.— c. colors (Bot.), a series of colors in flowers beginning with the blue shades and running through violet and purple to red: opposed to the xanthic colors, beginning with yellow and running through orange to red.

cy'a-nid, } 1 sai'ə-nid, -nid or -nəid; 2 cȳ'a-nĭd, -nĭd or cy'a-nide, } -nīd, vt. Metal. To subject to the action of cyanid; as, to extract gold by cyaniding the ore.— cy"a-ni-da'tion, n.

cy'a-nid, } n. Chem. A compound of cyanogen with a cy'a-nide, } metallic element or radical. [< CYANOGEN.] — alkaline cyanid, any cyanid obtained from the union of an alkali metal with cyanogen.— c. of cacodyl, a very poisonous compound of cacodyl and cyanogen exceeding prussic acid in its effect.— c. process (Metal.), a process of extracting metal (chiefly gold and silver) from ores by means of a dilute potassium cyanid solution, which, assisted by the action of oxygen, dissolves the metal, and this is afterward precipitated on zinc. The method saves much valuable material, wasted by cruder processes.— platinobarium c., same as PLATINUM BARICYANID.— potassium c., a poisonous white crystalline compound (KCN) used in photography, in electro-metallurgy, and as a reagent; also known as prussiate of potash.

cy-an'ĭ-din, } 1 sai-an'ĭ-din, -din or -dĭn; 2 cȳ-ăn'ĭ-dĭn, cy-an'ĭ-dine, } -din or -dīn, n. See TRIAZIN.

cy'a-nid-ĭ"on, 1 sai'ə-nid-aĭ'ən; 2 cȳ'a-nid-ĭ'on, n. Chem. Ionic cyanogen (CN^-).

cy"a-nil'ic, 1 sai'ə-nĭl'ik; 2 cȳ"a-nĭl'ic, a. Relating to or designating the crystalline acid ($C_3H_3N_3O_3+2H_2O$) formed by subjecting mellone to the action of boiling nitric acid. It is isomeric with cyanuric acid.

cy"an-im'id, } 1 sai"an-im'id; 2 cȳ"ăn-ĭm'id, n. Any salt cy"an-im'ide, } of the acid H_2CN_2, not found free in nature, but always in combination with some base.— calcium cyanimid, same as CALCIUM CYANAMID. [< CYANO- + IMID.]

cy'a-nin, } 1 sai'ə-nin, -nin or -nĭn; 2 cȳ'a-nĭn, -nĭn or cy'a-nine, } -nĭn, n. 1. Anthocyanin. 2. A blue dye derived from quinolin and lepidin. See BLUE DYE. [< Gr. kyanos, dark-blue.]

cy'a-nite, 1 sai'ə-nait; 2 cȳ'a-nīt, n. Mineral. A blue, gray, or black aluminum silicate (Al_2SiO_5) occurring usually in long blade-like triclinic crystals: found also columnar to fibrous in structure: rarely used as a gem. Also and preferably ky'a-nite. [< Gr. kyanos, dark-blue.] — cy"a-nit'ic, a.

cy"an-met-hem"o-glo'bin, 1 sai"an-met-hem'o-glō'bin; 2 cȳ"ăn-mĕt-hĕm'o-glō'bin, n. Physiol. Chem. A compound resulting from the action of hydrocyanic acid on methemoglobin or oxyhemoglobin.

cy'a-no-, 1 sai'ə-no-; 2 cȳ'a-no-. From Greek kyanos, dark-blue: a combining form.— cy"a-no-ben'zine, n. Chem. Benzonitrile (C_6H_5CN).— cy"a-no-chlo'rous, a. Bluish-green in color.— cy"a-no-chro'ite, n. Mineral. A clear-blue hydrous copper potassium sulfate ($CuSO_4K_2SO_4 + 6H_2O$), crystallizing in the monoclinic system.

Other words beginning with this prefix will be found in alphabetical place either singly or in groups.

Cy"a-no-cit'ta, 1 sai'ə-no-sit'ə; 2 cȳ"a-no-cĭt'a, n. Ornith. A genus of American Corvidæ, characterized by light-blue and white plumage and a conspicuous crest. The eastern blue jay is C. cristata, and a common western species is C. stelleri. [< CYANO- + Gr. kitta, chattering bird.]

cy"a-no-crys'tal-lin, n. Chem. The blue coloring-matter in the shells and eggs of lobsters and crabs.— cy"a-no-der'ma, n. Pathol. Cyanosis.

cy'a-no-form, 1 sai'ə-no-fôrm; 2 cȳ'a-no-fôrm, n. Chem. A compound, $(CH(CN)_3)$, obtained by subjecting chloroform to the action of potassium cyanid. [< CYANO- + FORM.] — cy"a-no-for'mic, a.— cyanoformic acid (Chem.), the hypothetical acid $CN.CO_2H$, existing only in its esters and not obtainable in a free state.

cy-an'o-gen, 1 sai-an'o-jen; 2 cȳ-ăn'o-ĝĕn, n. Chem. A colorless, poisonous, liquefiable gas (C_2N_2), having an almond-like odor and burning with a purple flame, obtained by heating mercuric cyanid. It acts as a univalent radical (CN), and is chemically analogous to the haloid elements. Its antidote is inhaled ammonia, and stimulants.

Cyanogen was first prepared by GAY-LUSSAC in 1815. . . . The name . . . was suggested by the colour of Prussian blue, . . . the earliest known compound of cyanogen. WATTS Dict. Chem.

[< Gr. kyanos, dark-blue, + -GEN.] — cyanogen bromid (Chem.), a poisonous, colorless crystalline substance (CNBr), soluble in water, used in extracting gold from ores.— c. chlorid (Chem.), a very pungent, colorless gas (CNCl), produced by subjecting hydrocyanic acid or a cyanid to the action of chlorin.

cy"a-no-gen'e-sis, n. The making of hydrocyanic acid.— cy"a-no-ge-net'ic, a.— cy"a-no-mac-lu'rin, n. Chem. A chemical compound ($C_{11}H_{11}O_6$) derived from the wood of Artocarpus integrifolia, commonly called jackwood.— cy"a-nom'e-ter, n. An instrument for measuring the intensity of blue, as in the sky.— cy"a-no-met'ric, a.— cy"a-nom'e-try, n.— cy"a-nop'a-thy, n. Same as CYANOSIS. — cy"a-no-path'ic, a.— cy"a-noph'ĭ-lous, a. Biol. Possessing a marked affinity for blue or green coloring matter. cy"a-no-phil'ic;.— Cy"a-no-phyc'e-æ, n. pl. Bot. The blue-green seaweeds. See SCHIZOPHYCEÆ.— cy"a-no-phyc'e-an, n. An alga of the family Cyanophyceæ.— cy"a-no-phyc'e-ous, a.— cy-an'o-phyl, n. A supposititious blue constituent of chlorophyl. cy-an'o-phyll'ĭ.— cy"a-no'pi-an, n. Pathol. A diseased condition in which all things seen appear blue or bluish. cy"a-nop'sĭ-a.— cy"a-no-plat'ĭ-nite, n. Same as PLATINOCYANID.— cy"a-no-plat'ĭ-nous, a. Same as PLATINOCYANIC.— cy'a-nosed, a. Affected with cyanosis.— cy-an'o-sin, cy-an'o-sine, n. A mordant acid dye, giving a red or pink color; methylated phloxin.— cy"a-no'sis, n. Pathol. A disordered condition of the circulation causing a livid, bluish color in the skin; blue jaundice. cy"a-no-chro'la; cy"a-nop'a-thy.— cy-an'o-site, n. Mineral. Same as CHALCANTHITE. cy'a-nose.— cy-a-not'ic, a. Pathol. Pertaining to or of the nature of cyanosis; having cyanosis.— cy"a-no-trich'ite, n. Mineral. A drusy blue hydrous sulfate ($H_{14}Cu_4Al_2SO_{18}$) that crystallizes in the orthorhombic system.— cy-an'o-type, n. A photographic picture, as a blue-print, made with the use of a cyanid.

cy-an"u-ram'id, } 1 sai-an'yu-ram'id, -id or -ĭd; 2 cȳ-cy-an"u-ram'ide, } ăn'yu-răm'id, -id or -ĭd, n. Same as MELAMIN. [< CYANURIC + AMIDE.]

cy-an'u-rate, 1 sai-an'yu-rēt; 2 cȳ-ăn'yu-rāt, n. Chem. A salt of cyanuric acid.

cy-an"u-ren'ic, 1 sai-an'yu-ren'ik; 2 cȳ-ăn"yu-rĕn'ic, a. Same as CYANURIC.

cy-an'u-ret, 1 sai-an'yu-ret; 2 cȳ-ăn'yu-rĕt, n. Chem. Cyanid: formerly so called.

cy"an-u'ric, 1 sai"an-yū'rik; 2 cȳ"ăn-yu'ric, a. Chem. Of or pertaining to cyanogen and urea. [< cyan- (in CYANOGEN) + URIC.] — cyanuric acid, a crystalline compound ($C_3H_3O_3N_3$) obtained variously, as by the dry distillation of uric acid.

cy-an'u-rin, 1 sai-an'yu-rin; 2 cȳ-an'yu-rin, n. An indigo-blue color derived from urine. [< CYANO- + Gr. ouron, urine.]

cy"an-ur"tri-am'id or -ide, 1 sai"an-ūr"tri-am'id; 2 cȳ"ăn-ūr"trĭ-ăm'id, n. See MELAMIN.

cy-aph'e-nin, } 1 sai-af'ı-nin, -nin or -nĭn; 2 cȳ-ăf'e-nin, cy-aph'e-nine, } -nĭn or -nīn, n. Chem. A triazine derivative ($C_3(C_6H_5)_2N_3$). [< CYANATE + PHENYL.]

Cy"a-thas'pis, 1 sai"ə-thas'pıs; 2 cȳ"a-thăs'pis, n. Paleon. A genus of ostracophores characterized by its dorsal shield and rostral plate, found in the Upper Silurian and Lower Old Red Sandstone formations, the Silurian specimens being the oldest vertebrate forms known. [< CYATHO- + Gr. aspis, shield.]

Cy"a-thax-o-nĭ'ĭ-dæ, 1 sai"ə-thaks'o-nai'ı-dı; 2 cȳ"a-thaks'o-nĭ'ĭ-dē, n. pl. Zoöph. A Paleozoic family of corals resembling Turbinolitidæ, but with a septal fossula and a styliform columella. Cy"a-thax-o'nĭ-a, n. (t. g.) [< Gr. kyathos, cup, + axōn, axis.] Cy"a-thax-on'ĭ-dæ‡.— cy"a-thax-o'nĭ-id, n.— cy"a-thax-o'nĭ-oid, a.

Cy-ath'e-a, 1 sai-ath'ı-ə; 2 cȳ-ăth'e-a, n. Bot. A genus of tropical cyatheaceous tree-ferns with trunk, sometimes 50 feet high, crowned by a head of large graceful fronds, with the fruit-dots dorsal and enclosed in a cup-shaped indusium. [< Gr. kyathos, cup.]

cy-ath'i-form, 1 sai-ath'ı-form; 2 cȳ-ăth'ĭ-fôrm, a. Cup-shaped. [< L. cyathus (see CYATHUS) + -FORM.] cy'a-thoid‡.

cy-ath'i-um, 1 sai-ath'ı-um; 2 cȳ-ăth'ĭ-ûm, n [-I-A, pl.] Bot. The monœcious involucrate inflorescence of Euphorbia. [< Gr. kyathos, cup.]

cy'a-tho-, 1 sai'ə-tho-; 2 cȳ'a-tho-. From Greek kyathos, cup or ladle: a combining form.— Cy"a-tho-crin'ĭ-dæ, n. pl. Echin A Paleozoic family of fistulate crinoids, especially those having a dicyclic base, subglobose calyx, and radials with horseshoe-like facets supporting brachials. Cy"a-thoc'ri-nus, n. (t. g.) — cy"a-thoc'ri-nid, n.— cy"a-thoc'ri-nite, n.— cy"a-thoc'ri-noid, a. & n.— cy-ath'o-lith, n. Biol. A cup-shaped coccolith.— cy"a-thom'e-ter, n. A device used to detect any disturbance of a liquid in a container.— Cy"a-tho-phyl'lĭ-dæ, n. pl. Zoöph. A family of cyathophylloideans with septa smooth and consisting of a median plate thickened by stereoplasma. Cy"a-tho-phyl'lum, n. (t. g.) — cy"a-tho-phyl'lĭd, n.— cy"a-tho-phyl'loid, a. & n.— Cy"a-tho-phyl-lol'dc-a, n. pl. Zoöph. A Paleozoic section of rugose corals having the peripheral region of the visceral chamber extensively occupied by vesicular dissepimental tissue whose lenticular cells are directed obliquely downward.— cy"a-tho-phyl-lol'dc-an, a. & n.— cy"a-tho-zo'oid, n. Ascid. A rudimentary zooid formed from the blastoderm in certain tunicates, as Pyrosoma. It gives off a prolongation on which are four zooids, of which it gradually becomes the central cloacal cavity.

A Cyathus.

cy'a-thus, 1 sai'ə-thus; 2 cȳ'a-thŭs, n. [-THI, l -thaĭ; 2 -thĭ, pl.] 1. Gr. Antiq. (1) A drinking-cup or ladle with a long handle, for ladling wine from the crater. (2) An Attic liquid and dry measure of 1/6 cotyle. 2. Bot. (1) A cup-shaped cavity in certain cryptogams. (2) [C-] A genus of nest-fungi (Nidulariaceæ), the bird's-nest fungi. [L., < Gr. kyathos, cup.]

Cy-ax'a-res, 1 sai-aks'ə-rīz; 2 cȳ-ăks'a-rēs, n. A king of Media, reigned 634–594 B. C.; destroyed Nineveh.

Cyb'e-le, 1 sib'ı-lĭ; 2 cȳb'e-lē, n. Class. Myth. A goddess of Phrygian origin, identified more or less completely by the Greeks with Rhea, the mother of the gods: often called Great Mother. Compare RHEA. [L., < Gr. Kybelē, Cybele.] Cy-be'bē; Cy-bel'ē.

Cybele, from an Athenian ex-voto relief, Berlin.

cyc., cyclo., abbr. Cyclopedia; cyclopedic.

cy'cad, 1 sai'kad; 2 cȳ'căd, n. Bot. 1. Any plant of the Cycadaceæ. cyc'a-dite‡. 2. Any fossilized cycadean plant.— cy-ca'de-an, a.— cy-cad'ĭ-form, a. Bot. Having the form of a cycad.

Cyc"a-da'ce-æ, 1 sik'ə-dē'sı-ı; 2 cȳc"a-dā'ce-ē, n. pl. Bot. A family of gymnospermous plants. — the cycad family — of palm-like or fern-like aspect with unbranched stem bearing a crown of circinate, pinnate leaves. It embraces 9 genera and 75 species, chiefly of the southern hemisphere. [< CYCAS.] Cy-cad'e-æt.— cyc"a-da'ceous, a. — Cyc"a-do-fil'ĭ-ces, n. pl. Paleobot. The Pteridospermæ.

Cy'cas, 1 sai'kas; 2 cȳ'căs, n. Bot. A genus of trees of the cycad family with cylindrical unbranched stems terminating in a crown of pinnate leaves, natives of the eastern hemisphere. [< Gr. kykas, African coco-palm.]

cyc'lad, 1 sik'lad; 2 cȳc'lăd, n. 1. See under CYCLADIDÆ. 2. [C-] A native of the Cyclades.

Cyc'la-des, 1 sik'la-dīz; 2 cȳc'la-dēs, n. pl. A group of islands in the Ægean sea, a nome of Greece: 923 sq. m.; capital, Hermopolis (Syra).

Cy-clad'ĭc, 1 si-klad'ık; 2 cy-clăd'ĭc, a. Of or pertaining to the Cyclades: especially with reference to a prehistoric period between 2500 and 1500 B. C.

Cy-clad'ĭ-dæ, 1 si-klad'ı-dī; 2 cy-clăd'ĭ-dē, n. Zool. A family of diminutive fresh-water bivalve mollusks, called by recent conchologists the Sphæriidæ. Cyc'las[1], n. (t. g.) [< L. cyclas; see CYCLAS.] — cyc'lad[2], n. Any species of Cyclas, remarkable for spinning anchoring threads.

Cyc'la-men, 1 sik'lə-men; 2 cȳc'la-mĕn, n. Bot. 1. A small genus of Old World bulbous herbs of the primrose family with cordate, large-petioled leaves, handsome flowers, and slender one-flowered scapes: cultivated in greenhouses. 2. [c-] A plant of this genus: frequently called sowbread, from the fondness of swine for the tubers. [< Gr. kyklaminos, < kyklos, circle.]

cyc'la-min, 1 sik'lə-min; 2 cȳc'la-mĭn, n. A white amorphous compound ($C_{32}H_{52}O_{16}$) contained in species of Cyclamen, of which it is the bitter principle. cyc'la-mine‡.

cyc"la-mi-re'tin, 1 sik"lə-mi-rī'tin; 2 cȳc"la-mi-rē'tĭn, n. Chem. A white amorphous compound ($C_{14}H_{12}O_2$), made by subjecting cyclamin to hydrolysis. [< CYCLAMIN + Gr. rhētinē, resin.]

cyc'la-mon, 1 sik'lə-mon; 2 cȳc'la-mŏn, n. Ceram. A purplish red. [< CYCLAMEN.]

cyc'la-mose, 1 sik'lə-mōs; 2 cȳc'la-mōs, n. Chem. A sugar ($C_{12}H_{22}O_{11}$), having levorotatory properties, derived from the roots of the Cyclamen europæum.

Cyc"lan-tha'ce-æ, 1 sik"lan-thē'sı-ı; 2 cȳc"lăn-thā'ce-ē, n. pl. Bot. A small family of palm-like monocotyledonous herbs of the order Cyclanthales, closely allied to the Pandanaceæ, natives of tropical America. It embraces 4 genera and 35 species. Cyc-lan'thus (the typical genus) has a contracted stem and fan-like 2-cleft leaves. [< Gr. kyklos, circle, + anthos, flower.] — cyc"lan-tha'ceous, a. [period.

cyc'lar, 1 sik'lar; 2 cȳc'lar, a. Of or pertaining to a cycle or cyc"lar-thro'sis, 1 sik"lar-thrō'sis; 2 cȳc"lăr-thrō'sis, n. [-SES, 1 -sīz; 2 -sēs, pl.] Anat. An articulation, as that of the head of the radius on the ulna, in which a ring-like surface is fitted around an axial pivot. [< Gr. kyklos, circle, + ARTHROSIS.] — cyc"lar-thro'dĭ-al, a. cyc'las[2], 1 sik'las or sai'klas; 2 cȳc'las or cȳ'clas, n. 1. Rom. Antiq. An outer garment for women, having a border of embroidery, of the time of the Empire. 2. A long sleeveless gown worn in the middle ages by women, and by knights over chain armor. [L., < Gr. kyklas, around, < kyklos, circle.]

cy'cle, 1 sai'kl; 2 cȳ'cl, vi. 1. To pass through cycles. 2. To ride a cycle. 3†. To move in an orbit.

And marked with lunar cycles solar years.
ERASMUS DARWIN Botanic Garden, Econ. of Veg. can. 2, l. 93.

2. Hence, any recurring period in which a series of events or phenomena takes place; a round of years or of ages; a vast period; eon. 3. A series that repeats itself; in physics, a recurring series of operations, as in gas or internal combustion motors, in which heat is imparted to or taken from a substance, which by expansion or contraction gives out or stores up energy, and is finally returned to its original condition. See OTTO CYCLE; CARNOT CYCLE. 4. Elec. A full period of an alternating current, beginning at the zero line, going to maximum in one sense, returning to zero, going to maximum in the other sense, and then returning to zero. 5. Bot. An entire turn or circle, as of a spiral leaf-structure. 6. Zoöph. A set of equal coralline septa. 7. The body of mythology or legends relating to some particular period, person, or achievement; as, the Arthurian cycle; the cycle of the Nibelungenlied.

The poet connects with the name of Beowulf another epic cycle as old as the Aryan race. BROTHER AZARIAS Development of Eng. Lit. ch. 1, p. 42. [A. 1879.]

8. Old Med. An aggregate of curative means continued during a certain number of days, usually nine. 9. A bicycle or tricycle; a wheel: an abbreviated form. 10. Math. A closed path in a diagram; loop. 11†. An orbit. [< LL, cyclus, < Gr. kyklos, circle.] Syn.: see AGE. — Callippic cycle, a period of 76 years, or four Metonic cycles.— closed c., a series of states of a gas in which the last condition as to volume, pressure, and temperature is the same as the first.— c. of alternations (Elec.), the values of current, of electromotive force, or of attendant effects, correlated in time, throughout the period required by an alternating current to reestablish its initial condition.— c. of eclipses, a period of $6,585^1/_3$ days, or 18 years 11 days, at the end of which eclipses generally recur in the same order. Compare SAROS.— c. of erosion (Geol.), the period or series of stages through which a region passes when reduced by erosion from an initially uplifted or mountainous condition to a peneplain or almost level plain near base-level.— c. of indiction (Rom. Chronol.), a period of 15 years. — cy'cle-way", n. A roadway for cyclists.— eleven-year c. (Astron.), the period in which the largest number of sun-spots recur.— Ericsson's c., the series of operations to which gas is subjected in Ericsson's caloric-engine and by which after being used it is restored to its original condition. — genesial c., the period between puberty and the menopause, during which a woman is capable of generative functions.— geographical c. (Phys. Geog.), a period coinciding with the cycle of erosion.— Joule's c. (Thermodynam.), that used in the air engine designed by Joule. In this cycle air is pumped from a cold chamber and subjected to adiabatic compression until its pressure is the same as that of the air in a hot chamber into which it is then passed, causing the inflow of an equal amount of hot air into the cylinder. Here it undergoes adiabatic expansion until its temperature falls to that of a cold chamber into which it is exhausted. Refrigerating machines now use this cycle in reverse order.— Metonic or lunisolar c., a period of 19 Julian years, amounting to very nearly 235 lunar revolutions, at the conclusion of which the phases of the moon recur at the same time of the year.— schizogenic c., the period of reproduction during which some parasites multiply by division.— solar or heliacal c., a period of 28 years at the end of which the days of the months fall again on the same days of the week.— sporogenic c., animal parasites in their spore stage.

cy'cli, 1 sai'klai; 2 cȳ'cli, n. Plural of CYCLUS.

Cyc"lĭ-æ, 1 sik"lı-ı; 2 cȳc"lĭ-ē, n. pl. An extinct order of marsipobranch fishes with a calcified back-bone and skull, represented by a single Devonian family, the Palæospondylidæ. [< Gr. kyklos, circle.]— cyc'lĭ-an, a. & n.

cyc'lĭ-an, 1 sik'lı-an; 2 cȳc'lĭ-an, a. 1. Pertaining to the circle in which the chorus danced around the altar while the dithyramb was sung. 2. Pertaining to an epic cycle cyc'lic, 1 sik'lik or sai'klik; 2 cȳc'lic or cȳ'clic, a. 1. Pertaining to or characterized by cycles; recurring in cycles. Specif., in mathematics: (1) Designating an operation the continued repetition of which brings the thing operated on to its original state. (2) Of or pertaining to a closed path in a diagram.

2. Gr. Lit. (1) Of or pertaining to the cycle of fables of the Homeric and pre-Homeric age.

Those poems which are classed under the appellation of Cyclic, the Hymns, or Proemia, as the ancients termed them. R. W. BROWNE Hist. Class. Lit. bk. i, ch. 6, p. 93 [n. a. co. 1852.]

(2) Cyclian. 3. Anc. Pros. Descriptive of a certain kind of shortened dactyl or anapæst occupying three moræ instead of four. 4. Having the parts arranged in a whorl. 5. Chem. Of or pertaining to a closed chain formation. [< L. cyclicus, < Gr. kyklikos, < kyklos, circle.] cyc'lĭ-cal‡.— cyclical form (Mus.), a composition the main theme of which recurs frequently in the same form.— cyclic hydrocarbon, a hydrocarbon in which the carbon atoms are in a closed ring.— c. poets (Gr. Lit.), poets whose subjects were drawn from the cycle of early Greek legends, or who wrote for the dithyrambic chorus. — c. surface (Geom.), a bounded surface which can be reduced to a loop or network by contracting its boundaries

Cyc"li-co-por'i-dæ, 1 sik"li-ko-pōr'i-dī; 2 çÿc"li-co-pōr'i-dē, n. pl. Helminth. A family of escharoidean polyzoans with zoœcia in longitudinal rows. Cyc"li-cop'o-ra, n. (t. g.) [< L. cyclicus, CYCLIC, + porus, PORE.] — cyc"li-cop'o-rid, n.— cyc"li-cop'o-roid, a.

cyc"li-cot'o-my, 1 sik"li-kot'o-mi; 2 çÿc"li-cōt'o-my, n. Cutting of the ciliary body; a means of relieving tension in glaucoma. [< Gr. kyklikos, circular, + -TOMY.]

cy'clid, 1 sai'klid; 2 çÿ'clid, a. Ich. Same as CYCLOID.

Cyc'li-dæ, 1 sik'li-dī; 2 çÿc'li-dē, n. pl. Crust. A Carboniferous family of xiphosurans, with an orbicular body and abdomen of three segments little differentiated from the cephalic shield. [< CYCLUS.] — cyc'lid, n.

cy'clide, 1 sai'klid or -klaid; 2 çÿ'clid or -clid, n. Geom. The envelop of a sphere of varying diameter which touches three fixed spheres. [F., < Gr. kyklos, circle.]

cy'cling, 1 sai'kliŋ; 2 çÿ'cling, n. The sport of riding the bicycle or tricycle; the art of the cyclist.

cy'clist, 1 sai'klist; 2 çÿ'clist, n. 1. One who rides a bicycle or tricycle. 2. One who maintains the cyclic recurrence of events, especially the recurrence of meteorological phenomena, famines, and commercial crises, in connection with sun-spots.— cy-clis'tic, a.

cyc-li'tis, 1 sik-lai'tis or -li'tis; 2 çÿc-li'tis or -lē'tis, n. Pathol. Inflammation of the ciliary body. [< Gr. kyklos, circle.]

cy'clo-, 1 sai'klo- or sik'lo-; 2 çÿ'clo- or çÿc'lo-. From Greek kyklos, circle: a combining form.— Cy"clo-both'ra, n. Bot. 1. Same as CALOCHORTUS. 2. [c-] A Mexican plant (Calochortus flavus). It grows from 12 to 24 inches high, and has very long linear leaves and yellow flowers.— Cy"clo-bran'chi-a, n. pl. Conch. A group of gastropods, variously ranked and limited, including the limpets. Cy"clo-bran"chi-a'ta†.— cy"clo-bran'chi-an, n.— cy"clo-bran'chi-ate, a. Having the gills circularly disposed; of or pertaining to the Cyclobranchia.— cy"clo-ce'lous, a. Ornith. Relating to the intestine formation where the second and third loops are converted into a left-handed spiral. — cy"clo-ceph'a-lus, n. [-LI, pl.] Terat. 1. A cyclops. 2. The distention of the cranium which occurs in some forms of hydrocephalus and which causes displacement of the eyes. — Cy-cloc'er-as, n. Paleon. A genus of extinct cephalopods occurring in Paleozoic strata. Their shells are curved and have annuli and longitudinal ridges. — cy"clo-cer'a-ti'tis, n. Pathol. An inflammatory condition affecting the ciliary body and the cornea.— cy"clo-cil'nal, a. Geol. Same as QUAQUAVERSAL.— cy"clo-cœ'lic, a. Arranged in coils, as the intestines of raptorial and other birds; having the intestines thus arranged in coils.— Cy"clo-co'ni-um, n. A genus of hyphomycetous fungi parasitic on the leaves of the olive-tree producing the 'scab of olive.'— cy'clode, n. Geom. The *n*th evolvent of a circle.— Cy"clo-dis-ca'ri-a, n. pl. Protoz. A section of discoidean radiolarians without external phacoid shell.— cy"clo-dis-ca'ri-an, a.— Cy"clo-don'ta, n. pl. A group of mollusca in which the dentition is extremely curved.— Cy"clo-ga-nol'de-I, n. pl. Ich. An order or suborder of ganoid fishes, especially those with an ossified teleosteoid skull, branchiostegal rays, and cycloid scales, as in the bowfin.— cy"clo-gan'oid, cy"clo-ga-nol'de-an, a. & n.— cy'clo-gen, n. An exogen: formerly sometimes so called from the concentric circles of the stem.— cy-clog'e-nous, a. Geom. Applied to the derivation of the neoid. — cy'clo-graph, n. An instrument for drawing arcs of circles by means of two wheels of different diameters; also, an arcograph.— cy-clog'ra-phy, n. [Rare.] Geom. A method in which circles are used in the solution of geometrical problems.— cy"clo-hex'ane, n. Chem. Same as HEXAMETHYLENE.— cy"clo-hex'a-nol, n. An alcohol (C_6H_{11} OH) obtained from cyclohexane.— cy"clo-hex'a-none, n. A ketone ($C_6H_{10}O$), made by subjecting cyclohexanol to oxidation.

Other words beginning with this prefix will be found in alphabetical place, either singly or in groups.

cy'cloid, 1 sai'kloid; 2 çÿ'clȯid, a. 1. Like a circle; somewhat circular: specifically said of fish-scales with concentric rings and smooth edges. 2. Having cycloid scales; of or pertaining to the Cycloidei. 3. See CYCLOID, n., 1. [< Gr. kykloeidēs, < kyklos, circle; and see -OID.]

cy'cloid, n. 1. Geom. The curve described by a point in the plane of a circle that rolls along a straight line. A point on the circumference describes the common cycloid; one beyond it, the curtate cycloid; one within it, the prolate or inflected cycloid. Roberval and Torricelli showed that the area of the cycloid is three times that of its generating circle. BREWSTER Newton p. 170. [H. 1839.]

c, circle; b d, line upon which circle rolls; a, point on circumference; b a d, cycloid.

2. Ich. One of the Cycloidei.

Cy-cloi'de-I, 1 sai-kloi'di-aī; 2 çÿ-clȯi'de-I, n. pl. Ich. An order of fishes having cycloid scales. [< Gr. kykloeidēs; see CYCLOID, a.] — cy-cloi'de-an, a. & n.

cy-cloi'do-trope, 1 sai-kloi'do-trōp; 2 çÿ-clȯi'do-trōp, n. A lantern-slide used to show the process of engine-turning. [< CYCLO- + -OID + TROPE.]

cy-clo-im'ber, n. Geom. A closed curve on a cylinder, which becomes a circle when the surface is straightened into a plane.— cy'clo-lith, n. Archeol. A megalithic monument consisting of upright stones arranged in a circle; a cromlech. — cy"clo-mat'ic, a. Denoting the number of cycles or closed paths in a diagram.

cy-clom'e-ter, 1 sai-klom'i-tər; 2 çÿ-clȯm'e-ter, n. 1. An instrument for recording the rotations of a wheel, as of a bicycle; odometer. 2. One who endeavors to solve the problem of squaring the circle. [< CYCLO- + Gr. metron, measure.]

cy-clom'e-try, 1 sai-klom'i-tri; 2 çÿ-clȯm'e-try, n. The art of measuring circles; the squaring of the circle. [< CYCLO- + Gr. metron, measure.] — cy"clo-met'ric, a.

Cy"clo-my-a'ri-a, 1 sai"klo-[or sik"lo-]mai-ē'ri-ə; 2 çÿ"clo-[or çÿc"lo-]mÿ-ā'ri-a, n. pl. Ascid. A suborder or order of thallacean tunicates with the musculature of the mantle in the form of subcircular bands, by the contraction of which they progress. [< CYCLO- + Gr. mys, muscle.] — cy"clo-my-a'ri-an a. & n.

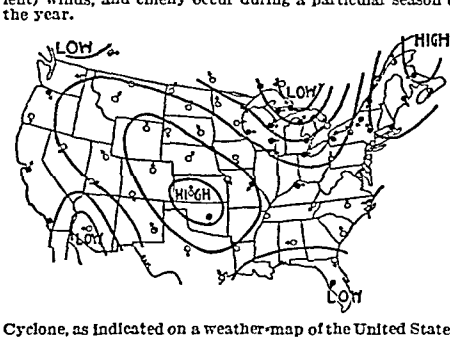
cy'clone, 1 sai'klōn; 2 çÿ'clōn, n. 1. Meteor. A system of winds circulating about a center of relatively low barometric pressure, and, at the earth's surface, blowing spirally inward: a term introduced into meteorology by H. Piddington, in 1848. Compare ANTICYCLONE.

The circulatory motion is in the direction of the hands of a clock in the southern hemisphere, and in the contrary direction in the northern hemisphere. The whole system has generally, but not always, a motion of translation, which is usually eastwardly except within the tropics. The cyclones of temperate latitudes cover hundreds, or even thousands, of square miles; they are not necessarily stormy, but are generally attended by cloudy weather, with rain or snow. They occur at all seasons. Those of the tropics cover a smaller area, are characterized by stronger (generally violent) winds, and chiefly occur during a particular season of the year.



Cyclone, as indicated on a weather-map of the United States.

A cyclone, or "low," is central north of the Lake Region: its northern half extends beyond the limits of the map. An anticyclone, or "high," overlies the Rocky Mountain slope.

The characteristic circulation of the wind "counterclockwise" around the cyclone-center, and with a tendency to turn inward, is shown by the arrows. The cyclone here illustrated was attended by moderate winds, cloudy weather, and rain; it was not a storm.

2. Meteor. A cyclonic storm; a cyclone characterized by crowded isobars and strong winds. In this sense the term is most frequently applied to the cyclones of the torrid zone, known also as tropical cyclones, hurricanes, typhoons, or baguios.

Not one of the 441 cyclones which have been registered [in the Philippines] from 1880 to 1900, inclusive, has been observed in the month of February. J. ALGUÉ The Cyclones of the Far East 2d ed., ch. 9, p. 86. [S. PTG. 1904.]

3. Popularly, any violent and destructive wind-storm, especially (in the United States) a tornado. 4. Astron. A violent rotatory storm in the sun's atmosphere. [< Gr. kyklōn, ppr. of kykloō, whirl round, < kyklos, circle.] Syn: hurricane, tornado, typhoon, whirlwind.— cy'clone-pit", n. [Western U. S.] A pit or cellar made for refuge from tornadoes. c.-cellar†.— secondary, subsidiary, or satellite c., a relatively small eddy formed on the outskirts of a large cyclone, which with respect to it is called the primary cyclone.— stationary c., a cyclone the center of which is stationary. In such a cyclone the isobars tend to become circular and the winds to coincide with them. — cy'clo-nal, a. Pertaining to a cyclone; cyclonic.

Cy"clo-ne'ma, 1 sai"klo-ni'mə; 2 çÿ"clo-nē'ma, n. Paleon. A genus of fossil gastropods, Lower Silurian to Upper Devonian.

cy-clon'ic, a. Like a cyclone in movement or appearance; situated where cyclones occur; as, a cyclonic storm or region. — cyclonic unit (Meteor.), a time-unit corresponding to the average time occupied by the passage of cyclones and anticyclones at a station.— cy-clon'i-cal-ly, adv.— cy-clon'o-graph, n. An apparatus on the principle of the storm-card, for indicating to mariners the safest course in a cyclonic storm.— cy"clo-nol'o-gist, n. An expert in the study of cyclones. cy'clo-nist†.— cy"clo-nol'o-gy, n.— cy-clon'o-scope, n. An apparatus for detecting the approach of a cyclone or tornado.

cy"clo-o'le-fine, 1 sai"klo-ō'li-fin or -fin; 2 çÿ"clo-ō'le-fin or -fin, n. Chem. Any hydrocarbon which has a cyclic structure and contains a double bond.

Cy'clop†, n. A Cyclops.

cy"clo-pæ'di-a, etc. Same as CYCLOPEDIA, etc.

cy"clo-pe'an, 1 sai"klo-pi'ən; 2 çÿ"clo-pē'an, a. 1. [C-] Of or pertaining to the mythical Cyclopes or their work; as, Cyclopean architecture.

I have seen neatly squared blocks [of ice] piled regularly one above the other in a Cyclopean wall.
KANE U. S. Grinnell Expedition ch. 42, p. 388. [H. 1854.]

2. Gigantic; as, a cyclopean task.

STRONG Our Country ch. 3, p. 30. [B. & T. CO.]

3. Arch. Of or designating a style characterized by massive, uneven blocks of stone and absence of mortar. 4. Having but one eye, and that in the center of the forehead, as certain crustaceans. 5. Placed, as an eye, in the center of the forehead. [< L. Cyclopeus, < Gr. Kyklōpeios, < Kyklōps; see CYCLOPS.] cy'clope† [Poet.]; cy-clop'ic†.— Cyclopean architecture or masonry, early megalithic building or masonry in stone, occurring in Greece, Asia Minor, and Italy, in which the walls are of huge blocks without mortar, in some examples with joints so perfectly fitted that a knife-blade can not be inserted in the interstices. Compare PELASGIC and POLYGONAL.

cy"clo-pæ'di-a, } 1. A work of reference giving, usually under its terms arranged in alphabetical order, a summary of some single branch of knowledge; as, a cyclopedia of mechanics or of music. 2. In wider sense, a work, similarly arranged, giving a comprehensive summary of all branches of learning; an encyclopedia. 3. The circle of human knowledge. [Short for ENCYCLOPEDIA, ENCYCLOPÆDIA.] cy"clo-pæ'dyt; cy'clo-pedet.

Syn: see DICTIONARY.

cy"clo-pæ'dic, } Of or pertaining to a cyclopedia. 2. Like a cyclopedia; possessing or embracing a wide range of knowledge. cy"clo-pe'[or -pæ']dl-cal†.

cy"clo-pe'dist, } 1 sai'klo-pi'dist; 2 çÿ'clo-pē'dist, n.
cy"clo-pæ'dist, } One who makes or contributes to a cyclopedia.

cy"clo-pen'tane, 1 sai"klo-pen'tēn; 2 çÿ"clo-pēn'tān, n. Same as PENTAMETHYLENE.

cy"clo-pho'ri-a, 1 sai"klo-fō'ri-ə; 2 çÿ"clo-fō'ri-a, n. Pathol. Turning of the eyeball from lack of power in the oblique muscles.— cy"clo-phor'ic, a.

Cy"clo-phor'i-dæ, 1 sai"klo-for'i-dī; 2 çÿ"clo-fōr'i-dē, n. pl. Conch. A family of terrestrial tænioglossate gastropods, especially those having many-cusped teeth, the median wide and the lateral and marginal nearly alike. Cy-cloph'o-rus, n. (t. g.)— cy-cloph'o-rid, n.— cy-cloph'o-roid, a.

cy-clo'pi-a[1], 1 sai-klō'pi-ə; 2 çÿ-clō'pi-a, n. Terat. A malformation in which both the eyes are united in a single cavity. [< L. Cyclops; see CYCLOPS.]

Cy-clo'pi-a[2], n. Bot. A genus of South-African shrubs of the bean family, of which certain species furnish the bush tea, an infusion of the leaves being valuable as an expectorant. [< CYCLO- + Gr. pous, foot.] — cy-clop'ic[1], a. Of or derived from a plant of the genus Cyclopia; as, cyclopic acid.

cy-clop'ick†.— cy-clop'i-cal-ly, adv. In cyclopean fashion.

Cy-clop'i-dæ, 1 sai-klep'i-dī; 2 çÿ-clŏp'i-dē, n. pl. Crust. A family of copepods, especially those with two minute simple eyes coalesced, obsolete mandibular palpus, and two egg-sacs. [< CYCLOPS.]— cy'clo-pid, n.— cy'clo-poid, a.

cy-clop'i-form, 1 sai-klep'i-fōrm; 2 çÿ-clŏp'i-fôrm, n. Crust. Formed like a cyclops. [< CYCLOPS + FORM.]

cy'clo-pin, 1 sai'klo-pin; 2 çÿ'clo-pĭn, n. Chem. A red compound ($C_{28}H_{28}O_{12}$ + H_2O) contained in the leaves of Cape tea (Cyclopia vogelii).

cy"clo-pro'pane, 1 sai"klo-prō'pēn; 2 çÿ"clo-prō'pān, n. Same as TRIMETHYLENE.

Cy'clops, 1 sai'kleps; 2 çÿ'clŏps, n. 1. [CYCLOPES, 1 -pīz; 2 -pēs, or CYCLOPS, pl.] Gr. Myth. (1) In Homeric legend, one of a race of one-eyed giant shepherds dwelling in Sicily, of whom Polyphemus was chief. (2) In Hesiodic legend, a Titan who forged Zeus's thunderbolts. 2. Crust. (1) A genus typical of Cyclopidæ. (2) [c-] [CY'CLOPS-ES, pl.] A fresh-water copepod of this genus. 3. [c-] [CY'CLOPS-ES, pl.] A tinker's port-able forge. 4. [c-] One affected with cyclopia. [< L. Cyclops, < Gr. Kyklōps, < kyklos, circle, + ōps, eye.] cy'clopt.

Ulysses and the Cyclops Polyphemus. From a Greek relief.

Cy"clop-sit-tac'i-dæ, 1 sai"klep-si-tas'i-dī; 2 çÿ"clŏp-si-tăç'i-dē, n. pl. Ornith. An Austro-Malayan family of parrots with bill deeper than long and under surface of bill hooked and nearly smooth. Cy"clop-sit'ta-cus, n. (t. g.) — cy"clop-sit'ta-cid, n.— cy"clop-sit'ta-coid, a.

Cy"clop-ter'i-dæ, 1 sai"klep-ter'i-dī; 2 çÿ"clŏp-tĕr'i-dē, n. pl. Ich. A family of fishes, especially cyclopteroideans having an ovate body and suborbital stay connected with the inner margin of the preopercular: including the lumpsucker. Cy-clop'ter-us, n. (t. g.) — cy-clop'ter-id, n.— cy-clop'ter-oid, a. & n.

cy-clop'ter-in, 1 sai-klep'tər-in; 2 çÿ-clŏp'ter-in, n. A protamin obtained from the spermatozoa of Cyclopterus lumpus.

Cy-clop'ter-is, 1 sai-klep'tər-is; 2 çÿ-clŏp'ter-is, n. A genus of fossil plants having large roundish rachial fern-pinnules.

Cy"clop-ter-ol'de-a, n. pl. Ich. Same as CYCLOPTERIDÆ.— Cy"clop-ter-ol'de-a, n. pl. Ich. A superfamily of mail-cheeked acanthopterygians with a ventral suctorial disk.— cy"clop-ter-ol'de-an, a. & n.— Cy"clop-ter-ol'de-I, n. pl. Same as CYCLOPTERIDÆ.

cy"clo-ra'ma, 1 sai"klo-rā'mə; 2 çÿ"clo-rā'ma, n. A circular panorama or continuous painting on the interior of a cylindrical surface, representing a tract of country, battle-field, or the like, appearing as in natural perspective, the spectator standing in the center. Compare COSMORAMA; DIORAMA; GEORAMA; PANORAMA. [< CYCLO- + Gr. horama, view, < horaō, see.] — cy"clo-ram'ic, a.

Cy-clor'rha-pha, n. pl. Entom. A section of dipterous insects whose pupa-case splits in a curvilinear manner.— cy-clor'rha-phous, a.— Cy"clo-sau'ra, n. pl. Herp. A group or suborder of lizards with the abdominal scales disposed in cross-bands, and a thick short tongue. Cy"clo-sau'ri-a†.— cy'clo-saur, n.— cy"clo-sau'ri-an, a. & n.

cy'clo-scope, 1 sai'klo-skōp; 2 çÿ'clo-scōp, n. A device for computing the rate at which wheels revolve. [< CYCLO- + SCOPE.]

cy'close, 1 sai'klōs; 2 çÿ'clōs, n. A sugar in which there is a closed carbon chain in the molecule. [< Gr. kyklos, circle.]

cy-clo'sis, 1 sai-klō'sis; 2 çÿ-clō'sis, n. 1. Circulation, as of protoplasm within a vegetable cell. 2. Geom. The existence of cycles or closed paths in a diagram. [< Gr. kyklosis, a surrounding.]

cy"clo-sper'mous, a. Bot. Having a coiled embryo.— Cy"clo-spon'dy-li, n. pl. An order of plagiostomous selachians with cyclospondylous vertebræ, including such shark-like fishes as the dogfishes (Squalidæ), the scymnoids (Somniosidæ), the bramble-sharks (Echinorhinidæ), and the angel-sharks (Squatinidæ).— cy"clo-spon'dy-lous, a. Cy-clos'to-ma, n. pl. Ich. The Cyclostomata.— Cy"clo-sto'ma-ta, n. pl. I. Helminth. A suborder of gymnolæmatous polyzoans having zoœcia with circular mouths lacking processes. 2. Ich. The Marsipobranchii.— cy"clo-stom'a-tous, a.— cy'clo-stome. I. a. Cyclostomous. II. n. 1. Ich. One of the Cyclostomi; a marsipobranch, as a lamprey. 2. Conch. A cyclostomoid gastropod.— Cy-clos'to-mi, n. pl. Ich. The Marsipobranchii.— cy"clo-sto'mi-an, a. Having a round opening, as the cells of some Polyzoa.— Cy"clo-stom'i-dæ, n. pl. Conch. A family of terrestrial tænioglossate gastropods, especially those having narrow few-cusped lateral teeth and broad marginal ones with pectinated crests, and a spiral shell with a circular aperture. Cy-clos'to-mus, n. (t. g.) Cy"clo-sto-mat'i-dæ†.— cy"clo-stom'a-toid, a.— cy-clos'to-mid, n.— cy-clos'to-moid, a.— cy-clos'to-mous, a. 1. Having a round mouth. 2. Of or pertaining to the Cyclostomi.— Cy"clo-strem'i-dæ, n. pl. Conch. A family of rhipidoglossate gastropods having lateral cirriform appendages, ciliated tentacles, the median tooth wide, the four lateral teeth narrow, marginal teeth denticulated, and shell depressed and not nacreous. Cy"clo-stre'ma, n.

(t. g.) Cy″clo-stre-mat′ı-dæ‡.— cy-clos′tre-mid, n.— cy-clos′tre-moid, a.

cy′clo-style, n. 1. An apparatus for manifolding manuscript, etc., by means of a very thin wax-paper stencil and ink-roller. Originally the paper was pierced by a tiny rough-edged wheel at the end of a handle used like a style, but in more modern apparatus a typewriter is used, the blow of the type removing the wax locally from the paper and permitting the ink to pass through: superseded by the neostyle. 2. Arch. A circular range of columns without a core or building within: distinguished from a peristyle, which surrounds a building.— cy″clo-sty′lar, a.— Cy″clo-thurı′næ, n. pl. Mam. A subfamily of bradypodids, with only two toes of the fore feet well developed; two-toed sloths. Cy″clo-thu′rus, n. (t. g.) Cy″clo-tu-rı′næ‡.— cy′clo-thure, n.— cy″clo-thu′rine, a. & n.— cy″clo-tom′ic, a. Pertaining to the division of a circle into equal parts.

cy-clot′o-my, 1 sı-klĕt′o-mı; 2 cȳ-clŏt′o-my, n. 1. Math. The division of a circle into a given number of equal parts. 2. Surg. Separation of the ciliary muscle. [< CYCLO- + -TOMY.]

cy-clo′tus, 1 sı-klō′tus; 2 cȳ-clō′tŭs, n. Same as SYNOTUS.

cy′clus, 1 sı′klus; 2 cȳ′clŭs, n. 1. [-CLI, 1 -klaı; 2 -clī, pl.] Same as CYCLE, 6. 2. [C-] Crust. A genus typical of Cyclidæ. [LL., < Gr. kyklos, circle.]

cy′der, n. [Archaic.] Cider.

Cy-dip′pı-dæ, 1 sı-dĭp′ı-dı; 2 cȳ-dĭp′ı-dē, n. pl. Zooph. A family of saccate ctenophorans with the subglobular body 8-rayed. Cy-dip′pe, n. (t. g.) [L., < Gr. Kydippē, mythological character.]— cy-dip′pid, n.— cy-dip′poid, a.

Cyd′nı-dæ, 1 sıd′nı-dı; 2 cȳd′nı-dē, n. pl. Entom. A family of cimicoidean bugs with body convex, wings well developed, fore legs fossorial, hind legs spinigerous. Cyd′nus, n. (t. g.) [Appar. < Gr. kydnos, splendid.]— cyd′nid, a. & n.— cyd′noid, a.

Cyd′nus, 1 sıd′nus; 2 cȳd′nŭs, n. A river in Adana vilayet, Asia Minor; 75 m. long to the Gulf of Iskanderun; its water is very cold. Kyd′nos‡ [Gr.]. [tribe.

Cy-do′nı-a, 1 sı-dō′nı-ə; 2 cy-dō′nı-a, n. Bot. A genus of trees of the rose family, embracing the quince, etc.: now generally referred to Pyrus. [L., quince, < Gr. kydōnion, < Kydōnia, a town in Crete, now Khania.]— cy′do-nin, n. The mucilaginous matter ($C_{12}H_{22}O_{11}$) of quince-seeds, resembling tragacanth.— cy-do′nı-um, n. Quince-seed.

Cy-do′nı-an, 1 sı-dō′nı-ən; 2 cy-dō′nı-an, n. An inhabitant of Cydonia, a city of northern Crete, now Khania.— Cy-do′nı-an, a.

He [Strabo] thinks that both Cydonians and Eteo-Cretans are autochthonous, which is only another way of saying that both are pre-Dorian. R. M. BURROWS Discoveries in Crete ch. 9, p. 153, note. [I. M. '07.]

cyg′ne-ous, 1 sıg′nı-us; 2 cȳg′nē-ŭs, a. In botany, curved like a swan's neck.

cyg′net, 1 sıg′net; 2 cȳg′nĕt, n. A young swan. [< F. cygne, < L. cycnus (< Gr. kyknos), swan.]

SCHILLER Expectation tr. by Bowring, st. 5.

Cyg′nid, 1 sıg′nıd; 2 cȳg′nĭd, n. Astron. Any meteor of a shower having its radiant points in the constellation Cygnus: usually in the plural.

Cyg-nı′næ, 1 sıg-naı′nı; 2 cȳg-nī′nē, n. pl. Ornith. A subfamily of anatoid birds; swans.— cyg′nine, a. & n.

Cyg′nus, 1 sıg′nus; 2 cȳg′nŭs, n. 1. Ornith. A genus typical of Cygninæ. 2. Astron. The Swan, a northern constellation. See CONSTELLATION. [L., < cycnus; see CYGNET.]

Cy-lich′nı-dæ, 1 sı-lık′nı-dı; 2 cy-lĭc′nı-dē, n. pl. Conch. A family of cephalaspidean tectibranchiate gastropods with a small median and many uniciform lateral and marginal teeth, and a subcylindrical shell. Cy-lich′na, n. (t. g.) [< Gr. kylichnē, small cup, < kylix (kylik-), cup.] — cy-lich′nid, n.— cy-lich′noid, a.

cyl′in-der, n. 1. A solid whose curved bounding surface is generated by the motion of a straight line at a given angle around two equal circles in parallel planes, the two circles forming the remainder of the boundary: called a right cylinder when the line is at right angles to the planes, an oblique cylinder when it is not; in the higher geometry, applied to any curved surface generated by the motion of a straight line remaining parallel to itself and constantly intersecting a curve. 2. Mech. Any cylindrical portion of a machine, especially if hollow, and proportioned so that the length somewhat exceeds the diameter. Specif.: (1) A cylindrical member of a motor, as a steam-engine, in which a piston moves and receives direct impact from the motive fluid. (2) A rotating cylindrical portion of a printing-press; as, the impression-cylinder or the ink-c.; also, a cylinder press; in calico-printing, the roller engraved with the pattern. (3) A gun-bore. (4) In a revolver, the rotating chamber that holds the cartridges. (5) In a loom, a flat-sided revolving block over which the cards pass. (6) In a carding-machine, a large card-clothed drum. (7) The bore or center of a winding staircase. (8) The glass barrel of some frictional electrical machines. (9) [Rare.] A roller, as for a lawn. (10) A bucket for the safe conveyance of a cartridge to a large gun. (11) In watchmaking, the cylindrical recess which controls the escape-wheel of a watch.

Cylinder of a Steam-engine. b-h, back-head; c, cap; f-h, front-head; g, gland; l, lap; p, piston; pr, piston-rod; s, steam-chest; s-p, steam-ports; v, slide-valve; w, wood lagging.

Steam-engine cylinders are named from their use, mechanism, or location; as, inside cylinder (in a smoke-box or between frames, as of a locomotive), oscillating c., overhanging c., reversing-c., starting-c., etc. Printing-press cylinders are named (1) from their purpose; as, cutting-c. (for separating a sheet from a roll of paper), delivery-c. (for delivering the printed sheets), impression-c., ink-c., plate-c. (for holding curved stereotype plates), type-c., etc.; and (2) from their form; as, drum c.

3. A strawboard tube used as a protective covering, as for pictures, photographs, etc., sent by mail. 4. Archeol. (1) A cylindrical stone with a cuneiform or hieroglyphic inscription, used as a seal or amulet. (2) A commemorative tablet of clay with a cuneiform inscription, found buried under the corners of edifices in Babylonia and Assyria. 5. Bot. A plant-stem boundary established by a different tissue.

In angiosperms, pith, wood, and bark are regarded as representing, respectively, a central, a cortical, and a dermal cylinder.

6†. A portable timepiece on the sun-dial principle. [< F. cylindre, < L. cylindrus, < Gr. kylindros, < kylindō, roll.]

— comb′cyl″in-der, n. Mech. A revolving cylinder which is one of the parts of a cotton-combing machine.— cyl′in-der-band″, n. In the spectrum analysis of certain metals, a band representing a half-cylinder lighted on one side.— c.-bore, n. 1. The bore of a cylinder, as of a steam-engine. 2. A gun with a bore of uniform diameter.— c.-bore, tt.— c.-cake, n. Sodium sulfate molded by mixing common salt and sulfuric acid in cylindrical retorts and heating the mixture.— c.-cock, n. A cock attached to a steam-cylinder, through which water may be blown out.— c.-condensation, n. Steam-engin. The partial condensation of steam on entering a cylinder, owing to contact with walls covered by the previous exhaust.— c.-cover, n. 1. Usually, in a steam-engine, the steam-tight cover at that end of a cylinder through which the piston-rod passes. 2. [Rare.] The lagging or jacket about a steam-cylinder to lessen radiation.— c.-face, n. In a steam-cylinder, the inner bore in which the piston moves.— c.-feed, n. The amount of steam per stroke that passes through an engine's cylinder.— c.-gage, n. 1. A tool by which the opening in the cylinder of an escapement is measured. 2. A steam-gage which is attached to the cylinder of a steam-engine. 3. A hollow cast-iron cylinder for testing the accuracy of the finished bore of a gun.— c.-gate, n. A cylindrical valve controlling the water-supply of a turbine.— c.-grinder, n. A grinding-machine having an automatic cross-feed for finishing cylindrical gages.— c.-head, n. The metal plate or cover closing the end of a cylinder.— c.-lock, n. A lock fitted with a rotating cylinder which revolves after the tumblers with which it is fitted have been sprung and thus permits of its being opened with a key.— c.-machine, n. See CYLINDER-ENGINE, under ENGINE.— c.-metal, n. An alloy of cast-iron and manganese, used chiefly for engine cylinders.— c.-mill, n. A grinding-mill fitted with rollers in place of face-stones.— c.-oil, n. A lubricating-oil, or mixture of oils, used especially for the piston moving in an engine's cylinder.— c.-passage, n. A steam-port.— c.-port, n. An opening for the passage of motive fluid to or from a cylinder.— c.-powder, n. Gunpowder of which charcoal carbonized in cylindrical iron retorts is an ingredient.— c. press, see PRINTING-PRESS.— c.-pressure, n. The pressure exerted upon a piston by the tension of the propelling fluid.— c. printing, the process by which patterns are printed upon cloth, a large and several smaller cylinders being used, the latter having the patterns engraved upon them.— c.-relief, n. A pipe through which water collecting in a steam-cylinder is drained away; a relief-valve.— c.-snail, n. A cylindrelloid gastropod of the West Indies, etc.— c.-snake, n. A harmless cylindroid snake, as Cylindrophis rufa of Java, or the Guiana coral-snake (Ilysia scytale).— c.-staff, n. An implement for measuring the length of a gun-bore.— c. watch, a watch having a cylinder escapement.— c.-wrench, n. A pipe-wrench.— displacement-c., n. Engin. An extra cylinder in a gas-engine which receives the charge, whence it is transferred into the main or working cylinder.— low-pressure c., the largest and last of the cylinders of a multiple-expansion engine.— outside c., same as OVERHANGING CYLINDER.— overhanging c., a locomotive-cylinder which projects beyond the frame.— porcupine c., same as PORCUPINE BEATER.

cyl″in-dra′ceous, 1 sıl′ın-drē′shus; 2 cȳl′ın-drā′shŭs, a. Nearly cylindrical.

cyl″in-drar-thro′sis, 1 sıl′ın-drar-thrō′sıs; 2 cȳl′ın-drär-thrō′sis, n. [-SES, 1 -sīz; 2 -sēs, pl.] Anat. A joint with surfaces approximately cylindrical, and allowing motion in but a single plane. [< Gr. kylindros, CYLINDER, + arthrōsis, jointing.]

Cyl″in-drel′ı-dæ, 1 sıl′ın-drel′ı-dı; 2 cȳl′ın-drĕl′ı-dē, n. pl. Conch. A family of land-snails having thin obliquely plicate jaws, a narrow median tooth, lateral and marginal teeth with confluent median and internal cusps, and the shell pupiform with a circular exserted aperture. Cyl″in-drel′la, n. (t. g.) [< L. cylindrus; see CYLINDER.] — cyl″in-drel′lid, n.— cyl″in-drel′loid, a.

cyl″in-dren′chy-ma, 1 sıl′ın-dren′kı-mə; 2 cȳl′ın-drēn′cy-ma, n. Bot. Tissue in plants which consists of cylindrical cells, as in hairs and in the genus Conferva. [< CYLINDRO- + Gr. enchyma, infusion.]

cy-lin′dric, } 1 sı-lın′drık, -drı-kəl; 2 cy-lĭn′dric, -dricy-lin′dri-cal, } cal, a. Shaped like a cylinder; having a surface similar to a cylinder or a section of a cylinder. [< Gr. kylindrikos, < kylindros; see CYLINDER.] SYN.: see ROUND.— cylindrical harmonics (Math.), transcendental functions representing certain mathematical relations between variables, employed in physics and astronomy. See BESSEL'S EQUATION under EQUATION. Bessel's functions‡. cylindric functions, Heine's name for the functions J_1 and J_2 of Bessel.— cylindrical lens or mirror, a lens or mirror with one or two cylindrical surfaces, as the lenses used for astigmatism. The image is brought to a focus in a line instead of in a point. A cylindrical lens is usually flat on one side (plano-cylindrical).— c. surface (Geom.), a curved surface generated by a straight line constantly parallel to a given line.— cy-lin′dri-cal-ly, adv.— cyl″in-dric′ı-ty, n. The state or quality of being cylindrical; cylindrical form.— cy-lin′dri-cule, n. A small cylinder.— cy-lin′dri-form, a. Having the form of a cylinder.

Cy-lin′dri-dæ, 1 sı-lın′drı-dı; 2 cy-lĭn′dri-dē, n. pl. Conch. A Tropicalian family of rachiglossate gastropods having a single row of median transverse denticulate teeth and an oliviform shell with plicate columella. Cy-lin′dra, n. (t. g.) [< Gr. kylindros, CYLINDER.]— cy-lin′drid, n.

cy-lin′dro-, 1 sı-lın′dro-; 2 cy-lĭn′dro-. From Greek kylindros, cylinder; a combining form.— cy-lin″dro-con′ic, a. Ordnance. Having the form of a cylinder terminating in a cone. cy-lin″dro-con′ı-cal‡.— cy-lin″dro-co-nol′dal, a. Ordnance. Having the form of a cylinder terminating in a conoid.— cy-lin″dro-cy-lin′dri-cal, a. Doubly cylindrical; specif., of or pertaining to a building in which a cylindrical vault of lesser span and height from the same level intersects one of larger span and height.— cy-lin′dro-graph, n. Photog. A camera with a panoramic range of about 180°.— cyl′in-droid. I. a. 1. Like a cylindroid. 2. Of or pertaining to the Cylindridæ. cyl″in-drol′dal‡. II. n. 1. A solid body resembling a cylinder, but having its equal parallel ends elliptical. 2. A conoidal cubic surface used to illustrate the motions of a rigid body. 3. Pathol. A mucous cast of cylindrical or twisted form sometimes found in the urine. 4. Anthrop. A skull characterized by an elongated norma verticalis, rounded lateral aspect, and flattened occiput and forehead.— cyl″in-dro′ma, n. -DROM′A-TA, pl.] Pathol. A myxosarcoma with cells somewhat cylindric in form.— cyl″in-drom′a-tous, a. Pathol. In myxosarcomatous forms of disease, relating to or resembling a cylindroma; as, a cylindromatous tumor.— cy-lin″dro-met′ric, a. Relating to a scale used in measuring cylinders, or to the measurement of cylinders.— cy-lin″dro-gi′val, a. Made with a cylindrical body and an ogival head: said of certain projectiles.— Cyl″in-droph′i-dæ, n. pl. Herp. A family of angiostomatous snakes with a cylindrical body, rounded head, short tail, and rudimentary hind limbs; Ilysiidæ. Cy-lin′dro-phis, n. (t. g.)— cy-lin′dro-phid, n.— cy-lin′dro-phoid, a.— cy-lin′dro-scope, n. Photog. A device for looking at a panoramic view, the print being curved so that the true radius is obtained in viewing it.— cyl″in-dru′ri-a, n. Pathol. The presence of cylindroids in the urine.

cy′llx, n. See KYLIX.

Cyl′la-ros, 1 sıl′ə-ros; 2 cȳl′a-rŏs, n. Gr. & Rom. Myth. 1. A centaur of great beauty who was killed at the marriage-feast of Peithous. 2. A celebrated horse belonging to Castor, or, according to some authors, to both the Dioscuri. Cyl′la-rus‡.

Cyl-le′ne, 1 sı-lı′nı; 2 cy-lē′nē, n. A mountain in N. E. Arcadia; the reputed birthplace of Hermes.

Cyl-le′nı-an, 1 sı-lı′nı-ən; 2 cy-lē′nı-an, a. Belonging or relating to Mount Cyllene, or to Hermes, who was said to have been born there; hence, relating to any of the arts or practises of which that god was the patron.— the Cyllenian art, thievery. See HERMES; MERCURY.

Cym., abbr. Cymric.

cy′ma, 1 saı′mə; 2 cȳ′ma, n. [-MÆ, 1 -mī; 2 -mē, pl.] 1. Arch. A curved molding with a reversed curve as its profile. With convex part nearest the wall it is a cyma recta; with concave part nearest the wall, a cyma reversa. It is frequently placed above a cornice, as an ornamental member or to form a gutter. 2. Bot. A cyme. [< Gr. kyma, wave, < kyeō, swell.]

cy′ma-phen, 1 saı′mə-fen; 2 cȳ′ma-fĕn, n. A telephone receiver. [< Gr. kyma (see CYMA) + phainō, show.]

cy-ma′ti-um, 1 sı-mē′shı-um; 2 cy-mā′shi-ŭm, n. [-TI-A, pl.] [L.] Arch. A cyma; hence, any molding that caps a division of an entablature, separating it from the next.

Cy″ma-to-phor′ı-dæ, 1 saı′mə-to-fer′ı-dı; 2 cȳ′ma-to-fôr′ı-dē, n. pl. A family of moths having the fore wings widened a little at the inner angle and usually marked with zigzag lines, filiform antennæ, and well-developed maxillæ. They are diurnal, and of medium size. [< Gr. kyma (kymat-), wave, + pherō, bear.]

cym′ba, 1 sım′bə; 2 cȳm′ba, n. [-BÆ, pl.] 1. Spong. A flesh-spicule resembling the letter C and having no spiral twist. See illus. under SPICULE. 2. A Venetian rowboat. [L., < Gr. kymbē, boat.]— cymba conchæ (Anat.), that part of the external ear which is above a line marking the superior level of the auditory canal.— cym′bæ-form, a. Cymbiform.— cym′bate, a. Boat-like, as a sponge-cymba.— cym′bi-form, a. Boat-shaped, as the scaphoid bone, the glumes of certain grasses, etc; navicular.

cym′bal, 1 sım′bəl; 2 cȳm′bal, n. 1. One of a pair of thin metallic musical instruments of percussion, in form like a basin or a plate, set in vibration by being clashed together: usually in the plural. 2. A musical instrument consisting of rings strung on a steel triangle. It is held by a cord in the left hand, and the rings are struck with an iron rod held in the right. 3. An organ-stop of a high pitch. [< F. cymbale, < L. cymbalum, < Gr. kymbalon, < kymbos hollow of a vessel.] cym′bal‡.— cym′baled, a. Provided with cymbals. cym′balled‡.— cym′bal-ine, a. Resembling a cymbal.— cym′bal-ist, n. A player upon the cymbals. cym′bal-er‡; cym′bal-ler‡.

Turkish Cymbals.

Cym′ba-lo, n. Same as CEMBALO. Cym′bal‡.

Cym′be-line, 1 sım′bı-lın; 2 cȳm′be-lĭn, n. In Shakespeare's Cymbeline, king of Britain; father of Imogen by his first wife. See CUNOBELIN. [Celt. lord of the sun, or of war.]

cym-bel′la, 1 sım-bel′ə; 2 cȳm-bĕl′a, n. [-LÆ, 1 -lī; 2 -ē, pl.] Bot. An elliptical, locomotive, reproductive cell found in some algæ. [Dim. of L. cymbalum; see CYMBAL.]

Cym-bid′ı-um, 1 sım-bid′ı-um; 2 cȳm-bid′ı-ŭm, n. Bot. A genus of tropical orchids of the eastern hemisphere, growing on the ground, bearing tufts of sword-shaped leaves and spikes of pendulous flowers. [< Gr. kymbos, hollow.]

cym′blin, 1 sım′blin; 2 cȳm′blin, n. Same as CYMLIN.

cym″bo-ceph′a-ly, 1 sım″bo-sef′ə-lı; 2 cȳm″bo-cĕf′a-ly, n. A condition of the skull in which it is unusually flattened and hollowed along the line of the coronal suture. [< Gr. kymbē, bowl, + kephalē, head.] cym″bo-ce-phal′ic, a. Bowl-shaped; of, pertaining to, or exhibiting cymbocephaly. cym″bo-ceph′a-lous‡.— cym″bo-ceph′a-lus, n.

Cym″bu-lı′dæ, 1 sım″bıu-laı′ı-dı; 2 cȳm″bū-lī′i-dē, n. pl. Conch. A family of thecosomatous pteropods having the median tooth and one-cusped lateral teeth wide, and a partially internal cartilaginous slipper-like shell. Cym-bu′li-a, n. (t. g.) [< L. cymbula, dim. of cymba, boat; see CYMBA.]— cym-bu′li-id, n.— cym-bu′li-oid, a.

cyme, 1 saım; 2 cȳm, n. 1. Bot. A determinate form of inflorescence in which the lateral branches grow more vigorously than the terminal, thus producing usually a flat-topped cluster; as, a forked cyme or dichasium. 2. Arch. Cyma. [< Gr. kyma, sprout, wave; see CYMA.]— bostrychoid cyme, same as BOSTRYX.— cyme′let, n. Bot. A cymule.— cy-mif′er-ous, a. Bearing cymes.— cy′moid, a. Of the form of a cyme.— cy′mose (XIII), a. Bot. Bearing, pertaining to, or of the nature of a cyme. cy′mous‡.— cy′mose-ly, adv.

cy′mene, 1 saı′mın; 2 cȳ′mēn, n. Chem. A colorless oily liquid compound ($C_{10}H_{14}$) with lemon-like odor, contained in several volatile oils, as cumin, wild thyme, etc., and obtained variously, as by distilling camphor with phosphoric anhydrid; cymene, paramethylisopropyl benzol. cam′phe-gen‡; cy′mol‡. [< CUMINUM.]— cy'me-nol, n. Same as CARVACROL.— cy'mi-din, cy'mi-dine, n. Chem. An oily liquid compound ($C_{12}H_{11}N$) derived from cymene.

cy-mi'num, 1 si-mai'nŭm; 2 cy-mi'nŭm, n. Same as CUMIN.

cy"mo-bot'rys, 1 sai'mo-bot'ris; 2 cy"mo-bŏt'rys, n. Bot. A cymose cluster; same as THYRSE. [< Gr. kyma, CYME, + botrys, grape-cluster.]— cy"mo-bot'ry-ose, a. Bot. Same as THYRSOID.

cy'mo-gene, 1 sai'mo-jin; 2 cy'mo-ġēn, n. An extremely volatile distillate of petroleum, consisting of various hydrocarbons and when condensed used as a freezing-mixture. [< Gr. kyminon (see CUMIN) + -GENE.]

cy'mol, 1 sai'mŏl or -mol; 2 cy'mŏl or -mol, n. Same as CYMENE.

cy'mo-phane, 1 sai'mo-fēn; 2 cy'mo-fān, n. · Mineral. A variety of chrysoberyl showing peculiar chatoyancy; the Oriental cat's-eye. [F., < Gr. kyma (see CYMA) + phainō, show.]— cy-moph'a-nous, a. Having a wavy, floating light; opalescent; chatoyant.

cy"mo-phe'nol, 1 sai'mo-fi'nŏl or -nol; 2 cy'mo-fē'nŏl or -nol, n. Same as CARVACROL.

cy'mo-scope, 1 sai'mo-skōp; 2 cy'mo-scōp, n. Elec. A wave-detecting device used in aerial telegraphy: a name suggested by Dr. J. A. Fleming to connote all forms. Several varieties are in use, notably the contact cymoscope, embracing all forms of coherers as used in wireless telegraphy, which employs the tendency of a loose or imperfectly conducting contact to improve in conductivity under the impact of electric radiation; the electrodynamic c., whose operation depends upon the utilization of currents induced by varying magnetic fields; the electrolytic c., depending upon the power of electric oscillations to affect the polarization of metal surfaces in an electrolyte; the magnetic c., which is based upon the power of electric oscillations to demagnetize an already magnetized needle; the spark c., depending upon the power of high-potential currents to produce a spark between the points of adjacent conductors; the thermal c., in which the heating power of high-frequency currents in high-resistance conductors is utilized as a detecting means; and the vacuum-tube c., which depends upon the tendency of rarefied gases in a vacuum-tube to burst into a glow when traversed by currents above a certain potential. [< Gr. kyma, wave, + skopeō, watcher.]

Cy"mo-tho'i-dæ, 1 sai'mo-thō'i-dī; 2 cy'mo-thŏ'i-dē, n. pl. Crust. A family of isopods, especially those with biramous lateral uropods, suctorial mouth, and anterior legs prehensile, parasitic mostly on fishes. Cy-mo'tho-a, n. (t. g.) [< Gr. kyma (see CYMA) + thoos, quick.] Cy"mo-tho'a-dæ‡.— cy'mo-thoid, a. & n.— Cy"mo-tho-id'e-a, n. pl. Crust. A subtribe of isopods with two lamellate abdominal appendages, including the Cymothoidæ. — cy"mo-tho-id'e-an, a. & n.

cy-mot'ri-chous, 1 sai-mot'ri-kus; 2 cy-mŏt'ri-cŭs, a. Anthrop. Possessing wavy hair. [< Gr. kyma, wave, + thrix, hair.]

Cym'ric, 1 sim'rik or kim'rik; 2 cym'ric or cym'ric. I. a. Relating to the Cymry, the Welsh-Breton (Brythonic) branch of the Celts. II. n. The language of the Cymry or Welsh-Bretons, belonging to the Celtic branch of the northern division of the Aryan family. [< W. Cymraeg, Welsh, < Cymro, Welshman.]

Cym'ry, 1 sim'ri or kim'ri; 2 cym'ry or cym'ry, n. pl. The Welsh and their Cornish-Armorican kin: the collective name. See WELSH. [W., pl. of Cymro, Welshman.] Cwm'ry‡; Cym'ri‡.

cy'mule, 1 sai'mūl; 2 cy'mūl, n. Bot. A diminutive cyme, or part of a compound cyme. [Dim. of Gr. kyma; see CYME.] cyme'let‡.— cy'mu-lose, a.

cyn-, 1 sin-; 2 cyn-. From Greek kyōn (kyn-), dog: a combining form.— Cyn"æ-lu-ri'næ, n. pl. Mam. The Guepardinæ. Cyn"æ-lu'rus, n. (t. g.)— cy-nan'che, n. Pathol. Any acute inflammation of the throat.— cy-nan'chin, n. Chem. A crystalline compound obtained from the sap of Cynanchum acutum (Linn.). In crystallized form it melts at 149° C. cy-nan'chine‡.— cyn"an-choc'e-rin, n. Chem. A crystalline compound obtained from the sap of Cynanchum acutum. cyn"an-choc'e-rine‡.— cy-nan'chol, n. Chem. A crystalline compound, comprising cynanchocerin and cynanchin, derived from the sap of Cynanchum acutum.— cy-nan'thro-py, n. A form of insanity where a patient imagines himself to be, and acts like, a dog.— cyn'a-pin, cyn'a-pine, n. Chem. A pungent reddish-yellow oil contained in the seeds of fool's-parsley (Æthusa cynapium).— Cyn'a-ra, n. Bot. A small genus of erect herbs of the aster family, mostly Mediterranean. C. scolymus (the artichoke) and C. cardunculus (the cardoon) are the best-known species.— cyn"a-ra'ceous, cy-na're-ous, a.— cyn"arc-tom'a-chy, n. Bear-baiting with a dog.— cyn'a-roid, a. Bot. Like or allied to the artichoke or the genus Cynara.— cyn"ar-rho'di-um, n. [-DI-A, pl.] Bot. A fleshy hollow fruit enclosing achenia, as the hip of a rose. cyn"ar-rho'don‡.

cyn"e-get'ics, 1 sin"i-jet'iks; 2 cyn"e-ġĕt'ics, n. [Rare.] The art of hunting with dogs.— cyn"e-get'ic, a.

Cynhyena. 1/15

'The guides,' says Burton, 'speak of lions, and the cry of the fisi or cynhyena was frequently heard at night, threatening destruction to the asses.' BAYARD TAYLOR Lake Regions Cent. Afr. ch. 3, p. 17. [s.]

cyn"i-at'rics, 1 sin"i-at'riks; 2 cyn"i-ăt'rics, n. The branch of veterinary medicine treating of canine diseases. cy-ni"a-tri'a‡.

cyn'ic, 1 sin'ik; 2 cyn'ic, a. 1. [C-] Belonging to the Cynics; resembling the sect of Cynics or their doctrines; Cynical. 2. Astron. Pertaining to Sirius, the dog-star; canicular. 3. Pertaining to or resembling a dog. [< L. cynicus, < Gr. Kynikos, dog-like, < kyōn (kyn-), dog.] cyn'ic‡.— cynic spasm, a convulsive contraction of the muscles of one side of the face by which the features are distorted, as if with a grin.

cyn'ic, n. 1. [C-] One of a sect of post-Socratic Greek philosophers founded by Antisthenes of Athens, a pupil of Socrates. They elaborated the Socratic doctrine that virtue is the highest good; that self-control is the essence of all virtue; and that love of any form or degree of pleasure for its own sake is essentially evil. Because of the extreme disregard of conventionality and public opinion evinced by some of the sect, the name Cynic became symbolical of an ignorant and insolent self-righteousness. The most famous of the Cynics was Diogenes, pupil of Antisthenes.

The Cynics of the later Empire recommended a complete renunciation of domestic ties, and a life spent mainly in the contemplation of wisdom.

LECKY Hist. Eur. Morals vol. ii, p. 102. [A. 1888.]

2. A person of cynical disposition; especially, one who disbelieves in and sneers at disinterestedness and moral worth; a misanthrope.

The cynic is one who never sees a good quality in a man and never fails to see a bad one. H. W. BEECHER in Drysdale's Proverbs from Plymouth Pulpit p. 49. [A. 1887.]

cyn'i-cal, 1 sin'i-kal; 2 cyn'i-cal, a. 1. Given to or marked by sneering at evidences of virtue and pure or lofty motives; inclined to or exhibiting moral skepticism; pessimistic; morosely soured; sarcastic.

'Believe only half of what you see and none of what you hear' is a cynical saying, and yet less bitter than at first appears. DINAH M. CRAIK Woman's Thoughts p. 194. [ERAD. 1866.]

2. [C-] Same as CYNIC, a., 1. Syn.: see CAPTIOUS.— cyn'i-cal-ly, adv.— cyn'i-cal-ness, n.

cyn'i-cism, 1 sin'i-sizm; 2 cyn'i-çĭzm, n. 1. The state or quality of being cynical; contempt for the opinions of others and of what others value; originally, contempt for riches and pleasure. 2. [C-] The doctrines and practises of the Cynics.

Cy-nic"ti-di'næ, 1 si-nik"ti-dai'ni; 2 cy-nic"ti-dī'nē, n. pl. Mam. A subfamily of viverroid carnivores with straight toes, grooved nose, and 38 teeth. Cy-nic'tis, n. (t. g.) [< CYN- + Gr. tis, weasel.]— cy-nic'ti-dine, a. & n.

Cy-nip'i-dæ, 1 si-nip'i-di; 2 cy-nip'i-dē, n. pl. Entom. A family of spiculiferous hymenopterous insects having fore wings devoid mostly of costal nervure and stigma, and a subspiral ovipositor; gall-flies.— cyn'i-pid, a. & n.— cy-nip'i-dous, a. Of or pertaining to Cynipidæ. cyn"i-pid'e-an‡; cyn"i-pid'e-ous‡.— cyn'i-poid, a.

Cy'nips, 1 sai'nips; 2 cy'nips, n. Entom. 1. A genus typical of Cynipidæ. 2. [c-] An insect of this genus; the common gall-fly of plants. [< LL. cynipher, < Gr. knips, name of several insects.]

cyn'ism, 1 sin'izm; 2 cyn'ĭzm, n. [Rare.] Cynicism.

cy'no-, 1 sai'no-; 2 cy'no-. From Greek kyōn (kyn-) dog: a combining form.— cy"no-ceph'a-lous, a. Teratol. Dog-headed; pertaining to a cynocephalus. cy"no-ce-phal'ic‡.— cy"no-ceph'a-lus, n. [-LI, pl.] A baboon (Cynocephalus).— cy-noc'to-nin(e, n. Chem. A poisonous alkaloid ($C_{10}H_{11}NO_{13}$), found in Aconitum septentrionale.— cy"no-do-nich'thys, n. A genus of Mexican fishes of the family Pæciliidæ.— Cy"no-don'ti-a, n. pl. An order of anomodonts of intermediate size.— cy'no-dont, a. & n.— Cy"no-ga-li'næ, n. pl. Mam. A subfamily of viverroid carnivores having catlike feet and sectorial teeth with large tubercular ledges. Cy-nog'a-le, n. (t. g.)— cy-nog'a-line, a. & n.— Cy"no-glos'sum, n. Bot. A genus of tall, hairy, biennial or perennial herbs of the borage family, with alternate, entire leaves, blue, red, or white flowers in panicled, scorpioid masses, and the fruit-nutlets covered with prickles. C. officinalis, the hound's-tongue, naturalized from Europe, and C. virginicum, the wild comfrey, are common in the eastern United States.— cy-nog'ra-phy, n. [Rare.] A treatise on dogs.— cy'noid, a. Doglike; of or pertaining to the Cynoidea.— Cy-noi'de-a, n. pl. Mam. A superfamily of carnivores with the carotid canal opening into the jugular foramen, including the Canidæ, as dogs.— cy-noi'de-an, a. & n.— cy-noi'a-try, n. Dog-worship.— cy-noi'a-trist, n.— cy-noi'o-gy, n. The study of the natural history of the dog.— Cy"no-mor'phæ, n. pl. Mam. The Cercopithecidæ. Cy"no-mor'pha‡.— cy"no-mor'phic, a.— cy-noph'i-list, n. A lover of dogs.— cy"no-pho'bi-a, n. Pathol. An abnormal fear of dogs or of hydrophobia.— Cy"no-pi-the'ci-dæ, n. pl. Mam. The Cercopithecidæ. Cy"no-pi-the'cus, n. (t. g.)— cy"no-pi-the'cid, n.— cy"no-pi-the'coid, a. & n.— Cy"no-pith'e-ci'næ, n. pl. Mam. The Cercopithecinæ.— cy"no-pi-the'cine, a. & n. — Cy-nop'o-da, n. pl. Mam. A section of viverroid carnivores with doglike feet, including the ichnumeons.— cy-nop'o-dous, a.— cy"no-rex'i-a, n. Pathol. Morbid craving for food; insatiable hunger.— cy-nor'rho-don, n. Same as CYNARRHODON. cy"nor-rho'di-um‡.

Cy"no-su'ra, 1 sai'no-shū'ra; 2 cy'no-shu'ra, n. Gr. Myth. One of the nurses of Jupiter, who placed her among the stars, forming the constellation Ursa Minor.

Cyr"il-la'ce-æ, 1 sir'ı-lē'sı-ı; 2 çÿr'ı-lā'çe-ē, n. pl. Bot. A small family of dicotyledonous shrubs and small trees — the cyrilla family — natives of North and South America. It embraces 3 genera and 6 species. Cy-ril'la, n. (t. g.) [< LL. Cyrillus, < Gr. Kyrillos, Cyril.] Cy-ril'le-æ†.— cyr"il-la'ceous, a.

Cy-ril'lian, 1 si-ril'yən; 2 çy-ril'yan. I. a. 1. Relating to or following the doctrine of Cyril of Alexandria, whose name is chiefly famous for the controversy with Nestorius. 2. Cyrillic. II. n. A follower of Cyril of Alexandria.

Cy-ril'lic, 1 si-ril'ık; 2 çy-rĭl'ic, a. Relating to Cyril.— Cyrillic alphabet, the alphabet devised by Cyril, apostle of the Slavs, who prepared in the 9th century a Slav translation of the Scriptures and liturgy. It superseded the Glagolitic or more ancient Slavonic alphabet, and was the original of the Russian alphabet.

Cyr'il-Lu'car, 1 sir'il-liū'kar; 2 çÿr'il-lū'kär, n. A patriarch of Constantinople in the 17th century, who sent the Codex Alexandrinus to England (1628).

cyr"i-o-log'ic†, a. 1. Relating to pictorial hieroglyphics. 2. Pertaining to capital letters; an erroneous use. cu"ri-o-log'ic†.

cy'ro-plane, 1 sai'ro-plēn; 2 çÿ'ro-plān, n. An instrument used for making various adjustments and plane inclinations in surveying and photography. [Apparently < Gr. kyros, lord, + PLANE.]

cyr'te-an, 1 sŭr'tı-ən; 2 çÿr'te-an, a. Characterizing a form of vertebra with a double convex centrum. [< Gr. kyrtos, convex, curved.]

Cyr"tel-la'ri-a, 1 sŭr"te-lē'rı-ə; 2 çÿr"tĕ-lā'ri-a, n. pl. Protoz. An order or other group of nassellarian radiolarians with a complete lattice-shell enclosing the central capsule. [< Gr. kyrtos, curved.] — cyr"tel-la'ri-an, a. & n.

Cyr'ti-a, 1 sŭr'tı-ə; 2 çÿr'ti-a, n. Paleon. A genus of fossil brachiopods found in the strata of the Paleozoic. [< Gr. kyrtos, curved.]

cyr'to-, 1 sŭr'to-; 2 çÿr'to-. From Greek kyrtos, curved; a combining form.— cyr"to-ceph'a-lus, n. Anthrop. A skull having a hump-like convexity upon the top.— cyr"to-cer'a-cone, n. A shell of the genus Cyrtoceras.— Cyr"to-cer-at'i-dæ, n. pl. Conch. A Paleozoic family of nautiloidean cephalopods having a curved shell with a simple aperture. Cyr-toc'er-as, n. (t. g.) — Cyr"to-cer'a-tid, n. — cyr"to-cer'a-toid, a.— cyr"to-cer'a-tite, n. A fossil of a cyrtoceratoid cephalopod.— cyr"to-cer"a-tit'ic, a. Having a curved shell; of or pertaining to a cyrtoceratite. cyr"to-toc'er-ant.— cyr"to-cœ'le-an, a. Having a vertebra whose centrum is convexo-concave.— cyr'to-cone, a form of shell taking the place of an earlier formation in nautiloid cephalopods.— Cyr"to-don'ti-dæ, n. pl. Conch. A Paleozoic family of arcacean bivalves with a short convex shell, small hinge area, cardinal teeth curved or horizontal, and lateral teeth elongate and curved or oblique. Cyr"to-don'ta, n. (t. g.) — cyr"to-don'tid, a. & n.— cyr'to-graph, n. Same as CYRTOMETER.— cyr'toid, a. With a hump on the back; humpbacked.— Cyr-tol'de-a, n. pl. Protoz. A suborder or family of nassellarian radiolarians with a complete lattice-shell exhibiting a simple or reduced cephalis. Cyr'ti-dæ. — cyr-tol'de-an, a. & n.— Cyr-tol'di-da, n. pl. An order of radiolarians comprising the families Podocamptidæ, Anthocyrtidæ, etc.— cyr'to-lite, n. Mineral. Altered zircon. — Cyr"to-lit'tes, n. Paleon. A genus found in the Silurian stratifications consisting of mollusks of the gastropod type and belonging to the Bellerophontidæ.— cyr-tom'e-ter, n. 1. An instrument for measuring the circumference of the chest or for tracing the exact cross-section of the chest on a chart. 2. A device by means of which the form and dimensions of the head are measured.— Cyr"to-no'tus, n. Paleon. A genus of fossil pelecypods having one tooth on each valve, found in Devonian strata.— cyr-to'pi-a, n. Crust. The larval stage at which the antennæ are transformed and no longer serve for locomotion, as in schizopods. — cyr"to-pla'ty-an, a. With or having a convexo-plane vertebral centrum.— cyr-to'sis, n. Pathol. Curvature, especially of the spine.— Cyr'to-spa"dix, n. Bot. A genus of tropical American herbaceous perennials belonging to the family Araceæ. The cultivated species and varieties have beautifully marked leaves.— cyr'to-style, n. A portico of circular shape projecting from a house.

cy'rust, 1 sai'rus; 2 çÿ'rŭs, n. [Anglo-Ind.] A crane.

Cy'rus[1], 1 sai'rus; 2 çÿ'rŭs, n. 1. A masculine personal name. F. Cy'rus', 1 sı'rü', 2 çÿ'rŭ'; G. Cy'rus, 1 tsı'rus, 2 tsÿ'rus; It. Ci'ro, 1 chi'ro, 2 chi'ro; Sp. Ci'ro, 1 thi'ro, 2 thi'ro. 2. "The Great" (——?-528 B. C.), king of Persia: founder of the Persian empire. 3. "The Younger" (424?–401 B. C.), second son of Darius Notus, king of Persia. [Per., the sun.]

cyst, 1 sist; 2 çÿst, n. 1. Anat. Any membranous sac or vesicle; as, the biliary cyst; the urinary cyst. 2. Pathol. Any abnormal sac or vesicle in which morbid matter may be collected and retained. 3. Zool. (1) A bladder-like sac, as that with which an embryonic tapeworm surrounds itself.

> 'Cyst' is applied to completely closed investments . . . which are temporarily produced either as a protection against adverse external conditions or during the breaking up of the parent-cell into spores. LANKESTER in Encyc. Brit. 9th ed., vol. xix, p. 834.

(2) A bladder-worm. 4. Bot. (1) A receptacle for oil in the rind of the orange and like fruits. (2) A cell or cavity containing reproductive bodies in certain cryptogams. (3) The spore-case of a seaweed. [< Gr. kystis, bladder, < kyō, contain.] — cys'tal, a.

— dentigerous cyst, a dermatoid cyst containing teeth. — piliferous c.†.— Melbomian c., same as CHALAZION. cyst-ad"e-no'ma, n. Pathol. An adenoma having cysts. cys"to-ad"e-no'mat.— cys-tal'gi-a, n. Neuralgia of the bladder.— cys-tat'ro-phy, n. Pathol. A wasting of the bladder. cys"ta-tro'phi-at.— cys"tau-che-ni'tis, n. Pathol. Inflammation of the neck of the bladder.— cys-tec'ta-sy, n. Surg. An operation for extracting calculus from the bladder by dividing the membranous portion of the urethra and then dilating the neck of the bladder.— cys-tec'to-my, n. Surg. 1. An operation to remove a cyst. 2. Removal of the gall-bladder.— cyst'ed, a. Enclosed in a sac; encysted; as, a cysted tumor.

cys'te-ine, } Chem. A substance ($C_3H_7O_2NS$) produced by the decomposition of proteids.— cys"te-in'ic, a.

cys'ti-, } 1 sis'tı-, sis'to-; 2 çÿs'ti-, çÿs'to-. From cys'to-, } Gr. kystis, bladder; combining forms.

Words beginning with these prefixes will be found in alphabetical place, either singly or in groups.

> The cystic form is found in some creature which serves as prey to the animal in which the ectoid form occurs. HUXLEY Anat. Invert. ch. 4, p. 187. [a. 1888.]

2. Having cysts; cystose. 3. Of or pertaining to a cyst, especially, in anatomy, to the gall-bladder; as, the cystic duct. 4. Cyst-like. [< Gr. kystis; see CYST.] — cystic worm, a bladder-worm or hydatid, as a cysticercus, cœnure, or echinococcus.

cys"ti-cer'coid. I. a. Of or pertaining to a cystic worm. cys"ti-cer-coi'dal. II. n. A larval form of certain tapeworms corresponding to a cysticercus, but smaller and lacking the hollow hydatid cyst.— cys"ti-cer-co'sis, n. Pathol. The presence of cysticerci in the muscles. [< Gr. kystis (see CYST), + karkos, tail.] — cys"ti-cer'cus, n. [-ci, pl.] A hydatid cyst which develops from the embryo of a tapeworm and gives rise to the head and neck (scolex) of the future tapeworm: formerly regarded as a distinct genus. Cysticercus cellulosæ, causing measles in swine, becomes Tænia solium in man. Cysticercus pisiformis, the pea-measle of the rabbit, becomes Tænia serrata in the dog, fox, etc.— Cys'ti-cl, n. pl. A section of cestode worms having a larva with a caudal bladder containing fluid; cystic tapeworms.— cys'ti-cle, n. A minute cyst.— cys'tic'o-lous, a. Zool. Living in a cyst.— cys"ti-col'o-my, n. Surg. The operation of cutting into the cystic duct.— cys'ti-cule, n. Ich. A division of the aural vestibule containing an otolith.— cys'tid, n. 1. Helminth. (1) A saccular, planuliform, ciliated embryo that gives rise to one or more polypids. (2) A cell containing a polypid or zooid. 2. One of the Cystidea.— Cys-tid'e-a, n. pl. Echin. The Cystoidea. Cys-tid'e-æt.— cys-tid'e-an, a.— cys'ti-des, n. Plural of CYSTIS.— cys'ti-dic'o-lous, a. Living in a cyst, as a bladder-worm.— cys-tid'i-um, n. [-i-a, pl.] A sterile spherical cell projecting among the basidia and paraphyses in hymenomycetous fungi. cys'tidet.— cys-tif'er-ous, a. Containing or producing cysts.— cys'ti-form, a. 1. Having the form of a cyst. 2. Encysted; cysticercoid.— cys-tig'e-ous, a. [Rare.] Having a cyst or cysts.— Cys"tig-nath'i-dæ, n. pl. Herp. A family of toad-like anciferous amphibians, variously limited, especially those with teeth in the upper jaw, subcylindrical sacral diapophyses, and free urostyle. Cys-tig'na-thus, n. (t. g.) — cys-tig'na-thid, n. — cys-tig'na-thoid, a. & n. — cys'tin, n. Phys. Chem. A crystalline compound ($C_4H_{12}N_2S_2O_4$) contained sparingly in urine and in urinary calculus or sediment. cys'-tine‡. — cys"ti-ne'mi-a, n. Pathol. The presence of cystin in the blood. — cys"ti-nu'ri-a, n. The presence of cystin in the urine. — cys"ti-nu'ric, a. — cys'ti-phragm, n. In certain types of the Bryozoa, a curved transverse septum. — cys"tir-rha'gi-a, n. Pathol. Hemorrhage from the bladder. cys"tor-rha'gi-a‡. — cys"tir-rhe'a, n. Pathol. Catarrh of the bladder. cys"tir-rhœ'a‡; cys"tor-rhe'a‡; cys"tor-rhœ'a‡. — cys'tis, n. [CYSTI-DES, pl.] A cyst. — Cys-tis'ci-dæ, n. pl. Conch. A family of rachiglossate gastropods with uniserial many-cusped lingual teeth and a marginelloid shell. Cys-tis'cus, n. (t. g.) — cys-tis'cid, n. — cys-tis'coid, a. — cys-ti'tis, n. Pathol. Inflammation of the bladder. — cys'ti-tome, n. A surgical instrument used in opening the capsule of the crystalline lens. — cys"to-car"ci-no'ma, n. Pathol. A cystic cancer. — cys'to-carp, n. Bot. 1. The fructification from an archicarp or procarp in fungi and Rhodophyceæ. 2. The sporogonium in Muscineæ. 3. The capsule-like indusium enclosing the sporangia in certain Filicineæ. — cys"to-car'pic, a. — cys'to-cele, n. A hernia or rupture involving the protrusion of the urinary bladder. — Cys"to-cid"a-rol'da, n. pl. Echin. An order of paleocchinoideans having an exocyclic test, ambulacra with two vertical rows of poriferous plates, and interradia with numerous vertical rows of scale-like movable plates. — cys"to-cid"a-rol'dan, a. & n. — cys'to-cyte, n. Spong. One of the large oval nucleated cells, containing a fluid, which constitute cystenchyma. — cys"to-dyn'i-a, n. Pathol. Pain, especially of rheumatic character, in the bladder. — cys"to-fi-bro'ma, n. Pathol. A cystic fibroma. — Cys"to-flag"el-la'ta, n. pl. Protoz. An order of Mastigophora, possessed of two flagella, and embracing the genera Leptodiscus and Noctiluca. — cys"to-flag'el-late, a. & n. — cys"to-gen'e-sis, n. Same as CYTOGENESIS. — cys-tog'e-nous, a. Cell-producing; cystiferous. — cys'toid. I. a. 1. Cystiform. 2. Of or pertaining to the Cystoidea. II. n. One of the Cystoidea. — Cys-tol'de-a, n. pl. Echin. A subclass or other group of pelmatozoans with a roundish body and lateral orifice surmounted by jointed plates. Cys"te-ol'de-a‡; Cys-tid'e-a‡. — cys-tol'de-an, a. & n. — Cys-tol'de-l, n. pl. Helminth. A section of cestode worms having a larva with no distended caudal bladder; ordinary tapeworms. — cys'to-lith, n. Bot. A mineral and usually somewhat crystalline concretion in the epidermal or subjacent cells of the leaf in some plants, especially in Urticaceæ. — cys"to-li-thi'a-sis, n Pathol. Stone in the bladder. — cys"to-lith'ic, a. Med. Relating to stone in the bladder. — cys-to'ma, n. Pathol. A cystic tumor. — cys-to'ma-tous, a. — cys"to-mor'phous, a. Cystiform. — cys"to-my-o'ma, n. Pathol. A cystic myoma. — Cys"to-myx-o'ma, n. Pathol. A cystic myxoma. — Cys"to-nec'tæ, n. pl. Zooph. An order of siphonanthous siphonophores with a large float or pneumatophore and without bracts or swimming-bells. — cys'to-nect, a. & n. — cys"to-nec'tous, a. — Cys"to-nec'tæ mon"o-gas'tri-cæ, a suborder of Cystonectæ with a single siphon representing a cormidium. — Cys"to-nec'tæ poly"-gas'tri-cæ, a suborder of Cystonectæ having a corm of numerous cormidia with one or more siphons and tentacles. — cys"to-neu-ral'gi-a, n. Pathol. Neuralgia affecting the bladder. — cys"to-pa-ral'y-sis, n. Pathol. Paralysis of the urinary bladder. cys"to-ple'gi-a‡. — cys'to-pex-y, n. Surg. An operation to cure cystocele. — Cys"to-pho-ri'næ, n. pl. Mam. A subfamily of Phocidæ with four upper and two lower incisors; hooded seals and elephant-seals. Cys-toph'o-ra, n. (t. g.) — cys-toph'o-rine, a. & n. — cys"toph-thi'sis, n. Pathol. Tuberculosis of the bladder. — cys'to-plast, n. Anat. A cell having a nucleus and an envelop. — cys'to-plas"ty, n. Plastic surgical operation on the bladder. — cys"to-proc-tos'to-my, n. Surg. The making of a permanent opening between the rectum and bladder. — Cys"top-ter'is, n. Flint: former name. — cys"top-to'sis, n. Pathol. An extrusion of the mucous membrane of the bladder into the urethra. — Cys'to-pus, n. Bot. A genus of oomycetous fungi in which the conidia are developed in chains, cohering in a white layer beneath the epidermis of the host-plant. C. candidus is the white rust on certain plants of the mustard family. — cys"tor-rha'gi-a, n. Hemorrhage from or bleeding in the bladder. — cys"-tor-rhe'a, n. Catarrh of the bladder. — cys"to-sar-co'ma, n. Pathol. A cystic sarcoma. — cys-to-schi'sis, n. Fissure of the bladder. — cys'to-scope, n. Surg. A catheter with a device for introducing light into the bladder to permit of ocular examination. — cys"to-scop'ic, a. — cys-tos'co-py, n. — cys'tose, a. Abounding in cysts, cystic; vesicular. — cys'to-spasm, n. Pathol. Spasm of the bladder. — cys"to-spas'tic, a. — cys'to-spore, n. Bot. Same as CARPOSPORE. — cys-tos'to-my, n. Surg. The making of an artificial outlet from the bladder. — cys"to-tæ'ni-a, n. A tapeworm. — cys'to-tome, n. A surgical instrument for cutting into the bladder. — cys-tot'o-my, n. Surg. A cutting into the bladder; the operation of puncturing an encysted tumor. — cys"to-tra"che-lot'o-my, n. Surg. An incision into the neck of the bladder. — cys'tous, a. Cystic.

1. Lip. 2. Flower, side view, and leaf. 3. Column.

cys"to-zo'oid, 1 sis"to-zō'eid; 2 çÿs"to-zō'oid, n. Helminth. The enlarged part of the embryo of Dipylidium caninum and some other cestoid worms. [< Gr. kystis, bladder, + ZOOID.] — cy'tase, 1 sai'tēs; 2 çÿ'tās, n. Chem. A cytolytic substance present in grass-seeds. [< Gr. kytos, hollow.] — cy-ta'sic, a. — cy-tas'ter, 1 si-tas'tar; 2 çy-tās'ter, n. Biol. A star-like form assumed by the nucleus of a cell undergoing division. See illus. under KARYOKINESIS. [< CYTE + Gr. astēr, star.] — cyte, 1 sait; 2 çÿt, n. Biol. A cell: usually in composition; as, archeocytes, collencytes, desmacytes, in sponges. [< Gr. kytos, hollow, < kyō, contain.]

Cy-the're, 1 si-thi'ri; 2 çy-thē'rē, n. Crust. 1. A genus typical of Cytheridæ. 2. [c-] An entomostracan of this genus. [< L. Cythere, < Gr. Kytherēia, Aphrodite (Venus) < Kythēra, Cerigo, an island in the Ægean sea.]

Cyth"e-re'a, 1 sith'i-ri'a; 2 çÿth'e-rē'a, n. 1. Gr. Myth. Aphrodite (Venus), from the island of Cythera (now Cerigo), near which she was reputed to have risen from the sea, and where there existed a famous sanctuary in her honor. 2. Bot. A monotypic genus of terrestrial orchids found in cool regions in the northern hemisphere. The leaf is ovate or cordate and many-nerved, and the flower, which is rose-colored, has a yellow crest. See illus. in col. 1. 3. Conch. A tropical genus of the family Veneridæ, having spinous shells; Cytherea dione is a species often preserved as an ornament.

Cyth"e-re'an, 1 sith'i-ri'an; 2 çÿth'e-rē'an, a. 1. Myth. Relating to Cytherea or Aphrodite (Venus). 2. Astron. Belonging to the planet Venus.

Cyth"e-rel'li-dæ, 1 sith'i-rel'i-di; 2 çÿth'e-rēl'i-dē, n. pl. Crust. A family of platycopous entomostracans with three pairs of maxilliform thoracic appendages. Cyth"e-rel'la, n. (t. g.) [Dim. of CYTHERE.] — cyth"e-rel'lid, n. — cyth"e-rel'loid, a.

Cy-ther'i-dæ, 1 si-ther'i-di; 2 çy-thēr'i-dē, n. pl. Crust. A family of podocopous entomostracans with three pairs of legs directed forward. [< CYTHERE.] Cyth"e-re'i-dæ‡. — cyth'e-rid, n. — cyth'e-roid, a.

Cyt"i-na'ce-æ, 1 sit"i-nē'si-i; 2 çÿt'i-nā'çe-ē, n. pl. Bot. A small family of fleshy root-parasitic plants, of which the best-known species is the hypocist (Cytinus hypocistis) of the Mediterranean region. Cyt'i-nus, n. (t. g.) [< Gr. kytinos, calyx of pomegranate, < kytos; see CYTO-.] — cyt'i-na'ceous, a.

cyt'i-o-derm, 1 sit'i-o-dûrm; 2 çÿt'i-o-dêrm, n. Bot. See CYTODERM and quotation.

cyt'i-o-plasm, 1 sit'i-o-plazm; 2 çÿt'i-o-plåsm, n. Biol. Cytoplasm. [< Gr. kytos (see CYTO-) + plasma, PLASM.]

cyt'i-sin, } 1 sit'i-sin, -sin or -sin; 2 çÿt'i-sin, -sin or -sin, cyt'i-sine, } n. Chem. A crystalline poisonous alkaloid ($C_{11}H_{14}N_2O$) contained in the unripe seeds of Cytisus laburnum. [< L. cytisus, kind of clover.]

Cyt'i-sus, 1 sit'i-sus; 2 çÿt'i-sūs, n. Bot. A genus of Old World shrubs of the bean family, having usually trifoliolate leaves and large showy yellow, purple, or white flowers. C. scoparius is the broom. [L., kind of clover.]

cyt'o-, 1 sai'to-; 2 çÿ'to-. From Greek kytos, hollow place, from kyō, be pregnant, contain; a combining form. — cyt'o-blast, n. 1. Biol. A cell-nucleus. 2. Protoz. The substance that invests a colony of choanoflagellate infusorians. — cyt"o-blas-te'ma, n. Biol. The formative substance out of which cells develop; protoplasm. — cyt"o-blas-tem'a-tous, a. — cyt"o-blas-tem'ic, a. — cyt"o-blas-te'mous, a. — cyt"o-chem'ism, n. Same as CHEMOTAXIS. — cyt"o-chro'ma-tin, n. Biol. The deeply staining part of the chromatin composing the cytosome. — cyt'o-chrome, n. Neurol. A group of nerve-cells characterized by small nuclei and a small amount of cytoplasm surrounding them. — cyt"o-chro-mat'ic, a. — cyt"o-chy-le'ma, n. [-LEM'A-TA, pl.] Biol. The more fluid part of cell-protoplasm: opposed to cytohyaloplasm. — cyt"o-chy'ma, n. A liquid substance in the vacuoles of certain cells. — cy-toc'la-sis, n. Physiol. The destruction of cells. — cyt"o-clas'tic, a. — cyt"o-coc'cus, n. The nucleus of a cytula. cyt"u-lo-coc'cus‡. — cyt'o-cyst, n. A schizont within a membrane, as in certain hematozoa (Lankestrella). — cyt'ode, n. Biol. Any cell; specif., a non-nucleated cell. — cyt"o-den'drite, n. Anat. A dendrite from the body of a nerve-cell. — cyt'o-derm, n. Biol. A cell-wall, as of a diatom.

Nature Aug. 21, 1890, p. 385.

— cyt"o-di"ag-no'sis, n. Med. A diagnosis from the examination of cells. — cyt"o-di-er'e-sis, n. The division of cells. — cyt"o-di-e-ret'ic, a. — cyt"o-gen'e-sis, n. The formation of cells. cys"to-gen'e-sis‡; cy-tog'e-ny‡. — cyt"o-ge-net'ic, a. — cyt"o-gen'tic, a. — cy-tog'e-nous, a. 1. Producing cells: specifically said of lymphoid tissue. 2. Of or pertaining to such tissue. — cyt"o-glo'bin, n. Phys. Chem. A cell-proteid which retards coagulation of the blood. — cyt"o-hy-al'o-plasm, *n. Dd Roman. 𝔇𝔡 Black Letter. 𝒟 𝒹 Script.

D, d, 1 dī; 2 dē, n. [DEES, D's, or Ds, 1 dīz; 2 dēs, pl.] 1. A letter: the fourth in the English alphabet. It belongs to the class of 'mute' or 'explosive' consonants, its sound being produced by bringing the tip of the tongue against the upper front teeth or the adjacent gum, while the vocal cords are vibrating. Without the vibration d becomes t; if uttered with the nasal passage open it becomes n. Tho d is commonly called a 'dental,' its usual point of contact in English is supradental. An imperfect linguadental closure gives rise to the th sounds.

In some languages d is not voiced as strongly as in English and differs from t, just as b differs from p (see under B), only by its weaker utterance. After n and before r or l an inorganic d sometimes develops, as in thunder < AS. bunor, cinder < Lat. cineres. After n and before z, as in lands, d is inaudible. A variety of d is heard in the composite j (dg, dge), which generally results from the palatalization of an earlier g; cf. bridge < AS. brycg. See under J. The participial and preterit ending -ed, after a voiceless consonant, as in missed, dropped, is simply a graphic symbol for t: it was never pronounced as d, save when syllabic, as in blessèd. Hence the well-known preference of poets and spelling-reformers for such spellings as dropt, drest, vext.

Capital D is from Latin D, < early Lat. Gr. Δ, < Phenician 𐤃, Egyptian hieratic 𓂝, hieroglyphic 𓂧. From D comes cursive 𝔇, > script d. The black letters are monkish fancies. For dates, see A. The hieroglyph is a picture of a hand; the Phenician letter is named daleth, door, > Gr. delta; dc is a Roman name. D is the twentieth letter of the Runic futhorc, but is the fourth in the Latin, Greek, and Phenician alphabets. It is also the fourth consonant (sixth sound) in frequency in English, averaging 4.94 per cent. of the sounds on the pages of our literature as examined by Prof. W. D. Whitney. See WHITNEY Oriental and Ling. Studies second series, ch. 8, p. 274. [s. 1874.]

Syn.: black, dim, dismal, dull, dusky, gloomy, mysterious, obscure, opaque, sable, shadowy, shady, somber, swart, swarthy. Strictly, that which is black is absolutely destitute of color; that which is dark is absolutely destitute of light. In common speech, however, a coat is black, tho not optically colorless; the night is dark, tho the stars shine. That is obscure, shadowy, or shady from which the light is more or less cut off. Dusky is applied to objects which appear as if viewed in fading light; the word is often used, as are swart and swarthy, of the human skin when quite dark, or even verging toward black. Dim refers to imperfection of outline, from distance, darkness, mist, etc., or from some defect of vision. Opaque objects, as smoked glass, are impervious to light. Murky is said of that which is at once dark, obscure, and gloomy; as, a murky den; a murky sky. Figuratively, dark is emblematic of sadness, agreeing with somber, dismal, gloomy, also of moral evil; as, a dark deed. Of intellectual matters, dark is now rarely used in the old sense of a dark saying, etc. See MYSTERIOUS; OBSCURE.— Ant.: bright, brilliant, clear, crystalline, dazzling, gleaming, glowing, illumined, light, lucid, luminous, radiant, transparent, white. — Dark and Bloody Ground, Kentucky: so called from the numerous Indian wars that occurred in the regions now embraced by the State.— dark's arch"es, n. A British noctuid moth (Hadena monoglypha). — D. Beware of desperate steps. The darkest day, Live till to-morrow, will have passed away.
COWPER The Needless Alarm moral.

2. The twenty-four hours that elapse during one revolution of the earth upon its axis, so as to bring the sun, a star, or the moon again over the same meridian. If the sun is used as the reference-point, as is commonly the case, it is a solar day; if a star, a sidereal day; if the moon, a lunar day. The Hebrews and Greeks began the day at sunset, the Romans at midnight, the Babylonians at sunrise, and the Umbrians at noon. It is now commonly reckoned from midnight to midnight, but by astronomers and seamen from noon to noon.

To the astronomer . . . the meaning of the word day is indefinite, unless it is specified whether a solar or sidereal day is intended. LOCKYER Elements of Astronomy p. 218. [a. 1859.]

3. By extension, the period of revolution of any heavenly body; as, Jupiter's day is about 10 hours long. 4. The portion of a day assigned for labor; as, a day's work. 5. Any period of time occupied by some course of operations; an age; as, a great man in his day; the day in which the Lord God made the earth and the heavens. 6. The distance that can be traveled in a day; a day's journey; as, ten days distant from here. 7. The contest of a day as regards its issues; as, the day is doubtful; we have won the day. 8. A particular day, or one set apart for a special use; as, St. John's day. 9. Mining. The surface above a mine. [< AS. dæg (pl. dagas).]—affirmance day general, a day designated by certain officials to be held each term of the English Court of Exchequer, for the reversal or general affirmance of judgments; now obsolete.—apparent solar day, the interval elapsing between two successive meridian transits of the sun. This is a variable quantity; the variation is due to the inclination of the axis of the earth and the fact that its orbit is not exactly circular.—artificial day, same as DAY, 1.—astronomical day, a mean solar day reckoned from noon to noon.—black-letter day, see BLACK LETTER.—Capitulation day [P. [< OF. decair, < L. decido, fail, < de, down, + cado, fall.]

SYN: corrupt, decompose, molder, putrefy, rot, spoil. Rot is a strong word, ordinarily esteemed coarse, but on occasion capable of approved emphatic use; as, "the name of the wicked shall rot," Prov. x, 7.; decay and decompose are now common euphemisms. A substance is decomposed when resolved into its original elements by any process; it is decayed when resolved into its original elements by natural processes; it decays gradually, but may be instantly decomposed, as water into oxygen and hydrogen; to say that a thing is decayed may denote only a partial result, but to say it is decomposed ordinarily implies that the change is complete or nearly so. Putrefy and the adjectives putrid and putrescent, and the nouns putridity and putrescence, are used almost exclusively of animal matter in a state of decomposition, the more general word decay being used of either animal or vegetable substances.

COWPER Conversation l. 176.

SYN: see DIE.—de-ceased', pa. Departed from this life; dead; especially in the form the deceased, used of one lately dead.—deceased wife's sister act (Eng. Law), an act to legalize the marriage of a man with his deceased wife's sister, passed by the British Parliament in 1907 after being defeated a number of times during a period of seventy-two years. Prior to the marriage act of 1835 such a marriage could be declared void by the ecclesiastical courts, as being within the prohibited degrees. From that date until 1907 it was legally void. Bills legalizing marriages of this character were passed in the British colonies some time prior to the passage of the bill in England; but marriages undersuch acts were not recognized in England.

de-cease', n. Departure from this life; death. [< F. décès, < L. decessus, < de- (see DE-) + cedo, go.] de-cesse'†. SYN.: see DEATH.

de-cep'tiv‡, } power or tendency to deceive; calculated to give a false impression; designed to mislead or cheat; as, deceptive conduct.

But these transparent natures are often deceptive in their depth.

Hawthorne House of Seven Gables ch. 12, p. 209. [h. m. & co.]

[< F. déceptif, < L. deceptus; see DECEIT.] de-cep'to-ry‡ [Rare].

Syn.: deceitful, delusive, illusive, illusory. Persons are deceitful; things are deceptive. We speak of a deceitful but not of a deceptive man. We speak, however, of deceitful promises, as involving personal action. It is more accurate to say deceptive than deceitful appearances, since the appearances have no intent to deceive. See COUNTERFEIT.— Ant.: fair, frank, genuine, honest, open, real, truthful, veracious. — de-cep'tiv(e-ly[2], adv.— de-cep'tiv(e-ness[2], n. The quality of being deceptive.— de"cep-tiv'ity, n. [Rare.] 1. Deceptiveness. 2. An instance of deceptiveness; sham; deceit.

Wayland Political Economy pt. ii, ch. 2, p. 57. [g. & l. 1847.]

2. To end by a decision or judgment; determine authoritatively by fixing upon one of several possible cases, as when a question or issue is presented; adjudge; arbitrate: often followed by an indirect question; as, to decide a dispute; decide who is right.

'Whether perfect happiness would be procured by perfect goodness,' said Nekayah, 'this world will never afford an opportunity of deciding.' Johnson Rasselas ch. 27, p. 85. [s. u. 1880.]

3. To settle in one's mind; resolve; as, to decide what shall be done. 4†. To cut off.

II. i. To give judgment; come to a decision; arbitrate; as, he decided between the competitors.

Once to every man and nation comes the moment to decide,
In the strife of Truth with Falsehood, for the good or evil side.

Lowell Present Crisis st. 5.

Syn.: see SETTLE.— de-cid'a-bl(e[2], a.— de-cide'ment†, n. Decision.— de-cid'er, n. One who or that which decides. — de-cid'ing-ly, adv. So as to decide; decisively.

de-cid'ed, 1 dı-said'ed; 2 de-çīd'ĕd, pa. 1. That puts an end to doubt; free from ambiguity or uncertainty; unquestionable; unmistakable; as, a decided change. 2. Exhibiting decision of character; unwavering; resolute; emphatic; as, a very decided manner.

Syn.: see FIRM; OBSTINATE.— de-cid'ed-ly, adv. With determination or decision; also, without doubt; beyond question; as, he spoke decidedly, but he is decidedly wrong. — de-cid'ed-ness, n. The state or quality of being decided.

de-cid'u-ous, 1 dı-sid'yu-us; 2 de-çĭd'yu-ŭs, a. 1. Bot. Falling off or shed at maturity or at specific seasons, as petals after flowering, fruit when ripe, or leaves in autumn; also, characterized by such a falling off. 2. Zool. Liable to be shed at periodical times or certain stages of growth, as antlers, hair, teeth, wings of insects, etc.; having such parts. 3. Not enduring; evanescent; short-lived. [< L. deciduus; see DECIDUA.]— de-cid'u-ous-ness, n. The quality of being deciduous. dec"i-du'i-tyt.

dec'i-gram, 1 des'ı-gram; 2 dĕç'i-grăm, n. In the metric system, a weight of one-tenth of a gram, equal to 1.54 troy grains, nearly. [< F. décigramme. < L. decimus (see DECIL); and see GRAM[1], n.] dec'i-grammet.

dec'il, } 1 des'il; 2 dĕç'il, n. Astrol. The aspect of two dec'ile, } planets whose longitude differs by 36°, or a tenth of the zodiac. [< F. décil, < L. decimus, tenth, < decem, ten.]

dec'i-li"ter, } 1 des'ı-lī"tər; 2 dĕç'i-lī"ter, n. In the metric dec'i-li"tre, } system, a measure of capacity of one-tenth of a liter, or, in the United States, 3.38 fluid ounces. [< F. décilitre, < L. decimus (see DECIL); and see LITER.]

de-cil'lion, 1 dı-sil'yan; 2 de-çĭl'yon, a. Numbering a decillion: a cardinal numeral, originally a use of the noun, and hence preceded by an article or a numeral.

de-cil'lion, n. 1. A cardinal number: (1) In the French system of numeration, commonly followed in the United States, the eleventh power of a thousand: represented in Arabic numerals by a figure 1 followed by thirty-three ciphers. (2) In the English system, the tenth power of a million: represented in Arabic numerals by a figure 1 followed by sixty ciphers. 2. The symbols representing either of these numbers. See NOTATION. [< L. decem, ten, + -illion as in MILLION.] — de-cil'lionth, a. 1. Last in a series of a decillion: an ordinal numeral. 2. Being one of a decillion equal parts; as, a decillionth part.— de-cil'lionth, n. One of a decillion equal parts of anything; the quotient of a unit divided by a decillion.

dec'i-ma, 1 des'ı-mą; 2 dĕç'i-ma, n. [L. & Sp.] 1. A Spanish coin. See COIN. 2. Mus. See TENTH. 3. A tax of one-tenth; tithe.

dec'i-mal, 1 des'ı-məl; 2 dĕç'i-mal, a. 1. Pertaining to or founded on the number 10; proceeding by powers of 10 or of one-tenth. 2. Pertaining to tithes. [< F. décimal, < LL. decimalis, < L. decimus; see DECIL.]

— decimal arithmetic, arithmetic based on the use of the Arabic notation; sometimes, calculation in decimals.— d. classification, in library usage, any system of classifying books in which there are ten main classes, each divided into ten subclasses, and so on. The notation of such a system is the ordinary decimal notation of arithmetic; as, the decimal classification of Melvil Dewey.— d. fraction, a fraction whose denominator is 10 or a power of 10. It is usually written without the denominator, the number of ciphers in the denominator being indicated by the number of places occupied by the numerator preceded if necessary by ciphers, and placed after a point or period. Thus: $.5 = 5/10$, $.05 = 5/100$, $3.2 = 32/10$, $3.02 = 302/100$, $3.002 = 3002/1000$.— d. notation, notation based on the ten digits and their combinations.— d. place, the place of a figure after the decimal point, as first, second, etc.— d. point, a dot or period used to separate a decimal fraction from a whole number, or to indicate its fractional character when standing alone.— d. system, a system of reckoning by tens or tenths.

The able Gouverneur Morris is entitled to the credit of proposing the decimal system of computation, and Jefferson of proposing the unit and present coinage of the United States. H. S. Randall Thomas Jefferson vol. i, ch. 10, p. 396. [d. & j. 1858.]

dec'i-mal, n. A digit used to express a power of $1/10$, by the place it occupies with respect to the decimal point; a fraction expressed by one or more such digits. See DECIMAL FRACTION (above).— circulating decimal, a decimal fraction repeating a set of figures without end, as .927927927 +.— interminate d., a decimal that may be carried out infinitely far, as that corresponding to the common fraction $1/7$ (.1428571 . . .).— periodic d., a circulating decimal; which see.— recurring d., a circulating or repeating decimal; which see.— repeating d., a decimal fraction in which one figure is repeated indefinitely, as 10.56333333 +; also, sometimes, a circulating decimal.— dec'i-mal-ism, n. The decimal system; the theory of reckoning by decimals, or its advocacy.— dec'i-mal-ist, n. One who uses or favors the decimal system.— dec"i-mal-za'tion, dec"i-mal-i-sa'tion, n.— dec'i-mal-ize, dec'i-mal-ise, rt. To reduce to a decimal system.— dec'i-mal-ly, adv. By means of decimals; by tens or tenths.

dec'i-mate, 1 des'ı-mēt; 2 dĕç'i-māt, rt. [-MAT'ED; -MAT'ING.] 1. To kill one (sometimes, to spare only one) out of every ten persons of: especially applied to a body from whom the victims were selected by lot; as, to decimate captives.

Cholera . . . more than decimated the villages. Hugh Miller Schools and Schoolmasters ch. 22, p. 461. [g. & l. 1854.]

2. In popular use, to destroy a measurable or large proportion of; as, the epidemic has decimated the population. 3†. To levy a tax of one-tenth upon; tithe. [< L. decimatus. pp. of decimo, < decem, ten.] — dec"i-ma'tion, n. 1. The act of decimating, or the state of being decimated; great thinning out by destruction, as of a population. 2.† A tithing; tax.— dec'i-ma"tor, n. One who or that which decimates.

dē"cime', 1 dē'sim'; 2 dę'çīm', n. [F.] A French coin. See COIN.

dec"i-mes'tri-al, 1 des'ı-mes'trı-əl; 2 dĕç'i-mĕs'tri-al, a. [Rare.] Consisting of ten months. [< L. decem, ten, + mensis, month.]

dec'i-me"ter, } 1 des'ı-mī'tər; 2 dĕç'i-mē'ter, n. In the

dec'i-mo"lar, 1 des'ı-mō'lər; 2 dĕç'i-mō'lar, a. Chem. Tenth molar. See MOLAR, a.

dec'i-mole, 1 des'ı-mōl; 2 dĕç'i-mōl, n. Ten musical notes forming a group to be played in the time of eight or four notes; a decuplet. Compare TRIPLET. [< L. decem, ten.]

dec'i-mo-sex'to, a. & n. Same as SIXTEENMO.

dec'ine, 1 des'in or -in; 2 dĕç'in or -in, n. Same as DECENYLENE.

dec'i-nene, 1 des'ı-nīn; 2 dĕç'i-nēn, n. Chem. Any of a number of compounds of the formula $C_{10}H_{18}$.

dec"i-nor'mal, 1 des'ı-nōr'məl; 2 dĕç'i-nōr'mal, a. Having one-tenth the normal value or strength; specif. (Chem.), having in every liter of solvent a number of grams of dissolved substance equal to one-tenth that substance's molecular weight.

de-ci'pher, } 1 dı-sai'fər; 2 de-çī'fer, rt. 1. To make de-ci'fer‡, } out the sense of; interpret, as something obscure or puzzling; find out the true words or meaning of, as something hardly legible; as, to decipher an inscription. 2. To translate into ordinary characters; bring out from cipher or unknown characters; as, to decipher a dispatch. 3. To portray; delineate. 4†. To discover; detect. [< DE- + CIPHER.] Syn.: see INTERPRET; SOLVE.— de-ci'pher-a-bl(e[2], a. That may be deciphered or interpreted.— de-ci'pher-er, n.— de-ci'pher-ess, n.— de-ci'pher-ment, n. The act of deciphering; interpretation.

de-cip'i-um, 1 dı-sip'ı-um; 2 de-çĭp'i-ŭm, n. Chem. A supposed metallic element, allied to the cerium and yttrium groups, described by Delafontaine as contained in North Carolina samarskite. Its existence is not recognized by chemists. [< L. decipio; see DECEIT.] de-cip'pi-umt.

de-ci'sion, 1 dı-siz'ən; 2 de-çĭzh'on, n. 1. The act or product of determining, whether mentally or in fact; the cutting off of the process of deliberation. 2. The quality of being positive and firm in one's practical judgments or in one's action; the disposition to prompt and steadfast action; quickness and vigor of resolution; as, he acts with decision.

I suspect that Mr. Foster rated so highly the quality of decision in matters of action, chiefly because he wanted it himself.

De Quincey Essays on the Poets, Foster p. 224. [t. & f. 1859.]

3. The act of forming and announcing a judgment, especially by a court of law or a legislative body; as, the decision was in my favor. 4. The embodiment or expression of that which has been concluded to be true or right; the recorded expression of a formal judgment; as, the decisions of the Supreme Court. 5. The definite termination of a contest or question in favor of one side or the other; the rendering fixed and certain of what has been uncertain; as, the decision of the battle; the decision of one's fate. 6†. A cutting off; excision. [< F. décision, < L. decisio(n-), < decisus; see DECISIVE.]

de-ci'sive, } 1 dı-sai'siv; 2 de-çī'sĭv, a. 1. Putting an de-ci'siv‡, } end to uncertainty, debate, or question; determinative; conclusive; as, decisive action; the decisive element was the weather.

Meade won the decisive victory at Gettysburg in the crisis of the civil war. T. M. Cooley Michigan ch. 18, p. 370. [h. m. & co. 1886.]

de-ci'sive, n. [Rare.] A determined or conclusive circumstance or thing.

dec'i-stere, 1 des'ı-stīr; 2 dĕç'i-stēr, n. In the metric system, one-tenth of a stere, equal to 3.532 cubic feet. See MEASURE. [< F. décistère, < L. decimus (see DECIL); and see STERE[1], n.] dec'i-stert.

de-cit'i-zen-ize, 1 dī-sit'ı-zn-aiz; 2 dē-çĭt'i-zn-īz, rt. [-IZED; -IZ'ING.] To deprive of citizenship.

De'cius, 1 dī'shus; 2 dē'shūs, Caius Messius Q. T. (200?–251). A Roman emperor; persecuted Christians; defeated and slain by Goths.

—Auburn Declaration (Theol.), a statement adopted at Auburn, N. Y., in August, 1837, by a convention representing the synods (of Utica, Geneva, and Genesee, and the Western Reserve) established from the Presbyterian Church by the General Assembly of the previous May. It consists of sixteen propositions, which have since been generally accepted by Presbyterians as sound Calvinistic doctrine.—D. and Bill of Rights (Eng. Hist.), a formal statement and declaration of the fundamental principles of government and of the rights of individuals in both their absolute and related conditions; specif., the solemn declaration of rights (in England) setting forth those fundamental principles of the British Constitution the observance of which was to be imposed upon William and Mary on their acceptance of the crown.—D. of Breda, a pre-Restoration proclamation of amnesty and religious freedom, published by Charles II. at Breda in the Netherlands, in April, 1660.—D. of Independence, the document issued by the Continental Congress, July 4, 1776, setting forth causes of grievance of the American colonies against Great Britain, and formally declaring their political independence.—d. of intention, the first declaration under oath required of an alien applying for naturalization under the laws of the United States.—D. of London, an international agreement of 71 articles between the great powers, regulating blockades in time of war, contraband of war, neutrals, resistance to search, and compensation, signed at London, Feb. 26, 1909, but rejected by the House of Lords, Dec. 1911, adopted by order in council, Aug. 20, 1914, but rescinded July 8, 1916.—D. of Paris, a declaration modifying the rules of maritime law in war, signed at Paris, Apr. 16, 1856. It declared: (1) that privateering is abolished. (2) That the flag of a neutral ship covers an enemy's goods unless contraband of war. (3) That a neutral's goods except contraband of war are free. (4) that a blockade is not binding unless real and effectively enforced. The United States refused to agree to the first point; Spain and Mexico refused concurrence in all.—D. of St. Petersburg, a declaration whereby the majority of European powers in 1868 agreed not to use, in any war among themselves, an explosive or fulminate projectile weighing less than 14 ounces.—d. of trust, the execution or acknowledgment of a trust in some form of writing.—dying d., a declaration admissible in evidence, the truth of which is made by a person who has no hope of recovery, and relates to the cause of his death.—judicial d. (Scots Law), the written statement as to matters of fact made on examination by a party to a suit.—Mecklenburg D., a draft of a declaration of the independence of the American colonies said to have been framed at a convention of leading citizens of western North Carolina, May 20, 1775, and taken by special messenger to the Continental Congress in Philadelphia.—Savoy D. (of the English Congregationalists), the Savoy Confession. See under CONFESSION.

de-clar'a-tiv', } Of or containing a declaration; declaratory; as, a declarative sentence.

Some principles, it is true, are not affirmed in a declarative form; but they may be implied in a narrative, a parable, an act, a character, which is recorded. ANDREW PEABODY Theory of Preaching lect. iv, p. 52. [a. 1852.]

IN CONGRESS, JULY 4, 1776.

The unanimous Declaration of the thirteen united States of America,

When in the Course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the Laws of Nature and of Nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation. ——— We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness. — That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, — That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness. Prudence, indeed, will dictate that Governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience hath shewn, that mankind are more disposed to suffer, while evils are sufferable, than to right themselves by abolishing the forms to which they are accustomed. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object evinces a design to reduce them under absolute Despotism, it is their right, it is their duty, to throw off such Government, and to provide new Guards for their future security. — Such has been the patient sufferance of these Colonies; and such is now the necessity which constrains them to alter their former Systems of Government. The history of the present King of Great Britain is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute Tyranny over these States. To prove this, let Facts be submitted to a candid world. ——— He has refused his Assent to Laws, the most wholesome and necessary for the public good. ——— He has forbidden his Governors to pass Laws of immediate and pressing importance, unless suspended in their operation till his Assent should be obtained; and when so suspended, he has utterly neglected to attend to them. ——— He has refused to pass other Laws for the accommodation of large districts of people, unless those people would relinquish the right of Representation in the Legislature, a right inestimable to them and formidable to tyrants only. ——— He has called together legislative bodies at places unusual, uncomfortable, and distant from the depository of their public Records, for the sole purpose of fatiguing them into compliance with his measures. ——— He has dissolved Representative Houses repeatedly, for opposing with manly firmness his invasions on the rights of the people. ——— He has refused for a long time, after such dissolutions, to cause others to be elected; whereby the Legislative powers, incapable of Annihilation, have returned to the People at large for their exercise; the State remaining in the mean time exposed to all the dangers of invasion from without, and convulsions within. ——— He has endeavored to prevent the population of these States; for that purpose obstructing the Laws for Naturalization of Foreigners; refusing to pass others to encourage their migrations hither, and raising the conditions of new Appropriations of Lands. ——— He has obstructed the Administration of Justice, by refusing his Assent to Laws for establishing Judiciary powers. ——— He has made Judges dependent on his Will alone, for the tenure of their offices, and the amount and payment of their salaries. ——— He has erected a multitude of New Offices, and sent hither swarms of Officers to harass our People, and eat out their substance. ——— He has kept among us, in times of peace, Standing Armies without the Consent of our legislatures. ——— He has affected to render the Military independent of and superior to the Civil power. ——— He has combined with others to subject us to a jurisdiction foreign to our constitution, and unacknowledged by our laws; giving his Assent to their Acts of pretended legislation: — For Quartering large bodies of armed troops among us: — For protecting them, by a mock Trial, from punishment for any Murders which they should commit on the Inhabitants of these States: — For cutting off our Trade with all parts of the world: — For imposing Taxes on us without our Consent: — For depriving us in many cases, of the benefits of Trial by jury: — For transporting us beyond Seas to be tried for pretended offences: — For abolishing the free System of English Laws in a neighbouring Province, establishing therein an Arbitrary government, and enlarging its Boundaries so as to render it at once an example and fit instrument for introducing the same absolute rule into these Colonies: — For taking away our Charters, abolishing our most valuable Laws, and altering fundamentally the Forms of our Governments: — For suspending our own Legislatures, and declaring themselves invested with power to legislate for us in all cases whatsoever. — He has abdicated Government here, by declaring us out of his Protection and waging War against us. ——— He has plundered our seas, ravaged our Coasts, burnt our towns, and destroyed the lives of our people. ——— He is at this time transporting large Armies of foreign Mercenaries to compleat the works of death, desolation and tyranny, already begun with circumstances of Cruelty & perfidy scarcely paralleled in the most barbarous ages, and totally unworthy the Head of a civilized nation. ——— He has constrained our fellow Citizens taken Captive on the high Seas to bear Arms against their Country, to become the executioners of their friends and Brethren, or to fall themselves by their Hands. ——— He has excited domestic insurrections amongst us, and has endeavoured to bring on the inhabitants of our frontiers, the merciless Indian Savages, whose known rule of warfare, is an undistinguished destruction of all ages, sexes and conditions. In every stage of these Oppressions We have Petitioned for Redress in the most humble terms: Our repeated Petitions have been answered only by repeated injury. A Prince, whose character is thus marked by every act which may define a Tyrant, is unfit to be the ruler of a free people. Nor have We been wanting in attentions to our British brethren. We have warned them from time to time of attempts by their legislature to extend an unwarrantable jurisdiction over us. We have reminded them of the circumstances of our emigration and settlement here. We have appealed to their native justice and magnanimity, and we have conjured them by the ties of our common kindred to disavow these usurpations, which, would inevitably interrupt our connections and correspondence. They too have been deaf to the voice of justice and of consanguinity. We must, therefore, acquiesce in the necessity, which denounces our Separation, and hold them, as we hold the rest of mankind, Enemies in War, in Peace Friends. ——— de-clutch', 1 dĭ-klŭch'; 2 dē-clŭch', vt. To release a clutch, as by the band-brake of an automobile.

We, therefore, the Representatives of the united States of America, in General Congress, Assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, do, in the Name, and by Authority of the good People of these Colonies, solemnly publish and declare, That these United Colonies are, and of Right ought to be Free and Independent States; that they are Absolved from all Allegiance to the British Crown, and that all political connection between them and the state of Great Britain, is and ought to be totally dissolved; and that as Free and Independent States, they have full Power to levy War, conclude Peace, contract Alliances, establish Commerce, and to do all other Acts and Things which Independent States may of right do. ——— And for the support of this Declaration, with a firm reliance on the protection of divine Providence, we mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes and our sacred Honor.

de-coct', 1 dĭ-kokt'; 2 dē-cŏct', vt. 1. To prepare for use by boiling. 2. To extract the medicinal properties of by means of boiling. 3. [Archaic.] To assimilate or digest, as food. 4. [Archaic.] To warm or heat, as by boiling. 5. [Archaic.] To devise, as by concocting. [< L. decoquo (pp. decoctus), < de, down, + coquo, cook.] — de-coct'i-bl(eᴱ, a. — de-coc'tĭv(eᴳˢ, a. Having a tendency or power to decoct. — de-coc'ture, n. A decoction.

de-coc'tion, 1 dĭ-kok'shən; 2 dē-cŏc'shon, n. 1. The liquid produced by boiling a substance until its soluble properties are extracted; specif., such a solution of vegetable principles in water: distinguished from infusion.

The general formula for ordinary decoctions (not including powerful substances) requires that 10 parts by weight of the comminuted substance should be put into 100 parts of cold water in a covered vessel and boiled fifteen minutes. 2. The act or process of boiling anything, especially in water, to extract its soluble properties. 3. Preparation or development by heat. [OF., < L. decoctio(n-), < decoctus; see DECOCT.]

de-coc'tor, 1 dĭ-kok'tər; 2 dē-cŏc'tŏr, n. [L.] Rom. Law. A spendthrift; bankrupt; specif., one who has squandered public funds. [To decipher (a code).

de-code', 1 dĭ-kōd'; 2 dē-cōd', vt. [DE-COD'ED; DE-COD'ING.]

de"co-here', 1 dĭ'ko-hĭr'; 2 dē'co-hēr', vt. [-HERED; -HER'ING.] Wireless Teleg. To cause to cease cohering; separate; disconnect: used in wireless telegraphy. See COHERER. [< DE- + COHERE.] — de"co-her'ence, n.

The particles of metal cohere, the Morse instrument prints a dot, and the tapper strikes its little hammer against the glass tube. That blow decoheres the particles of metal, and stops the current. McClure's Magazine June, 1899, p. 106.

de"co-her'er, 1 dĭ'ko-hĭr'ər; 2 dē'co-hēr'er, n. Elec. A mechanical contrivance used in restoring a coherer to its normal state of high resistance after it has been made conductive, as by the impact of an electromagnetic wave: used especially in wireless telegraphy, where it acts by tapping or jarring. Compare COHERER.

de"co-he'sion, 1 dĭ'ko-hĭ'ʒən; 2 dē'co-hē'zhon, n. Elec. The act of restoring a coherer to its normal state of high resistance, as by the action of a decoherer: the normal state of a coherer: decoherence. [< DE- + COHESION.]

de-co'ic, 1 dĭ-kō'ĭk; 2 dē-cō'ic, a. Chem. Of or derived from decane. — decoic acid, same as CAPRIC ACID.

A fine piece [painting] of a decollated head of St. John the Baptist. BURKE Essays, Sublime and Beautiful p. 25. [CAS. CO.]

2. Conch. Having the apex worn away, as frequently happens in certain univalve shells. — de-col'late, vt. To behead. de-coll'†. — de-col'la-tor, n.

Decollated and Decorticated Shells. 1/1

1. Decollated shell of a pond-snail (Goniobasis). 2. Decorticated shell of Corbicula cuneata.

dec"ol-la'tion, 1 dek"ə-lē'shən; 2 dĕc"o-lā'shon (XIII), n. 1. The act of beheading, or the state of being beheaded; decapitation; specif., in surgery, the severing of the head of the child in difficult parturition. 2. A picture representing a beheading, or a festival commemorating the beheading of a martyr; as, the decollation of St. John the Baptist (Aug. 29). [OF., < L. decollatio(n-), < decollo, behead, < de, from, + collum, neck.]

dē"col'le-tē', 1 dē'kel'ə-tē'; 2 dē"cŏl'e-tē', a. [F.] 1. Cut low in the neck; low-necked, as the waist of a dress, so as to leave the neck and shoulders exposed. 2. [Fem. décolleté.] Wearing a low-necked dress; having the neck and shoulders bare.

The ladies ride in full dress, décolletées, without hats. R. H. DANA, JR. To Cuba and Back ch. 5, p. 48. [T. & F. 1859.]

de-col'or, } 1 dĭ-kul'ər; 2 dē-cŏl'or, vt. To deprive of

de-col"or-im'e-ter, 1 dĭ-kul'ər-im'ĭ-tər; 2 dē-cŏl'or-ĭm'e-ter, n. An instrument or apparatus for testing the decolorizing or bleaching power of a substance, as of bleaching-powder. [< L. decolor, colorless (< de- priv. + color), + Gr. metron, measure.]

de-col'or-ize, } 1 dĭ-kul'ər-aiz; 2 dē-cŏl'or-ĭz, vt. [-IZED; de-cul'or-izeᴱ, } -IZ'ING.] To free from color; blanch. de-col'or-ist‡. — de-col"or-i-za'tion [or -sa'tion], n. — de-col'or-iz"er or -is"er, n. [spelling in England.

de-col'our, de-col'our-ise, etc. Decolor, etc.: the usual De Co-lum'nis. Same as GUIDO DELLE COLONNE.

de-com"pen-sa'tion, 1 dĭ-kom'pen-sē'shən; 2 dē-cŏm'pĕn-sā'shon, n. Pathol. Failure of the heart to increase in power sufficiently to overcome the obstruction of valvular disease.

de"com-plex', 1 dĭ'kom-pleks'; 2 dē"cŏm-plĕks', a. 1. Deprived of complexity; simplified, as elements or ideas.

Hartley . . . shows that as ideas become complex, so they become decomplex by association. UEBERWEG Hist. Philos. tr. by Morris, vol. ii, app. i, § 23, p. 388. [S. 1874.]

de"com-pose', 1 dĭ'kom-pōz'; 2 dē"cŏm-pōz', v. [-POSED'; -POS'ING.] I. t. To resolve or separate into constituent parts or elements, as by means of chemical agents or by natural decay; especially, to cause to decay or rot. II. i. To become separated into elements; hence, to putrefy; decay; rot. SYN.: see DECAY. — de"com-pos"a-bl(eᴱ, a. — de"com-posed', pa. 1. In a state of decomposition; decayed; rotten. 2. Ornith. Separate; standing apart, as a crest in which the feathers stand away from one another. — de"com-pos'er, n. That which causes decomposition.

de"com-pos'ite, 1 dĭ'kom-pez'ĭt; 2 dē"cŏm-pŏz'ĭt. I. a. Compounded of compounds; in botany, decompound. II. n. Anything compounded of things already composite. [< LL. decompositus, < L. de, from; and see COMPOSITE, a.] de-com"po-si'tion, 1 dĭ-kom'po-zish'ən; 2 dē-cŏm'po-zĭsh'on, n. 1. The act, process, or result of resolving or separating anything that is compound into its original parts or elements, as by chemical action or natural decay.

Under the influence of physical agency decomposition is constantly going on throughout the body, and is indeed the fundamental condition of its life. YOUMANS Hand-book Household Science pt. iii, ¶ 309, p. 171. [A. 1866.]

2. A compounding or combination of things already composite or compound; repeated composition. [< F. décomposition, < L. de-, DE-; and see COMPOSITION.] — decomposition of forces, the determination of two or more forces that shall be the equivalent of a given force. — d. of light, the separation of light into prismatic colors. See LIGHT and COLOR. — electric or electrolytic d., electrolysis.

de"com-pound', 1 dĭ'kom-paund'; 2 dē"cŏm-pound', vt. 1. To compound of things already compound. 2. [Rare.] To decompose. — de"com-pound', a. 1. Formed by compounding compounds; compounded more than once. 2. Bot. Several times divided or compounded, as a leaf. — de"com-pound', n. A decomposite. — de"com-pound'a-bl(eᴱ, a. — de"com-pound'ly, adv.

de"com-pres'sion, 1 dĭ'kom-presh'ən; 2 dē"cŏm-prĕsh'on, n. 1. Med. The removing of pressure from a part; as, cerebral decompression, the removing of a part of the cranium to relieve intracranial pressure. 2. Engin. The gradual abatement of atmospheric pressure upon workers in caissons, to avoid the shock entailed by the too sudden return from compressed into normal air. — de"com-press', vt. To subject to decompression.

de-con'cen-trate, 1 dĭ-kon'sen-trēt; 2 dē-cŏn'çĕn-trāt, vt. [-TRAT'ED; -TRAT'ING.] To scatter or distribute; disperse or spread out from a position or condition of concentration; break up the concentration of. — de-con"cen-tra'tion, n. [decompose.

de"con-coct', 1 dĭ'kon-kokt'; 2 dē"cŏn-cŏct', vt. [Rare.] To de"con-ges'tĭv(eᵍ, 1 dĭ'kon-jes'tĭv, 2 dē"cŏn-ġĕs'tĭv. I. a. Med. That tends to relieve congestion. II. n. A medicine efficacious in reducing congestion.

de-con'se-crate, 1 dĭ-kon'sĭ-krēt; 2 dē-cŏn'se-crāt, vt. [-CRAT'ED; -CRAT'ING.] To deprive of a consecrated character; secularize, as a church. — de-con"se-cra'tion, n.

POMEROY Municipal Law pt. i, ch. 1, § 77, p. 41. [A. 1864.]

2. Theol. The eternal purpose of God, whereby for his own glory he has foreordained whatsoever comes to pass; also, any specific purpose embraced in this one. 3. (1) Eng. & U. S. Law. A judicial decision made of record in a cause; as, a decree in chancery: commonly made interchangeable with judgment. (2) Scots Law. A sentence of a civil court; final judgment.

It was not, in Lord Eldon's opinion, sufficient that a judge's decree should be actually right; he held it important, also, that the parties on both sides should, if possible, be satisfied of its being so. H. Twiss Lord Eldon vol. ii, ch. 63, p. 413. [c. & n. 1844.]

4. A decision, award, or judgment of an arbitrator or umpire. [< F. décret, < L. decretum, < decerno; see DECERN.] de-cre't; de-cree'ment†. Syn.: see LAW. — Berlin decree, a declaration by Napoleon I., 1806, announcing blockade of the British Isles. — d. arbitral (Scots Law), a sentence based on a willingness to arbitrate. — d. in absence (Scots Law), judgment by default. — d. nisi (Law), a decree upon condition, as of the failure of the party against whom the decree is granted to perform some specific act. — d. of forthcoming (Scots Law), a decree following a debtor's arrest, stating that if the debt is not paid, the debtor's property will go to the creditor. — d. of nullity, a decree establishing the invalidity of a marriage from the commencement. — d. of registration (Scots Law), a decree covering an agreement made without judicial intervention. — final d. (Law), a decree that disposes finally of a cause previously pending. — interlocutory d. (Law), a decretal order made, as by a chancery court, with regard to a special matter in a pending cause, but not deciding the whole case. — Karlsbad decrees [G.], a series of laws passed by a congress in Karlsbad in 1819 and ratified by the Diet, limiting the freedom of the press and making the Burschenschaften illegal. — order of decrees (Theol.), the doctrine concerning the true order and relation established by God between the several parts of the divine decree in the matter of man's salvation, i. e., between the creation of man, the fall of man, the provision of redemption, and election of some to salvation. The Calvinistic doctrine assumes three forms. (1) Supralapsarianism, or high Calvinism, makes election precede creation — contemplating men as creatable beings. (2) Infralapsarianism, the doctrine of the French school of Saumur, the New School view, makes election follow the provision for a general redemption and its foreseen rejection by mankind — contemplating man as fallen and redeemed. (3) Sublapsarianism, the more common view of the Reformed churches, makes the decree to elect follow that to permit the fall — contemplating man as fallen and needing redemption. Compare ELECTION; ARMINIANISM.

de-creet', 1 dı-krīt'; 2 de-crēt', n. Scots. Law. A final judgment or decree. [< F. décret; see DECREE.] de-cret't.
